THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON,

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

The next day brought heavy weather, and only hardened seagoers were abroad. Armitage, breakfasting late, was not satisfied that he had acted wisely in speaking to Captain Claiborne; but he had, at any rate, eased in some degree his own conscience, and he had every intention of seeing all that he could of Shirley Claiborne during these days of their fellow voyaging.

Chapter VII

ON THE DARK DECK.

"I AM Columbus every time I cross," said Shirley. "What lies out there in the west is an undiscovered country."

"Then I shall have to take the part of the rebellious and doubting crew. There is no America, and we're sure to get into trouble if we don't turn back."

"You shall be clapped into irons and fed on bread and water and turned over to the Indians as soon as we reach land."

"Don't starve me! Let me hang from the yardarm at once or walk the plank. I choose the hour immediately after dinner for my obsequies!"

They were silent for a moment, continuing their tramp. Fair weather was peopling the decks. Dick Claiborne was engrossed with a vivacious California girl, and Shirley saw him only at meals, but he and Armitage held night sessions in the smoking room, with increased liking on both sides.

Armitage saw something of all the Claibornes every day in the pleasant intimacy of ship life, and Hilton Claiborne found the young man an interesting talker. Judge Claiborne is, as every one knows, the best posted American of his time in diplomatic history, and when they were together Armitage suggested topics that were well calculated to awaken the old lawyer's interest.

Shirley and Armitage talked—as people will on shipboard—of everything under the sun. Shirley's enthusiasms were in themselves interesting, but she was informed in the world's larger affairs, as became the daughter of a man who was an authority in such matters, and found it pleasant to discuss them with Armitage. He felt the poetic quality in her. It was that which had first appealed to him, but he did not know that something of the same sort in himself touched her. It was enough for those days that he was courteous and amusing and gained a smile in her eyes from the fact that he had no tangible background.

Then came the evening of the fifth day. They were taking a turn after dinner on the lighted deck. The spring stars hung faint and far through thin clouds, and the wind was keen from the sea. A few passengers were out. The deck stewards went about gathering up rugs and chairs for the night.

"Time oughtn't to be reckoned at all at sea, so that people who feel themselves getting old might sail forth into the deep and defy the old man with the hourglass."

"I like the idea. Such people could become fishers—permanently and grow very wise from so much brain food."

"They wouldn't eat, Mr. Armitage. Brain food forsooth! You talk like a breakfast food advertisement. My idea—mine, please note—is for such fortunate people to sail in pretty little boats with orange tinted sails and pick up lost dreams. I got a hint of that in a pretty poem once—

"Time seemed to pause a little space.
I heard a dream go by."

"But out here in midocean a little boat with lateen sails wouldn't have much show. And dreams passing over—the idea is pretty and is creditable to your imagination. But I thought your fancy was more militant. Now, for example, you like battle pictures," he said. "That was a wonderful collection of military and battle pictures shown in Paris last winter."

She half withdrew her hand from his arm and turned away. The sea winds did not wholly account for the sudden color in her cheeks. She had seen Armitage in Paris—in cafes, at the opera, but not at the great exhibition of the world famous battle pictures, yet undoubtedly he had seen her, and she remembered with instant consciousness the hours of absorption she had spent before those canvases.

"I was in Paris during the exhibition," he said quietly. "Ormsby, the American painter—the man who did the 'High Tide at Gettysburg'—is an acquaintance of mine."

"Oh!"

It was Ormsby's painting that had particularly captivated Shirley. She had returned to it day after day, and the thought that Armitage had taken advantage of her deep interest in Pickett's charging gray line was annoying, and she abruptly changed the subject.

Shirley had speculated much as to the meaning of Armitage's remark at the carriage door in Geneva—that he expected the slayer of the old Austrian prime minister to pass that way. Armitage had not referred to the crime in any way in his talks with her on the King Edward. Their conversations had been pitched usually in a light and frivolous key, or, if one were disposed to be serious, the other responded in a note of levity.

They watched the lights of an eastbound steamer that was passing near. The exchange of rocket signals—that pretty and graceful parley between ships that pass in the night—interested them for a moment. Then the deck lights went out so suddenly it seemed that a dark curtain had descended and shut them in with the sea.

"Accident to the dynamo—we shall have the lights on in a moment!" shouted the deck officer, who stood near, talking to a passenger.

"Shall we go in?" asked Armitage.

"Yes; it is getting cold," replied Shirley.

For a moment they were quite alone on the dark deck, though they heard voices near at hand.

They were groping their way toward the main saloon, where they had left Mr. and Mrs. Claiborne, when Shirley was aware of some one lurking near. A figure seemed to be crouching close by, and she felt its furtive movements and knew that it had passed, but remained a few feet away. Her hand on Armitage's arm tightened.

"What is that? There is some one following us," she said.

At the same moment Armitage, too, became aware of the presence of a stooping figure behind him. He stopped abruptly and faced about.

"Stand quite still, Miss Claiborne."

He peered about, and instantly, as though waiting for his voice, a tall figure rose not a yard from him and a long arm shot high above his head and descended swiftly. They were close to the rail, and a roll of the ship sent Armitage off his feet and away from his assailant. Shirley at the same moment threw out her hands, defensively or for support, and clutched the arm and shoulder of the man who had assailed Armitage. He had driven a knife at John Armitage and was poising himself for another attempt when Shirley seized his arm. As he drew back a fold of his cloak still lay in Shirley's grasp, and she gave a sharp little cry as the figure, with a quick jerk, released the cloak and slipped away into the shadows. A moment later the lights were restored, and she saw Armitage regarding ruefully a long slit in the left arm of his ulster.

"Are you hurt? What has happened?" she demanded.

"It must have been a sea serpent," he replied, laughing.

The deck officer regarded them curiously as they blinked in the glare of light and asked whether anything was wrong. Armitage turned the matter off.

"I guess it was a sea serpent," he said. "It bit a hole in my ulster, for which I am not grateful." Then in a lower tone to Shirley: "That was certainly a strange proceeding. I am sorry you were startled, and I am under greatest obligations to you, Miss Claiborne. Why, you actually pulled the fellow away!"

"Oh, no," she returned lightly, but still breathing hard; "it was the instinct of self preservation. I was unsteady on my feet for a moment and sought something to take hold of. That pirate was the nearest thing, and I caught hold of his cloak. I'm sure it was a cloak, and that makes me sure he was a human villain of some sort. He didn't feel in the least like a sea serpent. But some one tried to injure you—it is no jesting matter"—

"Some lunatic escaped from the steerage probably. I shall report it to the officers."

"Yes; it should be reported," said Shirley.

"It was very strange. Why, the deck of the King Edward is the safest place in the world, but it's something to have had hold of a sea serpent or a pirate! I hope you will forgive me for bringing you into such an encounter, but if you hadn't caught his cloak"—

Armitage was uncomfortable and anxious to allay her fears. The incident was by no means trivial, as he knew. Passengers on the great transatlantic steamers are safeguarded by every possible means, and the fact that he had been attacked in the few minutes that the deck lights had been out of order pointed to an espionage that was both close and daring. He was greatly surprised and more shaken than he wished Shirley to believe. The thing was disquieting enough, and it could not but impress her strangely that he, of all the persons on board, should have been the object of so unusual an assault. He was in the disagreeable plight of having subjected her to danger, and as they entered the brilliant saloon he freed himself of the ulster with its telltale gash and sought to minimize her impression of the incident.

Shirley did not refer to the matter again, but resolved to keep her own counsel. She felt that any one who would accept the one chance in a thousand of striking down an enemy on a steamer deck must be animated by very bitter hatred. She knew that to speak of the affair to her father or brother would be to alarm them and prejudice them against John Armitage, about whom her brother at least had entertained doubts. And it is not reassuring as to a man of whom little or nothing is known that he is menaced by secret enemies.

He scrutinized every name on the passenger list.

The attack had found Armitage unprepared and off guard, but with swift reaction his wits were at work. He at once sought the purser and scrutinized every name on the passenger list. It was unlikely that a steerage passenger could reach the saloon deck unobserved. A second cabin passenger might do so, however, and he sought among the names in the second cabin list for a clew. He did not believe that Chauvenet or Durand had boarded the King Edward. He himself had made the boat only by a quick dash, and he had left those two gentlemen at Geneva with much to consider.

It was, however, quite within the probabilities that they would send some one to watch him, for the two men whom he had overheard in the dark house on the Boulevard Froissart were active and resourceful rascals, he had no doubt. Whether they would be able to make anything of the cigarette case he had stupidly left behind he could not conjecture, but the importance of recovering the packet he had cut from Chauvenet's coat was not a trifle that rogues of their caliber would ignore. There was, the purser said, a sick man in the second cabin, who had kept close to his berth. The steward believed the man to be a continental of some sort, who spoke bad German. He had taken the boat at Liverpool, paid for his passage in gold, and, complaining of illness, retired, evidently for the voyage. His name was Peter Ludovic, and the steward described him in detail.

"That will do," said Armitage, grinning at the ease with which he identified the man.

"You understand that it is wholly irregular for us to let such a matter pass without acting," said the purser.

Head Office: 46 King Street, West TORONTO

The Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Imperial Guarantee & Accident Insurance Company of Canada, was held at the Head Office, 46 King Street West, Toronto, on the 10th inst.

Mr. E. W. Cox, President of the Company, in reviewing the business of the year, made reference to the growing popularity of Accident Insurance, and its effect on the success of the business of the Company during the year. The amount of Insurance written was over $96,270,000.00, an increase of $1,940,000.00 over the business taken out in 1908. This is considered exceptionally satisfactory in view of the fact that the business of the Company is confined to Personal Accident and Guarantee Insurance.

The Gross Income for 1909 amounted to $219,741.76.

That being an increase over the year 1908 of $4,817.34.

The Assets now total $366,974.00, and, after allowing for Reserve for unearned premium calculated on the full Government standard, and all other liabilities, the surplus for the protection of policyholders has increased to $218,447.12.

The following Directors and Officers were elected:

Edward W. Cox, President. Hon. F. T. Frost.

Hands Crack In Winter

Most women know what it is to have sore, cracked hands during the cold weather, and oftentimes eczema and salt rheum has its beginning under these circumstances.

There is nothing so bad for eczema as cold water or going into the cold after having the hands wet. By avoiding these conditions as much as possible and applying Dr. Chase's Ointment frequently you can keep the skin soft, smooth and velvety and prevent the serious forms of skin trouble.

Mr. J. H. Anderson, Chapman, Westmoreland Co., N.B., writes: "For ten years I was troubled in the winters with my hands. The skin used to dry up and break open in cracks round the ends of the fingers, the joints and lines of the hands. These cracks would break into the flesh and bleed and were very painful. No treatment seemed to be of any benefit.

"At last I heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment and obtained relief almost immediately. It took out the soreness softened the skin and with persistent use made a complete cure. It is six years since I used the Ointment and there is no recurrence of the trouble."

There is no treatment obtainable that is so delightfully soothing and healing to inflamed, itching skin as Dr. Chase's Ointment and no preparation which heals so quickly and leaves the skin so soft and velvety. 60 cents a box, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. MEAL RATION FOR DAIRY COWS

From Farm and Dairy.

Can you give me the proper ratio of ground feeds that a cow should get in order to give best results? I feed ground oats and barley and buckwheat, also oil cake, gluten-meal and bran. I feed the meal with the silage night and morning. —Quebec.

I would suggest a mixture of about the following proportions of the feeds you mention. Bran 600 lbs., ground oats 100 lbs., barley 100 lbs., buckwheat 100 lbs., gluten 100 lbs., oil cake meal 200 lbs. If it is not desired to mix all the feeds then the dropping of one or two, or all of the oats, barley and buckwheat will not materially affect the value of the meal ration. If they were all left out then it would be well to add 100 lbs. more of oil cake meal or gluten. If only one of the two gluten or oil cake were to be used, then an amount equal in weight to what was suggested for the two. If gluten feed is meant, that is if material showing less the 30 per cent. protein is meant, then relatively more gluten will be required if oil cake meal were omitted. Feed the mixture at the rate of about one pound of meal to each four pounds milk produced. The meal mixture including all the feeds mentioned is likely to give better results than a meal mixture made of two or three of the materials.—J.H.G.

HASTINGS HAPPENINGS

Examiner Special.

Hastings, March 15.—A very severe thunder storm passed over this section on Sunday evening, lasting about three hours. However, no serious damage is reported.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church are making preparations for the shredded wheat banquet, which is being held here on the 31st of this month.

Mr. Fred Warner has purchased the Wm. English farm, in Asphodel, and intends residing there. Mr. English disposed of his stock, etc., by public auction on Thursday last and is preparing to start for the West in a week or so.

Mr. Mann, of Bridgenorth, has been visiting friends in this section.

Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Doxsee are rejoicing over the birth of a son.

A farewell gathering, which took the form of an oyster supper, was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. English and family on Friday evening last. A large gathering of friends and neighbours assembled and spent a very enjoyable evening together. Mr. and Mrs. English have been life-long residents of this vicinity, having spent their childhood days here, quite near the village, but have decided to move their young family to western Canada. The best wishes of all will follow them.

Mr. John Collins has taken over the town scales at the usual rental of $50.

Some men are busily engaged in setting up the new pumps for use in keeping the basin dry where the new locks are to be built.

Mr. D. Fife and son spent Tuesday of last week in Peterborough.

Mr. E. J. Laing, of Norwood, was in this section on Saturday.

Mrs. Geo. Brooks and family left last week for their new home at Ash, Ont., followed by the best wishes of a host of friends.

Mr. Thos. Richardson is spending a few weeks at Preston Springs.

Mr. P. Buttars left last week for his home at Fort William, after a pleasant visit at his former home, here.

Mrs. C. J. Fisher is in Toronto visiting friends.

Miss Dermady, milliner, has returned to town after spending several weeks at the millinery show rooms, Toronto.

Miss Annie Short of Port Hope, has secured a position in Mr. J. McCarthy's general store here.

The funeral of the late Margaret Carter was held from her late residence on Saturday, March 12, and proceeded to the Trent Valley cemetery for interment. Deceased was in her 64th year and death was due to paralysis.

Mr. and Mrs. Mills of Campbellford, were in town on Sunday.

On Saturday, March 12th, Andrew Fleming passed away at the home of his brother, James. Mr. Fleming formerly resided at High River, Alta., and was here on a visit to friends, when death claimed him as its victim. The bereaved wife and family have the sympathy of a large circle of friends in their sorrow. Interment took place on Monday in the Trent Valley cemetery.

NORTHERN VILLAGE NEWS NUGGETS

Lakefield, March 15th.—Mr. J. E. Kelly, of Peterborough, was in the village on Wednesday last.

Messrs. Allan Glass and Harry Pearce, of T. C. S., Port Hope, were guests at the Pine Grove school over Sunday.

Mr. Wm. Leggott spent a few days last week in Toronto.

Mr. Chas. Morrison, of Plainville, Ont., spent a few days last week in the village visiting his father, Mr. H. Morrison.

Mr. H. LeClair, who has been spending the past few months at his home in Trenton, returned last week to the village.

Miss D. Hincks, of Ingersoll, Ont., is visiting her sister, Mrs. B. Q Dench at "North Douro Lodge."

Mrs. E. R. Tate and daughter left on Saturday last to spend a few weeks in Toronto.

Mr. Roland Johnson was in Toronto last week on business.

The annual meeting of the Lakefield branch of the Women's Auxiliary, was held on Monday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. W. M. Graham. After the reading of the secretary's report and the treasurer's statement and business matters were attended to, solos were sung by Mrs. Marling and Miss Florence Atwood.

Miss Florence Simpson read a very interesting and inspiring paper on missionary work, which was much enjoyed by all present. A very encouraging address was given by the rector upon the progression of missionary work in China and of the great possibilities there for future work. The officers elected for the coming year were as follows:

President—Miss Traill.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. F. J. Sawers.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. T. Watson.
Secretary—Mrs W. M. Graham.
Treasurer—Mrs. Marling.
Literary Secretary—Miss Florence Atwood
Dorcas—Mrs. T. Watson, Mrs. Norrish and Mrs. Edwards.

Mr. Gordon Kline left last week for Renfrew, Ont., where he has secured a good position.

Mrs. Marling was in Peterborough on Saturday last.

On Thursday evening a lecture on "Halley's Comet" was given at the Grove School by Mr. H. Burnham, of Peterborough. The subject was a most interesting one and was listened to with great interest not only by the boys, but all friends of the school who were present. Mr. Burnham was accompanied by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt.

Miss McGregor, of Windsor, is in the village, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Duck.

Mr. Gwylim Dunn, who has been spending the past week in the village left again on Thursday for Cuba where he has spent the winter.

Mrs. F. J. Tate was in Peterborough on Monday.

Rev. S. S. Burns was in Peterborough last week attending a meeting of the presbytery of Peterborough.

Mr. Geo. White left last week for Calgary, Alta., having secured a position with the Calgary cement works.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Tanner spent a few days last week in Toronto.

LET PATRONS DEMAND RIGHT METHODS

Editor, Farm and Dairy: Regarding the question of weighing or measuring the samples of cream for the Babcock tester, I think that it is acknowledged by all who have made comparisons, that weighing is the more accurate method.

We have used the scales in our work for over a year and previous to using the scales we tested our pipettes by weighing 18 grams of cream at various different qualities from 20 to 40 per cent. We had at that time a small scale used for making alkaline solution. On it we could weigh one sample at a time. We found practically no difference when the cream tested between 20 and 30 per cent. Between 30 and 40 per cent. we found a difference of from one to two per cent.—weighing the samples giving the higher tests.

Occasionally we have found a difference in pipettes, so we decided to use the scales altogether. As a result of their use we have had on the average a slightly lower percentage of over-run, due to the higher readings of the tests obtained by weighing. However, that is not the main question. First of all is the question of justice, and justice can be dealt to each and every patron by the honest and careful use of the scales in sampling.

Surely it is not required that the creamerymen of Ontario be compelled to deal justly with their patrons, but rather that just as soon as they are aware of right methods they will adopt them. If there are any creamerymen or patrons who are so blind to their own interests that they will not see, why not let them suffer?

Let the patrons demand up-to-date and right methods and it will be unnecessary to enact laws of compulsion concerning this industry. There is the principle of seeking the best welfare of all to be considered and compulsory and prohibitory laws are often necessary for the best welfare of some who will not or cannot look after their own best interests.—W. The Logical Cure for Sick Headache.

It is a mistake to endure a headache as a necessary affliction. It is equally a mistake to doctor it as simply a headache, for though you may relieve, you cannot cure it that way.

Only in rare cases is a headache caused by anything wrong with the head itself. The trouble lies in some impurity of the blood that irritates the delicate network of nerves and causes the ache. That is why every pulsation pouring in more blood, is so plainly felt.

Lessening the flow of blood to the head by means of a tight compress, an ice-bag, or some drug that acts on the heart and reduces the pulsations, sometimes gives temporary relief. But these measures have absolutely no effect on the blood impurity which was the cause of the whole trouble.

In practically every case this blood impurity would be removed from the system by the bowels, kidneys, skin or lungs, if these were all working right. It is the inactivity of one or more of them that allows the poisons to accumulate in the blood, and the headache is simply a symptom or warning that things are not right.

The way to put them right—to cure the root of the whole matter—is to take Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills. They act directly on the bowels, regulating them—on the kidneys, strengthening and stimulating them—on the skin, opening up the pores—and on the lungs, clearing the delicate membrane of any mucus which may have collected.

When these four great eliminating organs get working properly again all impurities are quickly taken out of the blood, and the unpleasant symptoms, of which the headache is one, disappear—not simply relieved, but cured.

You can take Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills with confidence, for they have a record of over half a century of remarkable cures.

Rev. A. L. Bowers, of Bristol, Tenn., tells how they cured him:

"I want you to know how much good your Indian Root Pills have done for me. I was troubled with terrible headaches and biliousness. I tried several doctors but they did me no good, and for fourteen years I suffered. The use of your pills has made a cure in my case."

ANALYSIS OF
St. Lawrence Sugar
THE STANDARD OF PURITY

Laboratory of Provincial Government Analyst.

MONTREAL, 22nd February, 1909.

I HEREBY CERTIFY that I have drawn by my own hand ten samples of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co's EXTRA STANDARD GRANULATED SUGAR, indiscriminately taken from four lots of about 150 barrels each and six lots of about 450 bags each. I have analyzed same and find them uniformly to contain 99-99/100 to 100 per cent of pure cane sugar, with no impurities whatever.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medical forest plants. THE PEARL NECKLACE and the LYNX MUFF

By Rita Weiman

An engaging narrative depicting two widely diverse sides in the life of "Miss Bentleigh, Professional Shopper," showing how happenings from each combined in one tense, anxious climax. The series is written especially for these pages by Rita Weiman.

THERE was merely polite and perfunctory interest shown when Jane Harmon lost her pearl necklace at the Hamilton Warrens' annual ball. Every year just before Lent Jane's jewels had a habit of disappearing. Either her husband tired of seeing her natural beauty rivalled, or she had wearied of the settings, or the Harmons were going abroad and didn't want to be bothered with the responsibility of a well stocked jewel case. At the end of each season another story was forthcoming, while a very exclusive Fifth avenue jeweller who displayed in his windows only a few choice and extravagant bits could have opened his safe and exhibited to your astonished eyes a fine assortment of precious stones on which he was kind enough to advance his aristocratic patrons the price of a summer abroad.

So when Jane, her hand clutching her throat where the necklace had rested, rushed up to Alicia Warren and poured forth a hysterical tale of loss, Mary Hunt swept toward me, eyebrows on their way to meet her severe pompadour.

"Have you heard the latest?" she remarked, significantly. "Jane Harmon has just lost a pearl necklace."

Harry Richards, with whom I'd been sitting out a dance, gave a ladylike giggle. "I thought it was about time for somethin' to happen," he observed, rising to lean wearily against the wall as Mary took his place.

"Harry," I admonished, "you ought to be ashamed of yourself—having so little faith in human nature. How do you know she hasn't really lost it?"

I had reason to sympathize with any one forced to subterfuge. One can't be Granby & Co.'s professional shopper by day and a professional butterfly in the social swirl after dark without understanding something of the necessities of a Jekyll-Hyde manner of life.

Mary Hunt answered for Harry. "Lost it!" she laughed. "Does one lose a necklace in the open spaces of a ballroom and have it suddenly disappear as if by magic? She had it, she says, at the beginning of the last dance, and at the end it was gone."

Just then Jane hurried past. There was real anxiety in her eyes.

"See here, aren't we a bit unfair?" I interposed. "The strangest accidents often happen, and no way to account for them. Give her the benefit of the doubt anyway. She looks worried enough."

But in my heart I agreed with the others. The makeshift was too obvious. Besides, my experience as a shopper had done much to develop my bump of suspicion. One can't trot around all day from store to store, always fearing detection, covering the evidences of one's trade from shopkeepers and friends alike, without growing suspicious as well as wary.

The search for Jane's necklace, however, was politely continued throughout the night and well into the early morning. It was still on at three o'clock, when, footsore as a shopping tour could never have made me, I trailed into the conservatory and sent Gordy Spence to find some punch for me. There was a picturesque though uncomfortable iron bench set under a gigantic palm. I sank onto it, considering what bliss it would be to stay there until the hour to report on duty at Granby & Co.'s.

The place was restfully deserted. Even the music filtered faintly through the veil of foliage. I wished lazily that Gordy would forget to come back. Where was the use of a man in this Eden peace?

Slowly my head dropped until it rested almost on my own shoulder. Then swiftly I sat upright. Wriggling from under the chiffon of my skirt as though to reconnoitre came a serpentine coil of pearls. I stared fascinated, unable to move—the snake in Eden must have been made of jewels.

At last I stooped wonderingly. How extraordinary that it had not been found long ago! But as I caught one end in my hand there was the protest of tearing lace, and to my amazement I discovered the diamond clasp securely attached to my underskirt. I had been dancing about all evening with Jane Harmon's pearl necklace fastened to me!

I gave a little laugh as I disentangled the softly

insidious thing from its meshes and held it in the palm of my hand. An answering rustle broke the silence and I looked up, expecting to find Gordy a ready listener. Instead a man quite strange to me was gazing intently through the palms. His dark eyes, shadowed by shaggy brows, were bent upon the necklace in my hand. My glance met him; he started toward me. But I gave his apparent interest no further thought as, without waiting for Gordy, I hurried to Alicia Warren with my find.

The story went the rounds for weeks afterward. It inspired such renewed confidence in Jane that before she went abroad she was able to place her valuable assortment under the protection of the exclusive Fifth avenue jeweller without the usual explanation.

For me, however, the incident was merely the preface to a larger and far less agreeable experience.

It was toward the end of March, when New York women inconstantly keep on good terms with both summer and winter by combining heavy furs with straw hats. I was as much a flirt as the rest of my kind. My velvet turban had gracefully retired in favor of a jaunty mauve sailor straight from Paris, yet I still snuggled comfortably in furs. A muff always proved convenient to carry such articles as I bought from Granby & Co. and had to take with me.

One mild day I dropped into Rose Brothers' to look up some real lace advertised that morning. The balm of early spring in the air had made my neckpiece cling damply, and I let it slip to my shoulders as I made the rounds. My muff was decidedly in my way. I found a place for it on the counter covered with lace and turned to examine the stock in which my firm was particularly interested. Rose Brothers had lately formed a habit of underselling us, even in the lines of which Granby made a specialty, and we meant to put a stop to it if possible.

The Accusation.

There was the usual bargain-mad crowd, and the inevitable woman beside me pushing impatiently as though every piece of lace I took up were hers by natural rights. I looked leisurely over the display, convinced finally that the Mechlin and Irish, Point de Venise and d'Alençon were neither better nor cheaper than those Granby carried in regular stock. It would be easy enough for us to arrange a similar sale with a cut of a cent or two per yard and no loss.

The woman at my side poked an indignant arm into me. I gave her the benefit of a stare that took in a face as sharp as her elbow. Then I picked up my muff and walked away.

At the turn of the aisle leading to an elevator a man planted himself suddenly before me. But I sent only a cursory glance in his direction and took a step out of the way. Still, though unostentatiously, I found him in my path.

"Better come quietly," came sotto voce. "No use making a fuss. This time you're fairly caught."

I looked up in astonishment. The man's face, with its heavy blackness of eye and brows, was oddly familiar, yet I could not place him. "Were you speaking to me?" I asked.

"Speaking to you," he affirmed decisively. "Are you coming?"

"What is it you want?" I fenced, fearing he might be connected with Rose Brothers and on the lookout to spot the shopper of a rival firm.

"I want to speak to you in a private room instead of the aisle. It will be more satisfactory all round."

"But there must be some mistake"—— Then realising that I had my dignity to rely upon, I drew myself to my full height, though it by no means enabled me to look down on him. "Do you know that this is an impertinence"—— I turned away.

Again I found him facing me. "Now, look here; if you attempt to leave the store, you'll be arrested outright."

"Ar"—— I gasped, unable to finish the word.

"Better come quietly," he interpolated. "I'll explain." But there was a sneer on his lips.

I followed dazedly. When we reached a little room that seemed filled with men I dropped weakly into a chair. The man who had brought me beat and took the muff hanging from my hand, while I stared, absolutely incapable of taking in the enormity of it all. Then my eyes bulged unbelieving, for he was drawing forth, like a prestidigitator from the depths of nowhere yards of real lace, Mechlin, Irish, Point de Venise and d'Alencon.

"Why," I managed to breathe, "that's not my muff. How does it happen"——

The Detective.

The heavy browed one, still busily extracting lace from unmeasured depths, gave a grin of understanding. "I thought as much," he vouchsafed to the others. "I knew she'd have an excuse on tap."

I felt myself going pale and rose unsteadily. "How dare you!" I exclaimed, though scarcely above a whisper. "Do you mean to say you don't believe I picked up that muff by mistake?"

For some reason the man was openly malicious. "I mean to say it." He laid the heap of lace on a table and faced me. "I mean to say that this time I've got you."

"This time?" I repeated wonderingly.

"Hm—it's inconvenient to remember, eh?" Then he addressed himself to the others. "Before I came here," he explained, "I used to do duty looking after jewelry at Fifth avenue balls. Over a month ago a pearl necklace was lost at one of them. It couldn't be found. At about three A. M. I went into the conservatory. This young woman was sitting alone behind a lot of palms. I saw her look around to make sure no one was there, then she stooped in a hurry and took the pearl necklace from where it was hidden in the lining of her skirt. I moved nearer to get her where she couldn't escape me. I must have made a noise. She looked up, frightened enough, saw me and knew in a second her game was up. Before I could snap my fingers she was out of a side door. I hurried after, saw her go up to the hostess and turn in the necklace without waiting for me to hand over my information. She got away from me that time by saying she had found the thing stuck to her underskirt. A likely story—but they believed her." He looked toward me in open hostility.

Oh, yes, I remembered him now—the shaggy brows bent on me so intently that night at Alicia Warren's. A detective! And what an interpretation he had put on my innocent find! A trained bloodhound, he seemed to be thirsting for prey.

I tried to keep calm, knowing that any sign of the terror I felt would only tell against me. "You are—absolutely—mistaken," my voice trembled. "I no more stole that necklace than I took this lace."

"Kleptomania, I suppose," he jeered. "Didn't know you were taking it, perhaps. Don't let her fool you, gentlemen," he added; "I followed her from the minute she came in this morning. She stopped at every counter in the store and hasn't bought a thing. I'm surprised she didn't have something beside lace in that muff."

I opened my lips to speak. I might easily show my cards, tell them the secret so carefully guarded—that I was a shopper for another store, here to look over their stock and make notes. But would that be of any use? It might account for my stopping at the various counters without buying; could it explain away the muff so like my own, save for its burden of laces?

I ignored the detective and turned to the other men. At first blurred glance they had seemed a multitude. Now they resolved themselves into individuals, four in number.

"I am entirely at your mercy," I said slowly. "You have every reason to suspect, accuse—arrest me even." I shuddered over the word. "I can only repeat—it is all a horrible mistake. I came here this morning to look at your laces, and on my way to the counter did stop at several others"——

I sent him a grateful glance. "I laid my muff, a black lynx very like this one, on the counter, and when I left picked it up as I thought"——

Clearing the Mystery.

"Yes," I admitted desperately. Then I went all a-tremble. I sank into the chair again. "Oh, won't you believe me?" I moaned. "You see, I can't even conceal my identity from you. My card is in my purse, and my purse"—I sat up suddenly—"my purse is in my own muff! The woman to whom this belongs must have it."

At that instant the man who had appeared sympathetic was called to the door. I looked longingly after him as he stepped into the outer office. But he came back presently, a curious glint in his eyes.

I had dipped nervously into a description of my property. "It is cardcase and purse combined, black seal with gold corners." I hurried through the details, even including a book of "papier poudré" reserved for my nose in shining moments.

"And the muff?" questioned the young man who had just returned.

"Lynx, like this." I hesitated. The evidence was surely against me. "Except"—I had hastily turned over the muff as it lay on the table—"except that the lining of mine is black brocade, while this is satin and has a pocket inside"——

"Just a minute." The young man was at the door, knob in hand. "Don't do anything," he said to the others, "until I get back."

"Herb," called one of them—he was short, with bald head, sidewhiskers and kind eyes that proudly followed the younger man—"your gallantry will be your undoing." Yet he stopped the detective, who was about to launch forth again, and we waited in silence, tense and terrible to me.

Dread visions of a courtroom, relentless magistrate and all the consequent notoriety, without even the prospect of having my innocence proved, held me struggling in their grip. My brain was numb. I could have struck my head against the plaster wall and felt no pain.

If only I had bought things, plenty of them, the detective's doubt of me might have been dispelled in spite of that pearl necklace. But the professional shopper sees much and buys little—as little as possible. Her path had not been one of luxurious ease—for me. Would it lead to the police court?

I held hard to the arms of my chair as the door opened. Then I heaved a prolonged sigh. The man who entered was smiling—a smile of satisfaction very different from the one that had appeared when the lace revealed itself. He came in hurriedly and under his arm nestled a muff—my own. He held it out to me.

"We owe Miss Bentleigh an apology," he said, looking at one of my cards in his hand. "The other woman was still at it, stuffing laces into this muff without knowing that it was not her own. They caught her."

The detective grunted. "I guess I know my business. This one's an accomplice, then. I know the game. She's a sly one, too." Belligerently he took the defensive. "If you don't make the charge I will."

The young man came gallantly to my side, and I breathed a little prayer of thanks for my russet hair and not bad eyes. "If you do," he observed pointedly, "you lose your job."

Then he gave a courtly bow and opened the door for me.

ONE SHREWD COLLECTOR OF DEBTS.

New York, Saturday.

Of collecting debts there are many ways. Undoubtedly one of the most novel on record was tried in a Broadway car.

A well dressed woman came into the car at Nineteenth street. When the conductor called for her fare she gave him a five dollar bill. He put the usual question about smaller change and she gave the usual negative reply. The situation was unpleasant for both, especially for the conductor. Obviously she was such a fine lady that to put her off the car for non-payment of fare would be to invite his own downfall, and he could not afford to risk that. He looked at the men who stood near with urgent appeal for nickels in his eyes, but those unchivalrous strap-hangers were inured to the woes of the woman who travels with five dollar bills as her smallest change and declined to respond.

The woman got nervous. "What shall I do?" she asked.

"Perhaps I can find somebody who has change for the bill," said the conductor.

He sounded several persons on the subject, but they proved to be short of funds themselves that day and could not accommodate him. Presently a woman up near the front of the car took a hand in the proceedings.

"I think I have the change," she said.

At the sound of her voice the owner of the five dollar bill turned with a startled air and blushed deeply.

"You need not bother about the change," she said to the conductor. "I will get off at the next corner, anyway."

The conductor said "Very well" and reached out his hand for the bill, but the woman had already tucked it into her pocketbook and had counted out fifty cents in nickels and dimes.

"Here," she said; "give this to her and tell her I have kept out the $4.50 she has owed me for the last year and a half."

The conductor looked from one woman to the other helplessly.

"Give it to her," was the supplementary command. "She'll take it. She knows better than to raise a row."

He tendered the fifty cents to the well dressed woman gingerly. She picked forty-five cents out of his palm and started toward the door.

"You mean old thing!" she said to her satisfied creditor. And then she left the car followed by the astonished gaze of two score of passengers.

PRESCRIBING A REMEDY.

A PHILADELPHIA surgeon not unknown to fame and at times displaying both a playful and a caustic humor was once pestered by a very wealthy patient. The patient, who persisted in wearing exceedingly tight boots, had consequent troubles with his toes and corns. The continual consultations finally got on the surgeon's nerves. One day the man of wealth, having some vague idea that he was becoming a nuisance, said, "I guess I'm making an ass of myself over my feet."

Whereupon the surgeon replied, "Yes, I was about to advise you to consult a blacksmith."

But the patient, who was exceedingly amiable and liked a laugh, even if it were at his own expense, simply laughed—and laughed immoderately. The surgeon didn't share his mirth. And after that the visits of the man with the corns became more frequent and the surgeon, who felt that now the joke was on him, hesitated between simply telling the wealthy man to cease his visits and hurling him out of the window.

"Your troubles," he said, "are entirely due to tight boots, as I have told you a dozen times, and I can't see why you will persist in consulting me." Then, as a sudden thought came to him, he said, "Take them off—stockings also."

"Not at all," was the reply; "they feel first rate."

"Very well, then," was the final advice, "you had better always go like that—then you won't be obliged to consult me so often. Good day."

LEGAL PEARL AND THE SWINE.

THE young Alabama attorney had been only a few months in practice—and it was not much practice at that—yet he was a very important person in his own estimation. No man could walk with the conscious dignity he possessed and still have a mean opinion of himself. It was a walk that combined the best elements of carriage of both the tragedian and the statesman. It took on added impressiveness when attended by peg cut trousers, pearl overgaiters, Senatorial frock coat and soft felt hat. Also was the attorney something of a good looker. The local weekly had referred to him as a "forensic Apollo" and he did not demand a retraction or threaten to sue for libel.

A negro from a remote plantation was taken to the county seat charged with horse stealing and the Court selected the young lawyer to defend him.

"I shall be pleased to take the case, Your Honor," said the legal light, and with his most impressive stride he went toward the prisoner, who looked at him with mouth agape and moon wide eyes.

"Jes' bo' on a minnit, boss," said the black man, holding up his hand. The lawyer paused and then the prisoner turned to the deputy sheriff who arrested him and whom he knew quite well, saying:—"I dunno about dis yeah law pufessor. A man dat has a walk like 'im sartin ain't got no use for a hoss an' he doan' know nuffin 'bout a hoss, fur he'd nebber ride or drive a hoss w'en he's got dose legs to walk as he walks."

That settled it. Sam turned and addressed the Judge directly. "You'se ve'y kind, Mistah Jedge," he said, "but I jus' allow I doan' want de lawyer. De las' time I got in de pententiay I had a gemman dat look jes' lak him defen' me. So jes' leab him outen de case and gimme ten years."

TREES THAT WHISTLE MUSIC.

POETS have told how the wind made music in the trees and recently returned visitors from the West Indies have adduced facts to show that the poetic fancy is actually a thing of undisputed fact in Barbadoes. It is the musical or whistling tree, having a peculiar shaped leaf and pods with a split open edge. The wind passing through these sends out the sounds which give the tree its peculiar name.

In Barbados there is a valley filled with the trees and when the trade winds blow across the island a constant, moaning, deep toned whistle is heard from it which in the still hours of the night has a very weird and unpleasant effect.

A species of acacia which grows very abundantly in the Soudan is also called the whistling tree by the natives. Its shoots are frequently, by the agency of the larvae of insects, distorted in shape and swollen into a globular bladder from one to two inches in diameter. After the insect has emerged from a circular hole in the side of this swelling the opening, played upon by the wind, becomes a musical instrument equal in sound to a sweet toned flute.

"IT SEEMED LIKE THROWING MONEY AWAY

Until I Tried Gin Pills."

Mr. P. Fitzgerald was completely disheartened. He had suffered so long with his Kidneys, and spent so much money on doctors without relief, that he had made up his mind he could not be cured.

Then, he chanced to read about the wonderful cures by Gin Pills, the great Kidney Remedy, and sent for a sample. The pills did him so much good that he immediately bought two full size boxes. And these two boxes of Gin Pills made him feel like another man.

Provincial Asylum, Orillia
June 18th.

I have much pleasure in stating that the sample, which you sent me, led me to buy two boxes of Gin Pills from a local druggist. They are the best remedy for Uric Acid Trouble that I have ever tried. I must say that before using Gin Pills, I had undergone a long and expensive course of treatment by eminent specialists of Chicago. They did me no good—it seemed like throwing money away.

I still keep a box of Gin Pills on hand and take one occasionally. I am pleased to recommend them and bear testimony to their efficacy.

P. FITZGERALD.

After reading such a letter as this, you simply can't doubt the value of Gin Pills in cases of Kidney and Bladder Trouble. If you are a sufferer, write the National Drug & Chemical Co. Dept. B. Toronto, for a free sample of Gin Pills and try them at our expense. After you have seen for yourself just what Gin Pills will do, buy the full size box at your dealer's, and remember that Gin Pills are sold with a positive guarantee of a cure or money refunded. 17

ENTERTAINMENT AT PINE GROVE

Examiner Special.

Pine Grove, March 15.—The entertainment and social held here last Friday evening, the 11th inst., under the auspices of the "Farmers' Club," proved the most successful ever held at Pine Grove and was enjoyed by a large gathering from near and far.

The commodious hall, owned by Mr. Robert Little, was comfortably fitted up for the occasion, and no little effort was made to entertain and accommodate all who came. A debate "Resolved that selling the grain off the farm was more profitable to the farmer than feding the grain on the farm," occupied a large part of the evening's programme, and which was listened to with interest. The leaders, namely, Messrs. R. Darling and Mr. Hunter for the affirmative and negative, respectively, deserve credit for the manner in which each presented and defended their case. They are amateurs in the business, and did remarkably well. They were assisted by A. C. Carveth, for the affirmative, and Mr. W. H. Downs of the negative. At the close of the debate, and after every point had been thoroughly threshed out the case was referred to the three judges, who, after a lengthy consultation, brought in a verdict in favour of the affirmative.

The next in order was a sumptuous lunch, which had been prepared by the ladies of the neighbourhood and others, and in which all quite readily indulged to the satisfaction of their various appetites. Well, some were reminded of Christmas time.

Mr. Fred Richardson, of Lakefield, was present, and furnished the musical part of the programme with his gramaphone, and all were delighted with the excellent music rendered.

Pine Grove is certainly becoming famous, and any one wishing to spend a jolly and profitable evening should not fail to attend their meetings, notice of which will be given in due time.

Next meeting will be held on March 25th, and any who are wishing to enjoy a treat should attend as there will be another debate "Resolved that the farmers make more money from their dairy cows than from their beef cattle."

CREAMERY WORK IN EASTERN ONTARIO

From Farm and Dairy.

J. F. Singleton, Creamery Instructor, Kingston

The creameries which I have visited during the past season are situated largely in the counties of Ontario and Victoria.

The make for 1909 was about the same as that of the previous season, some creameries showing a slight increase in make, while others show a slight falling off. The average selling price of butter for the season was slightly lower than that of 1908.

My work and time during the past season has been entirely under the direction of the chief dairy instructor, Mr. Publow, and I visited the creameries at such times as instructed to do so by him. In all I spent about 60 days on creamery work, travelling, calling on creameries and creamery patrons.

The butter, as a rule, has, in my judgment, been fairly well made during the past season. In a few creameries there was some slight unevenness of color in the first few days' make, but otherwise the work, as far as was within control of the maker, was usually well done. The flavor of the butter was not all that is desired, but in only one creamery, as far as I know, has there been any serious trouble in this respect. About 55 samples of butter were tested for moisture content, and showed an average of 13.63 per cent. The moisture content usually ranges between 12.5 per cent. and 15.5 per cent. In three of the samples tested the moisture content exceeded the legal limit of 16 per cent.

THE ABILITIES OF MAKERS

The makers are, as a rule, quite competent men, men who in many cases own the creamery they are managing, and have had a long experience in the business. Of the 16 I visited, seven were dairy school graduates, four had attended a dairy school, but had not graduated, and five had not attended any dairy school. The two or three men of the 16 whom I consider poor men are included in the last five, and these men should take some steps to make themselves more proficient in their work.

The creameries are generally clean and sanitary, with good water and good drainage. Two of the creameries installed septic tanks during the past season, both of which are giving excellent satisfaction. Of the 16 creameries I visited, 13 are equipped with concrete floors. The refrigerators are the weakest part of the creamery equipment, and in many cases should be improved, as not over five of the 16 creameries have suitable refrigerators. As nearly all our creameries are now operated on the cream-gathering plan, the hauler's outfit may be considered as a part of the creamery equipment.

HAULING OUTFITS

Two of the creameries use individual cans, one only is using the tanks, and 13 are using the jacketed cans, which are, except at one creamery, in very good condition. The individual can has much to commend it, as the creamery manager has an opportunity to examine each patron's cream, and usually a better raw material is secured when delivered in individual cans.

One creamery provides tarpaulin covers to protect the gathering cans from sun, rain and dust, and this is something with which every cream waggon should be provided.

Practically all of the cream is collected only twice a week. It would be better were it collected three times each week, yet it appears that the business must expand in the average creamery before it will be profitable to gather oftener than twice a week. Cream can be delivered sweet and in good condition and only gathered twice a week if a fairly heavy cream is separated and properly cooled.

LABOR—FARM VS. CITY

From Farm and Dairy.

The farm labor problem so far as the laborer is concerned is dependent much upon the point of view. It depends upon his idea of what constitutes success. If the prime object of a man's life is pleasure, such pleasure as comes from idle hours, then the farm, under ordinary circumstances, ill compares with the brighter side of life in cities. If one seeks pleasure, that kind derived from the satisfaction of work well done, from health, from a good living and from what in years turns out to be a competence—property and a substantial income, then the farm stands peer above all callings.

The labor problem discussed unfairly by "Subscriber" in Farm and Dairy, March 3rd, is well answered this week by "Countryman." Any one not firm in his own mind as to the comparative opportunities of farm and city workers should ponder well the points raised by "Countryman." The farm rightly managed has in the past upheld its own. Prospects for farming were never brighter than they are to-day. A brilliant future awaits young farmers. With proper application of the information that is available pertaining to their work and life, the chances are all in favor of successful realisation of their ideals.

FOR BABY'S SKIN TROUBLES

There are times in the life of nearly every child when Dr. Chase's Ointment proves itself a blessing. The tender skin chafes and is irritated by the clothing. Oftentimes baby eczema developes from this very cause. In a dozen ways Dr. Chase's Ointment can be used to sooth and heal the skin and prevent suffering of the little one. No treatment is so well suited for this purpose and none is so entirely satisfactory.

SUGAR MAKING WILL BE GOOD THIS YEAR

Mr. John McGee has ceased hauling owing to the bad conditions of the roads.

Miss Dora Byrne was in town Saturday on important business and remained over until Sunday.

Mr. William Curtin has returned home, and intends hiring with Mr. Thomas Morgan for the summer.

Mr. Charlie Doherty was the guest of Miss Nora Collins last Sunday.

Mr. Will Dolan was over at Mr. Mich. Chevers on Saturday, transacting business.

Miss Eva Morgan and Mr. Frank Baker were the guests of Miss Lila Mitchell on Sunday.

Mrs. M. Mansfield who has been living in Alberta for the last two years has returned home.

Mr. Fred Dettman, who has been jobbing for the Cavendish Lumber Co. in Anstruther, has moved out to Kinmount.

Mr. Patrick Collins states very poor sleighing around Union Creek settlement.

Mr. Alex. Coben and Mr. Lester Orleston intend going West in the near future.

Mr. M. Cain was the guest of Mr. John Kennettle last Sunday.

Mr. Wm. Coffe was up at Mr. Joe Russell's the other day on duty.

The Canadian Order of Foresters intend holding a ball in Kinmount on the 17th of March, and as usual, expect a very large crowd.

GRASSES FOR LOW LYING LAND

From Farm and Dairy.

I have about 15 acres of low lying hay land; at present it is in slough grass, but seems to be seeding itself down to red top, which grows well here. This land is quite wet in the high water time, it is under water for about a month, and as the water recedes, the land gets dryer, and in the fall is in a condition to break. Please tell me what would be the best grass seed or seeds to sow to it. Since it is under water in the spring, I take it oats would be impossible as a nurse crop. Would it be possible to sow in the fall after breaking and discing well to some seed that might eradicate the roots of the slough grass. Timothy does fine here but this ground seems almost too wet for this grass; water does not seem to hurt red top, but there are probably other grasses that would suit better, and I would like to know if it would take root on fresh breaking? How long should timothy be good for, cutting for hay in summer and pasturing stock in fall, and feeding part of the crop of hay to stock in winter? Stable manure is ungettable in any quantity.—A. W .W., B.O.

The land in question I would advise you to treat as follows: As soon as conditions will permit next summer, say in August, after you have pastured for a time or cut the hay, plow with a moderately shallow furrow, say five inches deep. Roll and disc alternately till in good tilth. Work at intervals during the fall and in October ridge up with double mould board plow. If not possible to handle in this way, then plow again with a slightly deeper, well made up furrow, say six instead of five inches deep and leave all winter. The next summer as soon as you can get on the land, that is of course, when it is fit to work, break down by means of disc or spring tooth harrow, work thoroughly and seed to grass without nurse crop.

As grass seed mixture is likely to give best results I would suggest alsike clover, three lbs.; timothy, two lbs.; orchard grass, two lbs.; and red top, 12 lbs. an acre. If the red top is in the chaff then double the quantity. Mix the different kinds of seeds thoroughly together, divide the quantity into two equal parts and sow half lengthwise and the other half crosswise of the piece of land. After seeding, harrow with very light harrow, or with a brush harrow and roll if the ground is dry.

Timothy meadow well looked after will last indefinitely. I know of one timothy meadow 40 years old. It has been pastured more or less each fall. To keep in good shape for any length of time an occasional application of barn yard manure is absolutely necessary. Be careful not to pasture too closely in fall.—J. H. Grisdale, Agriculturist., C.E.F., Ottawa.

Everyone Thought She Was Going Into Consumption.

Gained Ten Pounds in Two Weeks by the Use of Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mrs. Fred. Biggs, Kingston, Ont., writes:—"I was completely run down, my blood was out of order, and I used to get so weak I would be compelled to stay in bed for weeks at a time. I could not eat, was pale and thin; every one thought I was going into consumption. I tried everything and different doctors until a friend advised me to use Burdock Blood Bitters. I did not have one bottle used when my appetite began to improve. I used six bottles. I gained ten pounds in two weeks. When I began to take it I only weighed ninety-three pounds. It just seemed to pull me from the grave as I never expected to be strong again. I will tell every sufferer of your wonderful medicine."

The blood reaches every portion of the body to distribute nutriment and remove effete matter and waste products. Clearly then, any influence, good or bad, affecting the blood, must necessarily affect the entire system for good or evil as the case may be.

Get pure blood and keep it pure by removing every trace of impure morbid matter from the system by using Burdock Blood Bitters. It exerts a curative influence unapproached by any other remedy.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Dull—Hogs Steady to Lower at United States Points.

LONDON, March 17.—Liverpool and London cables quote live cattle (American) steady, at 12c to 14½c, dressed weight; refrigerator beef lower, at 10¾c to 10¾c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, March 17.—The railways reported 133 carloads of live stock at the City Yards for Wednesday and Thursday, consisting of 1698 cattle, 3975 hogs, 616 sheep and 135 calves.

Exporters.

The only export cattle bought on this market for export purposes were bulls, which were reported slow sale at $4.50 to $5.40, with few selling over $5.2½.

Butchers.

Geo. Rowntree, who has been the heaviest purchaser of butcher cattle, all week, bought over 1200 cattle, more than half of this class on sale, for the Harris Abattoir Co., reports prices as follows: Steers and heifers, $5 to $5.50; cows, $2 to $5; bulls at $4 to $5.40. Outside of those he bought several lots of Easter quality cattle at $6.25 to $7 per cwt.

Stockers and Feeders.

Harry Murby reports that owing to the slight slump in butchers' cattle, he was enabled to get about 20 steers, light stockers, 800 lbs. each, and feeders, 1000 lbs. each. Mr. Murby paid from $5.25 to $5.15 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

The market for milkers and springers failed to develop the same strength of a few weeks ago. Few, if any, cows reached the $60 mark and the bulk sold under the $50 mark and as low as $30.

Veal Calves.

Not more than one per cent. of the calves were properly fed and finished. Prices ranged from $3 to $8 per cwt., and McDonald & Halligan sold one Easter calf 225 lbs. at $10 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts continue light, with prices firm; ewes, $5.50 to $6.25; culls and rams, $4.50 to $5.50; lambs, $6 to $9 per cwt.

Hogs.

Hog prices have been climbing higher and higher all week until the $7.50 mark was reached in three instances that were reported. Some of these were deals on loads reported at $9.75 f.o.b. cars at country points, which means $60 fed and watered at the market. The bulk of the hogs were bought at $9.40 to $9.70 f.o.b. cars at country points judging from reports for Wednesday and Thursday.

All British Trade Mark.

London, March 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—At the final meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce a resolution was adopted in favor of training in arms the youth of the Empire.

Representative business men and manufacturers decided to form an association to suppress methods adopted by foreigners who pass off their goods as British. The first step taken will be the adoption of an "all British trade mark.

J. M. Clark in London.

London, March 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Yesterday J. M. Clark, K.C., Toronto, spoke at the luncheon of the Imperial Co-operation League on "Canada and the Navy." A notable company was present, including Lord Strathcona and the Earl of Enslow, who regretted Mr. Brodeur's illness. He said Brodeur had mastered the naval situation.

Nearly Triple Drowning.

Ottawa, March 18.—Miss Walters and Mrs. Oxley, both daughters of John Walters, farmer of Eardley, had a narrow escape from drowning while crossing on the ice between Marith and Aylmer. The sleigh coming to a large crack in the ice, the horse became balky. The driver applied the whip, when the horse plunged furiously and the ice gave way. The driver managed to get out and was successful in rescuing the two ladies.

One Hundred Dollars Reward

The manufacturers of SALVIA, the new American Hair Grower, offer one hundred dollars' reward to any one who can prove that SALVIA contains any injurious ingredient. SALVIA at once stops the itching of the scalp; will positively grow hair or money back. Is guaranteed to kill the Dandruff germ. Ladies of taste prefer SALVIA to any other hair dressing, as it is a non-sticky, daintily perfumed hair tonic and dressing.

Hair is made beautifully soft and wavy. SALVIA has an enormous sale. We know of no other hair dressing and grower that is sold with a guarantee.

SALVIA contains Henna and Sage. Restores dead hair to life. Short, harsh, brittle hair is made long, soft and sparkling with life, which adds beauty to the appearance of every lady. McDermid and Jury will refund your money if it fails.

Virtue Rewarded.

Ottawa, March 18.—As a result of the investigation into the McMillan diamond robbery of last summer by the police commissioners, Chief Detective Dicks was yesterday reduced to the rank of sergeant, while Sergt. E. Joliat was promoted to the rank of detective. Detective Thomas Ryan succeeds Dicks as chief of detectives.

Minister Stops Runaway.

Belleville, March 18.—Rev. A. L. Green, an Anglican minister, of this city, yesterday stopped a runaway team, which was just dashing over the lower bridge on to Front street. He seized the lines and hung on after he was thrown down and dragged for some distance. His shoulder was dislocated.

Ferry Boat In Strike.

Buffalo, N.Y., March 18.—The ferry boat Niagara, plying between Buffalo and Canada, is tied up at her dock to-day, as the result of a strike on the part of the crew, following the discharge of the boat's master, Wm. McMurray, by the Ferry Company.

Protection of Seal Herds.

Washington, D.C., March 18.—The reference of a bill prohibiting the killing of seal on and adjacent to the Pribylof Islands, in the Pacific, precipitated a heated debate in the Senate yesterday, during which Senator Post vigorously objected to the matter going to the committee on conservation of national resources.

Mr. Root said that negotiations with Great Britain were in progress at present, which rendered it most important that the foreign affairs committee should continue to exercise its supervision. He said that necessarily Canada must be consulted, as must also Japan and Russia and other countries.

Parted by Death Only One Hour.

Belleville, Ont., March 18.—The death occurred here yesterday morning one hour apart of two prominent citizens, brother and sister, in the person of John R. Brower and his sister Miss Jane Brower. Mr. Brower was for years treasurer of the Township of Sydney. He was the best-known cheese exporter in the district.

INSURANCE BILL.

Hon. Mr. Fielding's Measure Gets Its First Reading.

Ottawa, March 18.—When the House met last night, Hon. Mr. Fielding introduced the insurance bill, which was given a first reading.

In view of the fact that the House has already dealt with this bill, consideration will largely be confined to the amendments which have been made by the Upper Chamber.

Mr. Beauparlant introduced a bill which aims at making the salary of civil servants attachable. He argued that men earning large salaries in the service should be made pay their debts if corporation laborers earning a dollar a day were compelled to do so.

Major Currie introduced a bill to amend the Railway Act. He said that the bill compelling trains to slow down at crossings was such a nuisance that it should be amended. The bill provided that the trains need not slow down unless the railway commission issues an order to that effect.

Unrevised official returns compiled by the customs department show that for the ten months preceding Feb. 1, 1910, Canada exported to the United States goods to the value of $94,643,542. During the same time Canada imported from the United States goods to the value of $179,723,510.

Of this amount $94,497,064 worth came in under the general tariff, and $84,880,795 worth was on the free list.

The Banking and Commerce Committee of the Commons finally passed yesterday morning F. D. Monk's bill in respect to co-operative credit societies, with the addition of two important amendments, providing that every society organized shall establish and maintain a guarantee fund securing deposits made with it, and also providing that every society shall pay into the fund at least ten per cent. of the profits until such fund shall equal the maximum amount held in deposit.

The bills incorporating the Weyburn Security Bank and the Sovereign Trust Co. of Vancouver were reported.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Contracts for the Australian Dreadnoughts are being placed on the Clyde; they are to be 28 knot speed.

Birse, a Toronto cabinet-maker, who was stopped by immigration officers at Buffalo, while on his way to take a job at Rochester, was yesterday deported.

Because of the big sleet storm last November in Eastern Ontario, which made breaks in the tree limbs, the maple syrup crop in that section is seriously affected.

Mme. Donalda, the Canadian prima donna, is now in New York, on her way from Europe, to sing at the dedication of the Ottawa Hospital, and in other Canadian cities.

The Belgian Government has submitted the draft of a bill providing for reprisals against France if a tariff measure now pending in the French Parliament is enacted into law.

M. R. Gooderham of Toronto has purchased the property of the late Capt. Porte on the Lake Shore road, half a mile east of Oakville. The property, which fronts on the lake, has an area of about 12 acres. The purchase price is $14,000.

Confesses to Arson.

Woodstock, March 18.—The mystery surrounding the robbery of the Bain fire brigade quarters was cleared up yesterday afternoon when Police Chief Thompson arrested Louis Chatterson, a young man employed in a local insurance office.

Chatterson signed a full confession a short time after. In it he says that he rung in the fire alarm, started a fire in a vacant house and then, while both the city and Bain fire departments were busy, he went through the Bain quarters and stole $28 in money. Chatterson says he had been gambling.

He was a former member of the Bain department, and his home is in London. He will come up in court in the morning.

Eucharistic Congress.

Montreal, March 18.—Yesterday the civic reception committee came out with a statement that while it had discussed the question of voting funds to the coming Eucharistic Congress, there had never been any mention made of the sum to be given.

A special committee composed of three Roman Catholics and one Protestant, will wait on the Roman Catholic archbishop and ask him what form of entertainment he would like to have the city tender the ecclesiastical visitors. It is likely to include a banquet, a reception on the mountain top and another at the City Hall, and, in addition to this, the city will likely undertake to pay to have various streets decorated.

Dismissed Staff Starts Paper.

St. John, N.B., March 18.—The St. John Evening Star was purchased by The Evening Times, a rival newspaper, and the members of The Star's staff were informed that, beginning this week, their services would not be required, the purchasers declining to publish only one evening paper, under the name of The Times-Star.

The staff of The Star, however, is continuing the publication of a newspaper at another office, under the name of The New Star. Litigation is probable.

This Dog Had Rabies.

Oakville, March 18.—Dr. Amyot, the provincial analyst, has reported to Mayor Hillmer that the dog which passed through Oakville the other day, and was finally shot at the Gooderham farm, was in the worst stage of rabies. The Board of Health has ordered that the dogs which were bitten shall be destroyed. The tag found on the mad dog was issued on Aug. 31, 1909, by the Township of York, to F. Foreman, Southport road, Swansea.

Opened Fire on Street Car.

Chicago, March 18.—L. G. Carter, a sailor, who had visited many saloons, shot and fatally wounded Michael Brennan, a conductor on a street car at Madison and Clinton streets early yesterday. From the sidewalk the sailor poured a fusilade of shots at the passing car.

PETERBOROUGH FRIDAY MARCH 18 1910

PETERBOROUGH HAS EXCELLENT CHANCE OF SECURING THE NEXT MEETING OF HARDWAREMEN

Big Convention With Five Hundred Delegates May Meet Here Next February---Reception Committee and Local Hardwaremen are Working Energetically to Secure the Session---Are Holding a Meeting To-night.

Peterborough has a golden opportunity of securing the next convention of the Ontario Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association.

The convention, which is attended by over five hundred delegates, will be held in February, 1911, and the local hardwaremen, assisted by the Reception Committee of the City Council, is making an effort to have the big convention held in this city. The prospects are that they will be successful, although there is strong opposition in the field, especially from Toronto. The convention met this year in London, and in 1909 in Hamilton, and Toronto is doing its best to land the next session.

The convention would mean a big thing to Peterborough and those interested locally are leaving no stone unturned to secure the hardware men. Accommodation for five hundred visitors would have to be arranged, but it is thought that this can be done satisfactorily. In addition two halls are needed, one for meeting purposes and the other to hold an exhibition in, and in this respect, too, Peterborough can meet the requirements of the Association. The presence of five hundred visitors in Peterborough for five days would be of great advantage to Peterborough.

The Reception Committee of the city council, of which Ald. Duffins is chairman, are working energetically, and are enthusiastic over the prospects. In order to complete the preliminary arrangements a meeting of the committee is being held to-night, at which all the hardware men of the city will be present, as well as representatives of the different manufacturing concerns in the city, which are interested in hardware. At a meeting the matter will be gone carefully into and it is probable that a deputation will be arranged to go to Toronto, on Good Friday to meet the executive of the Association, which is meeting in the Queen city that day. The question of where the convention will meet next year will be decided then.

THE IRISH ENTERTAINMENT AT ST. ANDREW'S A SUCCESS

The Irish At Home given by the ladies of St. Andrew's church, was a very successful affair. Supper was served from 6 to 8 o'clock, and a very large number took advantage of the pleasant evening to commemorate the day recognized all over the world, in memory of one of the earliest of missionaries in Britain.

The programme was not a lengthy one, and the numbers were all appropriate to the occasion. Among those taking part were Mrs. P. Kerr and Miss E. Tully, in instrumental selections, Mr. R. J. Winch, assisted with great generosity in both delightful and profitable recitations, Mrs. T. D. MacGregor contributed two vocal selections, which were very highly appreciated, while the evening's entertainment was brought to a close by an instrumental selection by Miss Potter.

The minister of the church presided and took the opportunity to express his great delight in being able to state why he admired the people of the Emerald Isle. Among other things he referred to their reverence for things sacred, and for the truth, for which they had been always ready to sacrifice life, if necessary. He saw in the Irish people the great qualities for succeeding in every department of life, and instanced a number of cases where men had speedily risen to the highest places of honour and service in all the various lines of human activity. This led him to believe that if the causes for the prejudices and fears that had for centuries existed between political and religious authorities could be removed, that it was not possible to express what the people of Ireland would do for the great good of the Empire and the world.

Mr. Potter gave the following quotation:

The Irishman.

The savage loves his native shore,
Though rude the soil and chill the air;
Then well may Erin's sons adore
Their isle, which nature formed so fair.
What flood reflects a shore so sweet,
As Shannon sweet or pastoral Baun?
Or who a friend or foe can meet
So generous as an Irishman?

His hand is rash, his heart is warm,
But honesty is still his guide;
None more repents a deed of harm,
And none forgives with nobler pride;
He may be duped; but won't be dared—
More tit to practise than to plan;
He dearly earns his poor reward,
And spends it like an Irishman.

If strange or poor, for you he'll pay
And guide you where you safe may be;
If you're his guest, while e'er you stay
His cottage holds a jubilee.
His inmost soul he will unlock,
And if he may your secrets scan,
Your confidence he scorns to mock,
For faithful is an Irishman.

By honour bound in woe or weal,
Whate'er she bids he dares to do;
Try him with bribes—they won't prevail;
Prove him in fire—you'll find him true.
He seeks not safety, let his post
Be where it ought—in danger's van;
And if the field of fame be lost,
It won't be by an Irishman!

—James Orr.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., Boosts The City In The Grand Lodge

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., always on the lookout for bringing our tdvantages known to the outside world, gave the Grand Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, which he attended this week in Toronto, a very pressing invitation to come to Peterborough to hold its annual convention in March, 1911. A letter from Toronto says Mr. Turner gave the delegates a glowing picture of this city, and assured them of the warmth of the welcome that they would receive if they would honour us with a visit. One man remarked that though Mr. Turner failed to draw the Grand Lodge from the Ontario capital, he gave the Electric City a boost in the Grand Lodge that caused many delegates to sit up and take notice. It was a good advertisement for the city and may still prove successful in bringing the Grand Lodge here in the near future if the invitation is repeated.

Former Well Known Local Player Revisits The City

Elmer Smith, who will be remembered by the older hockey fans of Peterborough as the left wing player of the champion Peterborough Colts team of 1901, is home on a visit to his parents, Dublin street, after an absence from the city of nearly nine years. Mr. Smith is in business with his brother, Mr. Norman Smith, also a well-known former local hockey player, near San Francisco, and has been meeting with success in the earthquake belt. He expects to be home for three weeks, and is busy shaking hands with acquaintances. None of the champion team, which beat Stratford in the finals are here now, with the exception of Harry Morgan. The team that year consisted of Miller, Gilmau,, and Brundette, goal; Cavanah, point; Harold Armstrong, cover-point; Whitcroft, rover; Morgan, centre; Hurry King, right wing, and Elmer Smith, left wing.

FOUND THE OUTFIT OF A BURGLAR

Nitro-Glycerine, Dynamite and a Revolver Picked Up at Point Where Henderson Left Track To Take To The Swamp.

FOUND BY CONSTABLE

(Havelock Standard.)

Chief Bennett has in his possession part of a burglar's outfit, which was found by Thomas Parks of Belmont, near the distance semaphore at the West End a couple of weeks ago. The outfit was wrapped in a woollen sock enclosed in an old mitt, and contained a two ounce bottle of nitro-glycerine, two coils of blasting fuse, thirteen dynamite caps and an automatic revolver fully loaded. The outfit was found at the point where Robert Henderson, the McPherson murderer left the track to take to the swamp on the day he was captured.

TWO PRESENTATIONS

At the conclusion of the choir rehearsal at the George Street Church last evening two presentations were made, one being to Miss Carrie Reesor, the soloist, who leaves in a few days for her home in Markham. As a mark of the esteem in which she is held by the choir she was given a beautiful silver manicure set, accompanied by an address, in which reference was made, in appreciative terms to the splendid services which she had rendered in the capacity of soloist. Miss Reesor made a grateful reply. The other presentation was made to Miss Ida Kirke, of a silver pudding dish. Miss Kirke leaves in a few days for the West, where she will reside. She also made a suitable reply. Refreshments were served at the conclusion and a pleasant time spent.

MADE A GREAT RECORD

Kingston, March 15.—Three championships in one week! What's that? Yes, correct. Of course everyone knows how Queen's walloped McGill, up there in Ottawa, just a week ago Monday. Then an Ottawa team —Cliffsides by name—came down and tried a throw at the Allan Cup, but went wide of the mark. That happened Saturday night of the same week, although the game was so interrupted by delays that Sunday of this week was well nigh encroached upon. Well, the third championship! The above two were in hockey, and to tell the truth Queen's boxers, fencers and wrestlers left very little of the representatives from McGill and Varsity. Coming down to concrete facts, in the first Intercollegiate Assault-at-arms, held at Kingston on Friday, March 11, Queen's made 40 points out of a possible 55 points; Varsity recorded 15 points and McGill, nil, or to put it another way, out of a total of 11 finals, Queen's won 8 firsts, Varsity 3 firsts and McGill, none. Queen's won all the wrestling, all the fencing, and two of the boxing contests, leaving three of the boxing contests for Varsity.

In the wrestling J. A. Macdonald was the star for Queen's, winning both the middleweight and heavyweight championships, from McKenzie of Toronto, and Smith of McGill. D. E. Foster got the decision over Keith of Varsity, in the welterweight wrestling. Alyea won the lightweight from Davidson of Toronto, and Garvovk, the featherweight wrestling. In fencing, the two Queen's representatives came together in the finals, Carmichael winning from McKay.

In the boxing contests Dickson of Queen's got the decision over Gage, Toronto's champion in the heavyweight. In the middleweight Willison, of Toronto, won from Wallace of Queen's, and in the welterweight Morgan, of Toronto, won by a very small margin from McNichol of Queen's. In the lightweight Alderson won handily and in the featherweight Davidson, of Toronto won from Gass, of McGill.

At present athletics casts everything else around Queen's into the shade. But this is the last jubilation before April examinations.

A report went round in some of the papers that Principal Gordon intended to resign. Such a rumour is absolutely unfounded.

The Senior and Junior years have decided to make their memorials take the form of an ornamental fence and gates to surround the University grounds.

Last Friday, the two hundred Queen's graduates in Ottawa held a banquet, at which Professors Skelton, Cappon and Morison gave lectures.

The report of the Athletic Committee shows a surplus of $1.100, as against $220 for last year. Athletics pay at Queen's.

CASE TO COME UP ON MARCH THIRTIETH

Lakefield Merchant Will be Charged With Selling Liquor Without a License—Woman Said to Have Purchased It From Him.

FIRE AT FRANKFORD

Shoe Shop and Hotel Were Damaged and Other Buildings Had a Narrow Escape.

Special to The Examiner.

Frankford, Ont., March 18. — Fire broke out this morning in the shoe shop of John Burnett, in a part of the Central Ontario Hotel, owned by Jas. Sweetman, and quickly spread to the hotel, but hundreds of willing hands with pails of water, soon had the flames extinguished. The damage done is covered by insurance. The cause of the fire was defective stove pipes. The building was a large frame one, in connection with the frame music hall, stables and sawmill, which could not have been saved had the fire not been controlled at once.

TO LIGHT WARSAW

Warsaw, March 16.—Several of the most prominent men of the town have formulated a plan of providing light for the streets. The one thousand candle power lamp that has been used at the rink during the winter was put up at the post office corner on Saturday night as a trial. This apparently gave every satisfaction. A fund to which all are invited and many are expected to contribute has been opened and a list is at the post office. It is the desire of the Board of Managers to raise at least $100, which will enable them to get four lamps.

SHAMROCK FOR STAFF

Examiner Employees are Indebted to West End Greenhouse for Gift.

The staff of The Examiner are indebted to Mr. G. Walter Green, of the West End greenhouse for the gift of a large pot of Shamrock which is thoroughly appreciated by the members. The plant is a beautiful specimen and ahs been greatly admired by those who have seen it in a prominent position in the sanctum today.

NEW MANAGEMENT

Mr. T. W. Robinson, who has had the lease of the store at Juniper Island for twenty-three consecutive summers will not act as manager of the store this year, but Mr. Harry Stock, of Stock's Bakery, will be in charge this year. In view of Mr. Robinson's resignation Mr. Stock was granted the lease by a special committee appointed by the Stony Lake Cottagers' Association. The committee met at R. Neill's store on Tuesday afternoon.

SUED FOR ONE DOLLAR AND HE LOST IT

An Amusing Case Before His Honour Judge Huycke in the Division Court This Morning —Defendant Was the Wrong Man.

HAD TO PAY COSTS

A rather amusing case was heard before His Honour Judge Huycke in the Division Court this morning, when one man sued another for the sum of one dollar, which he claimed as the price of feeding the defendant's horse. Several witnesses were called and considerable evidence was taken. However, it turned out in the end that the plaintiff had sued the wrong man and judgment was awarded in favour of the defendant. The plaintiff, it is said, not only lost the amount for which he sued but also the costs of the proceedings. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the defendant in this case. There were about twelve other cases that came up before His Honour for hearing this morning.

OBITUARY.

MRS. BROOKS.

(Campbellford Herald.)

On Thursday of this week, Mrs. Brooks, of Wiona, died after a long illness of tuberculosis. Mrs. Brooks, whose maiden name was Octavia Wood was a native of Percy, being a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wood, formerly of the vicinity of Trent Bridge, now of Peterborough. Deceased was 33 years old. The remains were brought to the Centre church cemetery for burial. The funeral took place on Friday.

JEFF BASKS IN LIMELIGHT

San Francisco, March 14.—Jim Jeffries is back on his broad acres at Burbank, and a record of the things he does in a day reads like a leaf from the life of Joshua Whitcomb.

From the way Jim attends to the chores one might think that the mortgage on the farm was growing bigger and that it has become necessary to discharge the hired man. But that's not the way of it at all. It's merely a case of combining business and enjoyment, for Jim likes to potter around where there are calves and chickens and the like. Moreover, it comes under the head of light training.

Have you noticed the way the papers keep their readers informed as to Jeffries' every movement? From the tune he cracks the kindling for the breakfast fire until he winds the kitchen clock at night no act of the big fellow is overlooked, and every line of it is read with interest.

Johnson In Eclipse.

The strange part of it all is that Jeffries—that is, the renovated Jeffries, has done nothing so far to deserve this solicitude. Two years ago Jim might have cut and stacked a thousand cords of blue gum or pitched a million bales of alfalfa, and it would not have got into the papers. To be still more brutally frank, he might have toured and toured and failed to rake in any thing like five per cent. of the wealth he is credited with amassing by his theatrical operations since he returned from Carlsbad. He seems to enjoy the unearned increment, whatever that is. His present importance and money-making capacity is based entirely on what Johnson did to that white man Burns in Australia, and what Jeffries promises to do to Johnson by way of reprisal next July.

And where is Johnson all this time? There is so little mention of him that it might be supposed that Jeffries' entry for the championship stakes was the only one received up to date.

If the sporting correspondent played fair we would be regaled with daily bulletins as to the number of times Johnson cranked his buzz wagon and brushed his sealskin overcoat. For all we hear of the fellow who is to face Jeffries he might be in Africa

Come to think of it, there was some mention of Johnson a few weeks ago and then he was placed in an unpleasant light. It was said he worked his famous uppercut on another colored man who reminded him of the time when he was glad to blow the foam from a bucket of beer.

There is a minority report to the effect that Johnson may have to go to jail for the offence, and there are suggestions, even now, that the promoters had better provide an understudy for little Arthur in case he is not able to keep his engagement with Big Jim.

Let us hope it will not prove as desparate as that, for as a supposedly humorous friend remarked, "a championship fight without Johnson would be like the play of Hamlet with Othello left out."

PROSPECTOR AND HIS WIFE BURNED TO DEATH BY THE UPSETTING OF AN OIL LAMP

Horrible Tragedy at Cobalt in Which Two Lives are Lost---It is Supposed That Man Had Been Drinking and Wife Tried to Save Him---Woodstock Incendiary Flees After Trying to Purchase Poison.

Special to The Examiner.

Cobalt, March 18.—Wm. Cope, aged 35, and Edith, his wife, aged 28, were burned to death in their three-roomed home last night, at 11.30. It is surmised that Cope, who had been drinking, upset the lamp, and that his wife was trying to drag him to safety when overcome. Their bodies were found, fully dressed, side by side, on the kitchen floor. Cope comes from Clarendon, Ont., and his wife from Toronto. He was a well-known prospector.

HAS FLED.

Woodstock, March 18.—Louis Chatterson, the young man who last night confessed that he set fire to a vacant house and robbed the quarters of the Bain fire department when they turned out, made use of the liberty which the police allowed him, to try to purchase poison. Failing in that he fled from town, and the police are now following him in a buggy.

McCaffery Is Satisfied With Toronto's Prospects

All smiles and optimism, President McCaffery returned last night from a conference with Joe Kelley and Willie Keeler in New York. Sammy Smith, Myron Grimshaw, Vandergrift, and Rudolph met the President and manager and all are eager for the training trip.

"What chance has Toronto to get Keeler?" was asked of Mr. McCaffery.

"Well, as you know, Kelley and Kecler are lifelong friends and Willie would like to come to Toronto. He told us that he would be pleased to play with Kelley, and gave us the definite assurance that if he did not come to terms with the major league clubs with which he is now in communication he would accept our terms. Personally I would not be one whit surprised to see him playing for the Leafs," concluded the President.

Not a man of all of Toronto's big squad is making any trouble over his contract, and the affairs of the club are in a most satisfactory condition. Frick and Vaugh are available for the shortstop position, but if a better man can be secured he will be bought. A deal is now under way for a young catcher and has so far progressed that it may be closed today or to-night. Another outfielder and a right-handed pitcher will be bought if desirable men are to be had when the major league clubs are ready to do business after breaking training camps. Toronto will report at Washington a week from to-morrow.

The jump from the Charlottesville camp to Norfolk, Va., where the Washington Americans will train, is en route to the New England League, and Kelley is now endeavouring to arrange a game with the Washington team at Norfolk before jumping to New England for exhibition games.

Kelley is very much pleased with the prospect of making a high-class second sacker of young Fitzpatrick, bought with Deal from Lancaster, Pa. The Leaf manager has heard from several veteran judges of players that "Fitz" is one of the most promising young infielders in the country. They have convinced the Toronto manager that he has solved the second base problem without looking any further.

SOME BOUQUETS FOR THE DOMESTIC SCIENCE CLASS

Luncheon This Week at the Collegiate Institute Was Appreciated by the Guests of the Class.

SPLENDID SKILL

The luncheon prepared by the Domestic Science class of the Collegiate Institute, to which the members of the Board of Education and a few of their friends were invited, proved a most interesting affair, and afforded the trustees and the other guests an opportunity to judge of the nature of the work being done in this department of school activity.

Nothing elaborate was attempted by the students, but a simple and practical illustration was given of the work taken up in their regular course of study.

That the effort of the Collegiate girls was a success may be inferred from the following opinions of some of the guests:

Principal Walker, of the Peterborough Normal School, says:

The luncheon provided by the Household Science Class of I. C Form of the Collegiate Institute on Tuesday last was in every way creditable to the young ladies and to their instructor, Miss Steinhoff. A menu was prepared which gave evidence of exceptional skill in the culinary art, and it was served in a manner which called forth words of high praise and appreciation from those guests who were privileged to partake of it.

The Board of Education is to be congratulated on the success which has thus far attended this new department in their schools, and good results must inevitably follow that education which trains both hand and mind, and which will do so much to raise household duties from drudgery to the dignity of a science.

Dr. A. W. McPherson expresses himself as follows:

The luncheon given by the Form I. A girls of the Collegiate Institute, on Wednesday last, was voted a decided success by all who were so fortunate as to be present. It was a fine seven-course banquet, served in excellent taste, and at an estimated cost of between 15 and 20 cents a plate.

One cannot overestimate the value of such a training for the girls. It is the most practical subject in their course.

During the last four or five years, considerable attention has been given to the scientific side of diet work in the large hospitals, and in the medical colleges, as well as in the schools for this special work.

The School Board are to be congratulated upon keeping to the front in this regard.

The Rev. Father McColl had the following to say of the banquet:

"I found the class room for conducting the lessons well equipped, and the teacher, Miss Steinhoff, impressed one as a person well qualified for the great work to be accomplished. The table was neatly and tastefully arranged and the different courses of the luncheon were exceptionally well cooked, and consequently very palatable. As the cooking and all the work connected with the meal was done by the pupils, I had ample proof from personal observation of their proficiency. It is very creditable for girls so young to be able to cook so well, and I congratulate the School Board upon the good and practical training they are furnishing the future women of the city."

MUST DEFEND CUP

St. Mike's Will Have to Clash With the Sherbrooke Team.

Montreal, March 17.—The Sherbrooke team, champions of the St. Lawrence Valley League, have already challenged St. Michael's of Toronto, for the Allan Trophy, and a game has been arranged to take place at Toronto on Saturday night.

The trustees this morning got into telephonic communication with St. Michael's, who were quite willing to meet the challengers, and there was no delay in arranging the match. While Sherbrooke has a strong team, the general opinion here is that they have not much chance of bringing the silverware to this province.

RENFREW IN STYLE

Diamond Studded Team Leave for New York in Private Car.

Ottawa, March 17.—The Renfrew hockey team leaves in the morning for New York, where on Saturday it will clash with the Wanderers in a sudden-death game to decide the international championship. The millionaires will travel in their usual sumptous style—private car, big party of followers, etc., and will take the following players to Gotham: Lindsay, Frank Patrick, Taylor, Lester, Patrick, Bobbie Rowe, Hay Miller, "Newsy" Lalonde, Fred Whitcroft, Eddie Hogan, Herb Jordan and Jack Fraser. The Ottawas are expected home in the morning.

SHOULDER TO SHOULDER.

It is morally certain that the representative Canadian men of both political parties will stand shoulder to shoulder in the present crisis on the question in regard to the threatened application of the United States maximum tariff against Canada. At a largely attended caucus of the Liberal party in parliament held on Thursday morning the subject was fully discussed and the government confirmed in the attitude, it has maintained and maintains, of declining to consider any surrender of Canada's fiscal independence at the instance of the United States. The members of the Government explained fully the bearing of the French treaty upon the question of discrimination against the United States and there was a general agreement that both in law and equity Canada did not come under the penalty of the United States maximum tariff, regarded as a weapon against undue discrimination. It was felt that if a tariff war should come, the responsibility will not rest upon Canada, which would be prepared, in the interests of her fiscal independence and national self respect, to courageously meet the consequences which must flow, from a war of tariffs. In this event the government may count upon the support of the Liberals from coast to coast. And, there is every probability that the Conservative members will take a similar patriotic stand with similar unanimity. Though the Conservative members of the House have had no formal conference on the subject, Mr. Taylor, Chief Conservative whip stated that the Conservative members would stand shoulder to shoulder with their Liberal brethren in upholding the fiscal independence of Canada as involved in the resolution that Canada would make no concession in order to avoid the infliction of a tariff penalty she has not incurred in law or in fact or in equity.

TECHNICAL TRAINING.

The Whitney government is continuing to evade the responsibility of dealing, in a practical manner, with the extremely important matter of technical training for the sons of the artisan class of Ontario. In the Ontario Legislature — at the close of the session in which nothing has been done in the direction in question, Hon. A. G. Mackay, leader of the Liberal Opposition made an earnest appeal for a prompt dealing with the question of technical training. He submitted a resolution urging the province to unite with the municipalities in the establishment of craft or trade schools in the cities and towns to supplement the practical training of the workshops, and effect an arrangement as to the basis of their support among the province, the municipalities and the interested manufacturers. He also urged the establishment in large industrial centres of technical high schools, towards support of which the municipalities should be empowered to contribute. It was, the Liberal leader forcefully pointed out, no adequate apology for lethargic inaction on the part of the province of Ontario to submit that the Dominion was going to "do something." The Dominion he had no doubt would do its part, but the Federal government was careful to observe the limits of its jurisdiction. Education belongs exclusively to the province. The Federal Minister of Labour is sending out a commission for the purpose of gathering information. It is self evident that efficient and effective industrial education will enhance the trade and commerce of the Dominion, and to this end it is to be expected that co-operation would be extended. But the responsibility and the opportunity rests with the province of Ontario. It is not very consistent for Sir James Whitney to be looking to Ottawa in the matter of promoting technical education. There is a terrific howl if the Dominion "invades provincial rights" in the matter of some little side line dam or water power; but in a matter of supremely greater importance, the technical training of our rising generation, so that the fullest advantage can be taken of the energy produced by the utilization of our water powers, he is fatuously indifferent, and even invites the invasion of provincial right by the Dominion government in the matter of technical training. Germany has achieved her military supremacy by a system of making her citizens fighting machines; she is gaining an industrial ascendancy by making her sons mechanical experts. If Canada ever attains the manufacturing eminence to which her native opportunities point the possibility, she will only do it by making her citizenship an educated mass of citizens, and she can only do this by the provinces each doing its share in the domain over which the act of constitution gives exclusive jurisdiction.

A HERO IN OVERALLS.

History tells of Irish heroes galore, but it furnishes no more exalted example of heroism, attended with courage, endurance and contempt of suffering, and inspired by unselfish love of fellow man, than Railway Conductor Thomas Reynolds, who on Wednesday, in Montreal, was decorated at the hands of Earl Grey, with the "Albert Medal." The Albert medal is the highest form of recognition of bravery in life saving, in civil life as the Victoria medal, is the highest decoration conferred for bravery on the field of battle. How this was won by Conductor Reynolds is briefly told. It will be remembered that a dreadful railway accident occurred on the 21st of last January, when a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train was wrecked at the Spanish River bridge. It was, in its incidents of exceptional tragedy, one of the most appalling on record, but the story of its horrors was relieved by the story of the heroism performed by Conductor Reynolds. When the accident befel, he was in the dining coach, which plunged down an embankment of thirty-eight feet into the Spanish River. At the time there were twenty-three persons in the coach, who were submerged in ten feet of water. Conductor Reynolds, by great effort, freed himself from the wreckage with which he was pinned down, and rising to the top of the water, swam to different parts of the coach, assisting the passengers to attach themselves to hat racks, chandeliers, and other projections. Then, diving into the chilling waters he made his escape through a window, which he succeeded in breaking with his feet and was fortunate to come to the surface of the river in the narrow opening between the top of the car and the edge of the broken ice. It required an absolutely unselfish man with undauntable courage, and magnificent obstinacy to take such a desperate chance. He pulled himself upon the roof of the car, tore out a ventilator, and through that, and another opening he made in the top of the car, he rescued eighteen passengers, who, but for his bravery, presence of mind, and prompt action, would have died a terrible death. Conductor Reynolds did all this while bleeding from wounds made by the glass in passing through the broken window, and in the numbing cold of a ten-below-zero temperature. When the facts were brought to the attention of Hon. Charles Murphy, Dominion Secretary of State, he recognized in Reynolds one of the world's heroes, and application was made for the Albert Medal of the first class, and through the exceptional kindness of the King, and the exceptional merit of the action to be recognized, a point was strained in Reynolds' favour, and the medal, which, as a rule, is only awarded at the end of a year, when all cases are considered, was awarded t once, as a special mark of Royal favour. Congratulations will come from all quarters to Conductor Reynolds, who has made himself a distinguished type of the brave and gallant race to which he belongs. He is a Cavan Irishman. He entered the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway when it first began operations and has remained ever since. One of the prominent officers of this line is quoted as saying: "There is not one black mark against him." It is little wonder that the Company rewarded his heroism by presenting him with a magnificent gold watch and a substantial sum of money. With a man of the sterling qualities of character of Conductor Reynolds, while he doubtless appreciates the signal honours he has received, the most solid consciousness of satisfaction he will carry through life will be the feeling that he was in the hands of Divine Providence the instrument in saving the world and to their families and friends eighteen precious human lives.

CONSERVATIVE MEMBERS RETIRE FROM INQUIRY

Lumsden Charges.

When members of the opposition undertook to extend moral support to Mr. Lumsden with regard to his charges against engineers of the National Transcontinental Raiway Company they reckoned without their host. It quickly appeared that whatever the motive was which actuated Mr. Lumsden, it had nothing to do with any wrongdoing on the part of the engineers.

Tories' First Rebuff.

Mr. Lumsden has already exonerated the engineering staff and the National Transcontinental commission. The Tory members on the committee sought an avenue of escape and ultimately found it.

However, being on the committee they had to do something, and they adopted a most unusual course.

Mr. Lumsden said he did not desire any counsel, although the government was willing to bear the expense of same. The opposition members on the committee tried in vain to influence him and compel him to have counsel against his will.

Tories' Second Rebuff.

Then they wanted a counsel to act on behalf of the people, a counsel to be appointed, not by the Liberals, not by the committee, but by the opposition members of the committee.

In support of this Mr. Crothers laid down the strange ethics that it was well known that counsel suppressed any information damaging to a client, and accentuated other evidence which might be in his favour.

This might be the practice among country lawyers of small experience, but is not the case with eminent members of the bar who have a reputation to preserve.

The committee declined to allow such unheard of procedure. They would not listen to a request that the minority should appoint a partisan lawyer, but contended that any appointment should be made by the committee as a whole.

This was their second rebuff.

Tories' Third Rebuff.

It was then arranged that two members of the committee, Messrs. MacDonald and Barker, should submit a name to the committee. This was done, and the name of Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., ex-judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, and a Conservative, was submitted, but the Conservatives refused to accept him. They still contended for the right to appoint a counsel of their own selection. The committee firmly refused to agree to this. This was their third rebuff.

Tories' Fourth Rebuff.

Realizing that they could not run the committee to suit their own political ends, the Conservative members resigned in a body. Whereupon the committee appointed Mr. Chrysler, K. C., of Ottawa, to represent the people, and announced that the investigation would proceed as if nothing had happened.

This was their fourth rebuff.

Would Not Face Music.

The Conservatives thought that if they resigned the committee would disband and there would be no investigation, which would have suited their views; but the committee thought differently, and intend to proceed and find out from Mr. Lumsden just why he resigned and the names of the engineers, if any, who had forfeited his confidence.

All Parties Represented.

As affairs stand now all parties are represented by counsel and Mr. Lumsden will consult with Mr. Chrysler, and the investigation will proceed just the same as if the Conservatives had remained on the committee.

The Conservatives were not anxious to have this matter probed, for the investigation was proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. They have followed the lead of Mr. Lumsden, who resigned because, he said, he had lost confidence in his staff. The Conservatives resigned from the committee because they had lost confidence in themselves. Both would have received a larger measure of public respect had they stuck to their guns.

Naval Debate.

The debate on the navy bill is drawing to a close. The Borden amendment was defeated by 55 votes. The past week has seen the same wearisome repetitions of previous speakers.

Nothing Said About Bill.

Members of the Opposition say little or nothing about the bill, it is a question whether many of them have read it, it is a fact that they don't talk about it. Reference is made to early history, long extracts are read from newspapers, pamphlets and moribund political speeches, but nothing about the bill before the House.

Men of Limited Knowledge.

Men with no knowledge of Canadian political history give opinions upon grave questions without the remotest conception of the principle involved. Others, obscure men, with little learning, less intelligence, and limited experience place an interpretation upon words of the prime minister which they could not bear, even as they distort them. They fail to comprehend the plainest form of English grammar in which the prime minister conveys his meaning.

Quotation Read Ad Nauseam.

One quotation alone has been read fifteen times by members of the Opposition, and each man reads it as if he has made a great discovery. Debate is carried to the point of absurdity, when men whose names are unknown beyond their own home town, accuse a man of the eminence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of disloyalty. When His Majesty the King sends a personal telegram to Sir Wilfrid Laurier bearing testimony of his loyalty to the Crown and empire, it is farcical to hear men of mediocre attainments, whose names have only recently been added to the directory, flippantly allude to one, "the latchet of whose shoes" they are not worthy to unloose.

Member Called Down.

The Conservative member for Frontenac, who stated that the French Canadians were disloyal was first rebuked by a member on his own side of the house, and since that time he has received a rebuke from almost every Liberal member, until he found refuge in an appeal to the chair, and a general denial.

Borden's Dilemma.

Mr. Borden finds himself in a dilemma because of his opposition to the building of dry docks and shipbuilding yards in Halifax, all of which would come with the establishment of a Canadian navy. His constituents in Halifax will repudiate these views when given an opportunity.

Fights Shy of Issue.

Every Conservative who has yet spoken fights shy of the main features of the argument. Their amendment is based upon there being an emergency. They have not attempted to demonstrate by any authority tht there is an emergency. On the other hand all authority goes to prove that there is no emergency.

Things Tories Don't Explain.

They don't explain how often the contribution of $25,000,000 a year will have to be made to Great Britain.

They say nothing about their loyalty should there be another demand next year, and the following year, but they say, pay the money now, and be done with the matter.

In other words Conservative loyalty may be estimated at $25,000,000 cash this year, and no loyalty afterwards, even if there be an emergency by and by.

They don't care where the money goes; they give it to Great Britain to do with as she thinks fit, therefore it may be spent in coaling stations anywhere within the British empire, or for any other purpose.

They give no reasons why $25,000,000 is the exact figure to meet an emergency, and restore security to the Empire.

They don't say what the emergency is, because they don't know.

They give no reasons why there should not be a Canadian navy.

Things They Cannot Explain.

They cannot explain why Canadian money should not be expended in Canada for the benefit of Canada and the Empire.

They cannot understand the value to Canadian commerce of a fleet of swift cruisers to protect our interests in time of war, and thus save England the expense of sending to this country precisely the same character of vessels in case of hostilities.

Thy will not admit the palpable truth that Canada is doing the very thing suggested by the British Admiralty as being the best under the circumstances.

They insist upon mixing up preliminary suggestions made before a conference met, with the considered decision of the conference after full discussion.

Simply Obstruction.

They are more intent upon opposing Vibrant Nerve Force Supplied to Man.

(From "Man's Maladies.")

Without stamina, man is a failure. What is stamina? It is constitutional vigour-health. It is keen, responsive, vibrant nerve force, that gives wonderful inner strength of will, sustains a sound body, supports a wise mentality, makes money and keeps friends. Keen, strong, sensitive nerves makes stamina and with it man can excel in business, sport, pleasure and social favour. Without it he is apt to be weak voiced, weak memoried, feeble in motion, with cold hands, cold feet, nervousness, timidity, fear without cause, trembling, melancholy, pain in the back of head, neurasthenia and a general lack of grit, courage and nerve so that it is impossible to act naturally under all circumstances, as a man with stamina should. It should be the aim of every man to correct the condition responsible for failure and unhappiness, for it can be done by the simple fulfillment of nature's law that the nerves receive their nourishment through the blood, which enables the nerve fluids to recover the daily waste which is constantly taking place. The nerve fluids and body tissues undergo constant changes, and unless the supply is equal to the demand of the stream of health ebbs low, and misery prevails.

Astonishing strength, nerve force and poise is quickly restored by the following valuable formula, which anyone can prepare in the privacy of home:

First, obtain three ounces of syrup sarsaparilla compound in a six ounce bottle, add one ounce of compound fluid balmwort, shake well, and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom) and one ounce compound essence cardiol. Mix. Shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal, and one when retiring.

The above ingredients, except the syrup, are rare concentrations of purest drugs without opiates, and are used for various prescriptions.

Going out of Business

As I am compelled to vacate the premises where I am at present doing business, I am offering all my stock of buggies, wagons, democrats, wheelbarrows, and delivery sleighs and cutters at prices to clear that cannot be met any place in the city. Anyone requiring any of the above can secure a snap if they have the cash. I have also a stock of neck yokes, whiffletrees, double trees and 20 pair of twin neck yokes.

"SIAUN RHUE" BY T. A. S. DRAMATIC SECTION WAS MOST SUCCESSFUL EVENT

WAS MUCH ENJOYED

The dramatic section of St. Peter's T.A.S. added to its laurels last night through the masterly presentation which they gave in the Grand Opera House of Murphy's famous Irish comedy drama "Shaun Rhue." The successful production of dramas has got to be a habit with the clever members of the T. A. S., but in last night's play they surpassed their best previous efforts and the event was a success of the greatest magnitude. A strong play full of stirring situations as well as plenty of opportunities for comedy, splendidly mounted and staged and presented with a vim and a dramatic instinct that made it most delightful. "Shaun Rhue" was certainly the best work the dramatic section have presented and their efforts won them the unqualified approval of a crowded house. The success of the event should be a matter of congratulation to the individual members of the cast and especially to Mr. Geo. Lynch, who as usual has had the lion's share of the work preparing the presentation and who by his own skilful work in the production, and by his untiring efforts during rehearsals, is in no small measure responsible for the great success achieved. Mr. Lynch has always taken a keen interest in the dramatic section, has given the best that was in him to the work and he must certainly have felt a little elated last night at the triumph scored by himself and his associates.

It should be understood that such a success is not secured without the hardest kind of work on the part of those in the cast. To operate an amateur play with such smoothness, such attention to detail and such a true conception of dramatic art means that those taking part must have sacrificed a good deal of time and unselfishly devoted themselves to the production and success after such efforts is therefore all the more encouraging and pleasant.

There was not the slightest hitch in the presentation from the first curtain until the finale of the last act and the ease with which the production was presented speaks volumes for the stage generalship of Mr. Lynch and the ability and willingness of his associates. The acting was uniformly good; there was no awkwardness nor the slightest indication of stage fright, that bugbear which usually embarrasses amateur actors and is a source of painful anxiety to audiences. The articulation of the members was good; the audience had no difficulty in following the dialogue on this account while the T. A. S. Thespians evidently had studied their parts to good purpose as they revealed an effective grasp of the purpose of the author's lines.

The play was given to a crowded house, the biggest audience of the season, filling every seat in the commodious opera house. The plan was sold out within a short time after it was opened and the patronage which the presentation was afforded was a striking tribute to the reputation won by the Dramatic Society in the past. The audience was most enthusiastic and the clever work of the cast elicited great applause. "Shaun Rhue" is a play which gives many opportunities to capable artists and last night's company took full advantage of their openings with the result that the presentation was, without detracting anything from the merits of the other performances, under the same auspices in the past, the most enjoyable offering the T. A. S. Dramatic Section has yet given us.

In addition to the play itself a number of most enjoyable specialties were given which added considerably to the enjoyment of the occasion and served to add variety to the programme.

Following was the cast:

Morris Donovan .....Larry's Father
Mr. T. J. Dineen
Patrick Kavanaugh..Friend of the Donovans
Mr. W. J. O'Brien.
Gerald Kavanaugh.. ..Patrick's Son
Mr. W. F. Cahill
Peter Callaghan...Plotting against the Donovans
Mr. James O'Brien
Bryan Callaghan..Bryan's Son and Accomplice
Mr. John King
Waddy .... The Lawyer
Mr. John Gorham
Tim .. .. Waddy's Office Boy
Mr. Egbert Kelly
William Summerfield ....Land Agent
Teddy Phatts..In the Employ of Bryan
Mr. Claude Brady
Jerry Fallon.....Teddy's Companion
Mr. Sam Houlihan
Kate Donovan .....Daughter of Morris
Miss Margaret Derocher.
Dora Kavanaugh..Daughter of Patrick
Miss Lavina Hallihan
Larry Donovan .....
Shaun Rhue .. .. .A Ruffian
Mr. George Lynch

The scenes are laid in County Cork, Ireland, in 1860.

Peter Callaghan, a former neighbour of the Donovans, who has been living for the past few years in England, learns of the good fortune of Larry and Kate and hastens to Ireland, purposing to secure a large share at least of the legacy by marrying his son, Bryan, an unscrupulous fellow, to the daughter of his old neighbour. He enlists the sympathy of the unsuspecting farmer by loaning him three hundred pounds without security. Kate Donovan, who is the promised wife of Gerald Kavanaugh, an ambitious young Irish farmer, refuses to entertain the wishes of the designing Callaghans, and is strongly supported by her brother, Larry, whom after a heated argument with his father, he drives from home.

Larry determines to leave Ireland, but the night previous to his intended departure he learns through a friend that the grasping Callaghans are simply trying to rob his father. He determines to remain and if possible thwart the schemers. Disguising himself as a noted ruffian, Shaun Rhue by name, he agrees at the bidding of the Callaghans to impersonate Larry Donovan for a period of time sufficient to deceive an English attorney, William Summerfield, who has been commissioned to wind up the estate of the deceased.

The denouement of the play is attended with great satisfaction to the Donovans and their friends, and consternation to the scheming Callaghans.

Folowing is a synopsis of the scenery:

Act I.

Morris Donovan's Cottage; Driven from Home.

Act II

Scene I—The Grave; A Handful of Earth.
Scene II—The Roadway; The News.
Scene III—Lawyer Waddy's Office.

Act III

Scene I—Exterior of Kavanaugh's Home.
Scene II—The Roadway; The Trap.
Scene III—The Cave; The Rescue.

Act IV

Morris Donovan's Cottage; A Message from Dear Ireland.

The old favourite, Mr. Geo. Lynch, was seen in a part that, to use a hackneyed expression, fitted him like the proverbial glove, and was at his best in his portrayal of Larry Donovan, later as the Shaun Rhue. The part gave him plenty of opportunities for clever work, and he succeeded in taking full advantage. His work won rounds of applause and he kept the audience in roars of laughter from start to finish. In his presentation of this true Irish character, he was greatly aided by Miss Lavina Hallihan, as his sweetheart, Dora Kavanaugh, and Miss Margaret Derocher, as his sister. Both these young ladies deserve the greatest praise for their clever work. They are above all true to nature, clear and distinct in their accentuation, and with a clear conception of the nature of the character they were representing. Both have been seen in similar presentations on other occasions, but have never done better work. Mr. W. J. O'Brien, as Patrick Kavanagh, looked and acted to perfection the part of the patriot Irish school master. His long Latin expressions, given with all the extensions and dilations of which the human form is capable, were most amusing to the audience. His son, Gerald, an honest, warm-hearted son of Erin, was well received, and full justice was done to this character by Mr. W. T. Cahill. The grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous old miser, Lawyer Waddy, was ably represented by Mr. John Gorham, while the part of his half-starved, poorly-clad servant boy fell to the lot of Mr. Egbert Kelly, and was well taken. Mr. James O'Brien made the part of the plotting Bryan Callaghan a decidedly realistic one, and was ably assisted by Mr. John King, as his son, and accomplice in the scheming. Mr. T. J. Dineen made a most favourable impression by his decidedly clever work, as Morris Donovan. Mr. Claude Brady extracted a lot of amusement out of his dual role as William Summerfield and Teddy Phatts, while Mr. Sam. Houlihan did justice to the part of Jerry Tatton. There was not a weak spot in the cast and the whole production went through without a marring incident.

Special Numbers.

Two duets, "I'm Looking for a Sweetheart," and "Just Because," were sung with excellent effect by Miss Hallihan, and Mr. Lynch and Miss Hallihan also sang in beautiful voice and with fine expression "The Call of the Wind," "St. Patrick's Day" and "Has Sorrow Thy Young Days Shaded."

Mr. John King sang splendidly "The Harp That Once Through Tara's Halls," and was enthusiastically recalled.

Mr. Lynch gave an appealing rendition of "A Handful of Earth," at the opening of the second act.

An appropriate finale to the play was "Dear Ireland," which was sung in a captivating manner by Master Joe Clancy, the refrain being taken up by the whole company. Irish flags were conspicuously displayed in this number and the applause was hearty when the green emblem and the Union Jack, both in one large flag, was lowered from above the singers.

Mr. George Lynch must be given great credit for his able stage management and for his painstaking direction of the rehearsals and Mr. Sam Houlihan is to be complimented for the taste and ability he showed as the make-up artist.

Miss Maggie Doherty made a very efficient musical directress and the Opera House orchestra provided music suitable to the spirit of the occasion.

The company wish to thank stage manager Teddy Crowe and property man Jack Brady and their assistants for the splendid service given in the arrangement of the scenes and in attention to the details of the stage generally.

HELP ASSESSORS

Persons Who Have Sold Their Property Are Asked to Notify Officials.

The assessors have started out on the rounds and property owners are in a position to assist them very materially if they choose to do so. The assessors have asked the Examiner to request persons who have sold their property since last year to report the matter to the assessors, telling them the new purchaser, so that the former owner will not be assessed for property that has passed out of his hands. In this way a subsequent appearance in the Court of Revision will be avoided.

HEROISM OF CONDUCTOR REYNOLDS RECOGNIZED

On Wednesday, March 16th, at 911 Dorchester street, Montreal, His Excellency the Governor-General, in the King's name, presented Mr. Thos. Reynolds with the Albert Medal, of the first class in recognition of his conspicuous bravery on the occasion of the disaster on the C. P. R. at Spanish river on 21st January last. Her Excellency, Countess Grey, Hon. Charles Murphy, secretary of state of Canada, Mr. D. McNicoll, Vice-President of the C.P.R. and members of His Excellency's household were present.

Thomas Reynlods was born at Belturbet, County of Cavan, Ireland, in the year 1861. Coming to Canada at an early age he entered the employ of the Canada Central Railway Company, and having gained a thorough knowledge of railroading he went into the servie of the C. P. R., when its road was first operated and has remained with that Company ever since. In the words of one of his superiors: "There is not one black mark against him." Little wonder then that the Company hastened to reward his heroism by presenting him with a magnificent gold watch and a cheque for a substantial amount.

The Albert Medal, which Honourable Charles Murphy secured for Conductor Reynolds, was instituted by Royal Warrant, dated 7th March, 1866, for the purpose of rewarding, by mark of Royal favour, heroic actions performed on sea or land. The decoration is of two classes, namely: "The Albert Medal of the First Class, and "The Albert Medal of the Second Class." In the case of Conductor Reynolds it was the former that was awarded.

There is one feature of the award of the Albert Medal to Mr. Reynolds that must be particularly gratifying to him and to all Canadians. It is customary to make the award only at the end of each year when the applications forwarded to the Imperial authorities from all parts of the British Empire are enquired into and the most meritorious case of extreme and heroic daring is designated as the one worthy to receive this special mark of Royal favour. In the case of Conductor Reynolds an exception was made to the usual practice, and the proofs submitted by the Secretary of State were deemed sufficient by the Imperial authorities to justify them in awarding the medal without waiting to consider any other cases that may come before them during the present year.

The regulations governing the award of the Albert Medal for heroic actions performed on land prescribe that it shall only be awarded to those who, in saving or endeavouring to save the lives of others from accidents in mines, on railways, or at fires, or other peril other than perils of the sea, have endangered their own lives, and that such award shall be made only on a recommendation to the British Government from the Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department.

The decoration conferred on Conductor Reynolds is thus described in the regulations:

"It is ordained that "The Albert Medal of the First Class," when conferred for gallantry in saving life on land, shall consist of a gold, oval-shaped badge or decoration, enamelled in crimson, with a monogram composed of the letters V and A, erect in gold, surrounded by a garter in bronze, inscribed in raised letters of gold "For Gallantry in Saving Life on Land," and surmounted by a representation of the Crown of His Royal Highness, the lamented Prince Consort, and suspended from a crimson riband of an inch and three-eighths in width, with four white longitudinal stripes."

Ladies of the City Were Out en masse at the Openings Yesterday---Some Beautiful Creations are Shown---The Popular Styles That Will be Worn by the Fair Sex During the Spring and Summer Seasons.

THE LATEST STYLE---THE CHANTECLER HAT

The beauties of spring millinery are on display at the millinery parlours of the leading stores in the city. The spring opening commenced yesterday and the several establishments are a bower of beauty. Set off in polished plate glass cases, arranged in orderly lines, amid flowers and palms, and singing birds, the millinery creations can be seen to the best advantage.

The hats on display comprise a varied assortment sufficient to satisfy the most fastidious. Pretty little poke or Victoria bonnets, automobile bonnets, smart tailored New York and Parisian styles, sailors, turbans, and many other kinds are being exhibited.

A pretty feature of the hats this year is that many of them are literally swathed in roses—small French tea roses principally. Black velvet facing is also popular, and sets a hat off well. Smart tailored hats will be worn to a considerable extent, and many are being exhibited.

There are large hats and small hats, hats with low crowns and wide brims, and hats that fit the head snugly, but have tall crowns. Both styles will be worn, but the latter style is going to be a favourite.

At the Golden Lion Store.

The Golden Lion Parlours of Robert Fair and Company were thronged with ladies yesterday afternoon, and the show rooms brought forth many complimentary remarks regarding their singular beauty and attractiveness. Many beautiful creations in millinery are shown. A very pleasing style, at this store, is a large, black hat—Neapolitan—faced with black bands of straw, with a large bow of Milan silk. It is trimmed with large roses, and is caught up on one side. A Leghorn Paris hat, with black lace applique, a bow of black velvet and two willow plumes held in place by chiffon roses, is pronounced very swell by the ladies. The motor bonnet of Yedda straw, with trimmings of Messaline ribbon and tea roses, promises to be very popular. Other styles shown are the Langham, Mercedes and Anone.

At Richard Hall & Sons.

Stepping into Hall's millinery department from the murky street one feels inclined to carol the spring song. Soft green carpets give springily under foot, canaries yodel from half-concealed cages, the whole room is brilliant with variegated colours, deceivingly akin to those of nature. Truly, it is one of the pleasantest places in Peterborough, and a perfect paradise of delight for the ladies. The absolute latest in Paris creations blooms on every peg, with Chantecler inspiration most promising.

It is here and the only place in this city where the Chantecler hat is shown. It is a very large model in white straw with trimmings of pleated black velvet and an immense white Chantecler. It is indeed very striking. For those who condemn it as freakish there is a charming choice. A New York Neapolitan style in white with French flowers and willow plumes is very pretty. A French pattern in black mohair with black grapes and cerise velvet is attracting a lot of attention. One of this season's most exclusive trimmings is shown in the Persian silks. A large black mohair hat with wide facing of Persian silk trimmed with bands of velvet piped with the above silk and finished with ospreys is an extremely striking model. An all white hat is very pretty. It is made of fine white mohair braid faced with white meline, with a long Ostrich plume forming entire crown. An extreme style is the very effective motor hat shown in the close fitting new turban. The brim is made of toupe straw, the crown and veil ends being in chiffon to match.

At A. W. Cressman's.

Of course the feature of the spring openings at Cressman's is the new millinery as everywhere else. Their parlours are indeed a scene of the most enthusiastic interest that could be shown by the feminine sex. The parlours themselves present a most gorgeous aspect with the striking array of floral decorations that blend in one harmonious whole with the beautiful head pieces that everywhere blossom forth in the latest New York and Paris styles. There is such a marked contrast in the new millinery—on one side you will be attracted by the extreme size of a hat, and when you turn you behold a very miniature creation. Seems almost that the extremes were the rage this season. The one predominating feature of the millinery this spring is the immense quantity of flowers, fruits and grasses used. The chief among these are the roses in a large variety of shades and toned effects. Next to flowers comes the Moribon mounts, pom poms, aigrettes and quills with here and there touches of gold cloth, gold piping and gold cloth fruits such as bunches of grapes, which present very realistic effects. Special mention might be made here that the new shade in spring millinery is the king blue. While old rose and black with some tans and milder tones of blue are much in vogue. The mustard shades, too, are to be seen here and there with some touches of red to tone up.

The mothers of little girls will welcome the most impressive display of girls' headgear that has yet been shown in this millinery department. A large table is devoted exclusively to this line and the girlie that wants something nice will be sure to take a great fancy to this corner of the display.

Every corner of the big store is a part of the annual spring event, for everywhere you look you are greeted with fresh new goods of all kinds, everything so fresh and inviting. The women's suits and dresses are displayed in the ready-to-wear section in a very well arranged exhibit. The new case just installed adds greatly to this well equipped section. Women's shoes, too, are shown on the second floor in all the latest lasts and leathers, made by the world famous "Pingree," Chicago.

On the third floor the new wall papers, home furnishings and carpets are exhibited in some very varied schemes for the various rooms of the home. Then the main floor attracts the attention of the beauty loving women. The new silk, wool and wash fabrics are arranged in an exquisite profusion that in itself is a suggestion of spring with its daily shades and colour effects, as nature produces them. Women's accessories must not be overlooked as this section is a glow with a finely selected stock of new ideas in neckwear, belts, gloves, laces, embroideries, women's fancy hose, etc., everything to suggest the new.

Through the arch to the men's toggery shop brings us to a scene not often met in the men's wear stores. It is the splendid arrangement of men's Easter requirements, men's suits, cravats, gloves, etc., that will brighten the man's Easter.

Miss Allan's Store.

Miss E. M. Allan's Millinery Store has all the beautiful fashions of early headgear novelties for the season. The store is in gay attire for this style function, and the good ladies were out in large numbers to view the special displays, which are here shown. Millinery is Miss Allan's specialty, and some very beautiful creations are shown.

A Paris hat, covered with an elegant bow or rose ribbon, is decidedly in the public fashion. A Leghorn Paris hat, with a black velvet underbrim is pronounced to be very swell by the ladies. Another hat with similar underbrimming of black velvet is trimmed with bows of meline and is well set on with a handsome Crosse osprey aigrette.

At Miss McGivern's.

One of the features which immediately impresses an observer of the new millinery is that the styles are most attractive and of a wearable type. While there are extreme ideas shown, and undoubtedly will be in demand by certain classes of trade, the conservative styles predominate and are being eagerly taken by the great majority of buyers. Of these "wearable" hats, Miss McGivern has a pleasing variety. Graceful Leghorns with velvet facings and trimmings of French flowers are the correct things for spring. The turbans shown are smaller than usual, mostly made of draped straw. The Bulgarian turban and Breton sailors, with scarfs to match in shades of Russian blue, deep carol red, mustard and Peruche. There are not as many Ostrich feathers worn this season as in previous ones.

At J. C. Turnbull's Store.

One of the most notable hats in the collection of beautiful spring millinery at the J. C. Turnbull parlours is a Breton sailor with a low rounded crown and high upturned brim in new green and Paris tan shades. Another magnificent model noticed was a large hat of fine Tagal straw with two massive pillow plumes, finished with large Cabachon of velvet. It is a most attractive, and original effect. The Rajah and Arab turbans in particular have the head size shaped so that the head fits into the crown, making the folds of material a continuation of the hair baretles that smooth the head. All the new millinery, it must be understood is designed for wearing the new turban effects in hair dressing. The Tricorne models are shown in newer and more becoming forms and pompadour and bicone models are also much in evidence.

Even an expert won't buy coffee by its looks. He wants to taste it in the cup—because all coffee looks very much alike.

If you want a delicious cup of coffee, get a brand that has proved its quality like "SEAL BRAND".

The delightful flavor and fragrant aroma of the finest coffee berries are brought direct to your table by means of the sealed cans.

The flavor and aroma are sealed in.

CONSTIPATION AND HEADACHE

Mrs. R. Morrow, Bracebridge, Ont., writes—"For years I was troubled almost constantly with constipation and never got anything to do me the lasting good that has been obtained from Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Not only have they cured constipation but have also entirely cured the headaches from which I used to suffer terribly and have improved my health in every way."

FASHIONS AND FADS.

Suit jackets were never shorter.

Crochet buttons are to be much worn.

Dangling earrings are in great favour.

Easter hats generally will be rose-decked.

Plaited skirts with tunics are in the lead.

The splendour of black velvet is everywhere.

Button shoes seem to be the order of the day.

Men's neckwear will be in more vivid colourings.

Turn back collars and cuffs are to be worn again.

There is a tendency to have girdles wide in front.

The elbow sleeve is to return with the summer shirtwaist.

Both for men and women spring colours will be generally lighter.

Jetted net and laces will be much in vogue on elaborate gowns.

A survival of note is that of the self-coloured striped materials.

Some of the new light-coloured parasols show linings of contrasting colour.

It seems that the princess coat has come to stay for some time in full length.

There is a more fanciful note in the shades of men's spring suits than for many years.

Pipings of black will give tone to many of the light-coloured linen suits this spring.

Tulle and net are much used to trim hats, forming the crowns of some and huge bows upon others.

Linen coats made entirely of embroidery will be worn with the gown or skirt of plain material.

Many of the collarless lingerie blouses have delicate colourings of mauve and blue added by hand.

POST CARD COLUMN.

DRIVE MEN TO POVERTY.

Boston, March 15.—Mrs. Ellen H. Richards, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology faculty lays the present high cost of living directly at the door of her own sex. She asserts that man is driven daily nearer and nearer poverty by woman's extravagances.

Sir,—I sincerely believe it would be better to muzzle the women than the dogs. As for the boys, I will give fifty dollars to the Peterborough hospitals if I cannot prove that they deserve (but it would be wrong to condemn all because of the majority) anything they get from the dogs. They are dishonest and brutal, as are the people of Peterborough, with few exceptions.

Yours, etc.,
W. A. BAILEY.

The Annual General Meeting of the Members of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club will be held in the Bank of Montreal Chambers on Saturday Evening, March 19th., 1910, immediately after the Shareholders meeting at 8 o'clock. Prospective members are invited. 3d60

HAVELOCK NEWS NOTES

Havelock, March 17.—Mr. Jack Weir, of Norwood, was in town on Wednesday.

Miss Cleo Fowler is visiting with her grandmother, Mrs. Barrie, at Peterborough.

Mrs. Chas. Herrington is spending the week with friends at Peterborough.

Mr. George Barrie of Peterborough, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Fowler, on Wednesday.

Rev. Mr. Potter and Rev. Mr. Keith of Peterborough, were in town on Thursday atending a congregational meeting in the Presbyterian church, when business matters were discussed.

Mr. Wm. Barrie of Brockville, is spending a few days in town with his sister, Mrs. Jas. E. Fowler, on his way to Edmonton, Alta., where he will spend a short time with his mother, who resides there.

Mr. Samuel Wilson, who recently sold his farm, has taken up residence at Trent Bridge.

Mrs. H. C. Boswell and Miss Eva Boswell, of Ewa, Hawaii, are the guests of their cousin, Mrs. Harry Falkner.

Rev. Arthur Hagar, of Morewood, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Van Arman last week.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of St. John's Church hold their annual meeting at the Rectory on Wednesday afternoon last, with a very large attendance. Last year's report for the Ladies' Auxiliary was read by Mrs. Ed. Williams, and the Junior Auxiliary report was read by Mrs. Thos. Cummings. Both reports were most satisfactory, and show great progress in this work; also the membership is larger than in any other year, which goes to show that greater interest is being taken in the work. The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year:

President—Mrs. Harry Falkner.

Hon. President—Mrs. (Rev.) Holdsworth.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. Jas. E. Black.

Cor. Secretary—Mrs. Ed. Williams.

Treasurer—Mrs. Weymark.

Literature—Mrs. (Dr.) Holdcroft.

President of Junior Girls' Auxiliary—Mrs. Thos. Cummings.

All the members were appointed as a committee to visit the sick.

Before adjourning the members were served with cake and coffee.

Mrs. Wm. Henshall underwent a serious operation at her home on Thursday morning. Dr. Holdcroft, assisted by Dr. Ford, of Norwood, performed the operation. She is doing as well as can be expected, and her many friends hope for her speedy recovery to health again.

Mr. John Finlay, ex-M.P., of Norwood, was in town on Saturday.

Mrs. Henry Adams, of Peterborough, is the guest of Mrs. Sawyer.

Mr and Mrs. Jas. Foyler and children spent Sunday and Monday with the latter's mother, Mrs. Barrie, at Peterborough.

Mrs. Stewart and son, Leeman, of Governor, N. Y., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Chas. Herrington.

Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P.P., spent Sunday in Peterborough.

Rev. Mr. Stirling, pastor of the Presbyterian church, here, was taken to Toronto General Hospital on Friday morning last. Mr. Stirling's condition is somewhat serious. His many friends, for many he has made during his short stay in town, not only those of his own congregation, but of others also, regret his departure, but hope that God may see fit to restore him again to health.

Students will be sent each Sunday to fill the vacancy.

Mrs. A. E. Barrett entertained a few friends at her home on Friday evening.

Miss Mary Anderson, of Norwood, has been engaged to teach in the school here, in the vacancy caused by Miss Francis leaving.

Mr. P. O. Nelson spent Sunday with friends at Campbellford.

Mrs. Chas. Powers spent Sunday and Monday with friends at Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Ghent left on Tuesday to spend a short time with friends at Toronto.

Mrs. Webb is spending the week with friends at Peterborough.

Mrs. Simon Conkrite entertained a number of friends at her home on Monday night, when a most enjoyable time was spent by all.

A number from town drove out to a party at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Johnson on Friday night last. The evening was most enjoyably spent in card playing and dancing.

Miss Robson, of Norwood, was in town Tuesday.

Mr. Jack Weir, of Norwood, was in town Tuesday.

Mr. Packenham, of Norwood, was in town Tuesday.

Mr. T. E. Pace, of Cordova, was in town on Tuesday. While here his horses became frightened and ran away, heading in the direction of Cordova again.

Mr. Harry Thompson, of Trent Bridge, was successfully operated on by Dr. Holdcroft at the hospital here on Monday.

Halpany's orchestra, of Peterborough, have been engaged to supply music for the 'Big 5' Easter ball on Easter Monday night.

Mr. Jno. Maidens, of Belleville, a former resident of Havelock, was in town on Tuesday the guest of his daughter, Mrs. Wright.

Mr. Norman Campbell left on Thursday morning for Brandon, Man., where he has secured a position as salesman in one of the largest departmental stores in the city. His many friends in town wish him every success and prosperity.

the suggestions of the political party to which they owe no allegiance, than they are actuated by any desire to serve either their country of the Empire.

They are more inclined to treat the whole navy scheme as one submitted by their opponents, which must therefore be opposed, rather than regard the question as one upon which they should show their loyalty to the Empire by supporting.

Change of Front Unexplained.

Leaders of the Conservative party have not explained to the country why they announced a certain policy and expressed certain opinions last March, with regard to the navy, and why they now ask the country to accept another policy, and other opinions diametrically opposed to the first ones.

Not Edifying Spectacle.

It is not an edifying spectacle in public life to find leaders of a great party inviting the people to support them in a certain line of policy, and then within a few months' denouncing the same policy and expecting the people to support them in their inconsistency. Yet, this is the spectacle presented by the Conservative party to-day that is, of the new members of the party who find their way into the House of Commons.

In March last Mr. Borden was in favour of a Canadian navy and so were the rank and file of the party. Now, Sir Wilfrid Laurier has introduced a bill founded on the resolution unanimously passed by the House last March, and Mr. Borden heads his followers in rebellion against it.

No Public Interest Served.

It does not appear that any public interest is being served by opposing the Government in this matter, because the Government are responsible to the people and the Opposition are not responsible in the same sense. If the Government fail to pass the bill by reason of Opposition, the people hold the Government responsible, not the Opposition, who in this regard are not directly responsible to the people.

Always "Agin" the Government.

The present Opposition in Parliament are unique in one respect. They unite to oppose any Government measure. They give no adequate reasons, do not explain why they follow such a course, offer no alternative policy, but simply go against the Government without explanation or reason.

Why Sessions are Long.

It is this unreasonable obstruction to everything proposed by the Government which makes the Sessions so long and costly. If the Conservatives offered any useful suggestions, or amendments, their presence in the House might be regarded as useful to the people at large, but they have not this reason to offer.

An Absurd Contention.

One of the most absurd objections urged by the Conservatives against the Navy Bill is that it tends to separation. Another objection is, that the Navy is so small that it might be described as a "stay at home navy." These two objections cannot be reconciled.

Food for Thought.

Had the Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier laid plans for a navy consisting of several Dreadnoughts and auxiliaries, an immense fighting machine that might compete with other nations single-handed then the charge that separation was intended might be argued with some degree of reason. On the other hand how a country can successfully attempt separation by inaugurating what has been described as a "tin pot" navy, passes ordinary comprehension.

Tory Manner of Reasoning.

According to the Conservatives Canada establishes a small navy, sufficient for purposes of coast defence, and the defence of trade routes, and this means separation from the Empire. But according to the same authority, if Canada should commence now and lay down a navy that would be a formidable instrument of war, it does not mean separation from the Empire.

In other words if Canada does something for naval defence which will not help the Empire then it will help Canada to stand without the assistance of Great Britain.

But should Canada embark on a great naval building policy, this will bind her more strongly to the empire.

Logical Deduction.

The logical deduction being that the less able Canada is to stand alone the more she desires separation, and the better able she is to help herself and the more she requires the help of the mother country.

Any man with a logical mind would see in the establishment of a great Canadian navy the expression of a desire at some time in the future to be independent of outside help; and this is not inconsistent with loyalty to the empire, but no man with reasoning powers would regard the navy as contemplated in the bill before the House which provides for the nucleus of a navy, as a movement having for its object separation from the British Crown.

Undigested Views.

Yet these are the undigested views brought before the House by men whose very habits of life are contrary to careful thought upon a problem of this character. One of the strongest features of the debate which stands out prominently is, that men of little experience and no personal knowledge of the subject have given pronounced views on a situation they don't understand.

Reductio Ad Absurdum.

In England, the opinions and fears expressed by Conservative members from rural constituencies, men who never saw a battleship, and to whom the smallest cruiser contemplated in the Government programme would be a revelation of might and strength, must cause the greatest amusement.

Think of Canada saving the empire by borrowing $25,000,000 from England and then handing over the money to avert a crisis which doesn't exist!

Think of Canada jumping into the breach and offering the price of two Dreadnoughts, which could not be built in several years, to prevent Germany from blockading the port of London this summer!

Think of the effect on the British mind of Canada preserving the British Empire in face of an emergency which has never been seriously considered in England!

Think of the gratitude which Canada would provoke in England by a request for a loan of $25,000,000 to satisfy the English mind that Canadians are loyal to the Empire!

Imagine the comment of a phlegmatic, practical Britisher when he hears that Canada's idea of assisting the empire is to borrow money from England and then present it as a free gift, and decline to construct a navy for home defence!

The True Practical Idea.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has the true and practical idea. He intends to construct a navy in Canada with Canadian money, by Canadian working men.

He intends to construct dry docks and shipbuilding yards where vessels of war can be constructed and repaired.

He intends to found a naval college where young men may prepare themselves for a naval career.

He intends to do this so that in time of war Great Britain will be relieved of the task of sending a fleet to Canada to protect our coast and commerce. Sir Wilfrid has the true Canadian idea.

ENDS INDIGESTION IN A FEW MOMENTS

Gas, Heartburn, Headache and All Misery In Stomach Vanishes.

Nothing will remain undigested or sour on your stomach if you will take a little Diapepsin occasionally. This powerful digestive and antacid, though as harmless and pleasant as candy, will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you can eat.

Eat what your stomach craves, without the slightest fear of Indigestion or that you will be bothered with sour risings, belching, Gas on Stomach, Heartburn, Headaches from stomach, Nausea, Bad Breath, Water Brash or a feeling like you had swallowed a lump of lead, or other disagreeable miseries. Should you be suffering now from any stomach disorder you can get relief within five minutes.

If you will get from your pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin you could always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and your meals would taste good, because you would know there would be no Indigestion or Sleepless nights or Headache or Stomach misery all the next day; and, besides, you would not need laxatives or liver pills to keep your stomach and bowels clean and fresh.

Pape's Diapepsin can be obtained from your druggist, and contains more than sufficient to thoroughly cure the worst case of Indigestion or Dyspepsia. There is nothing better for Gas on the Stomach or sour odours from the stomach or to cure a Stomach Headache.

You couldn't keep a handier or more useful article in the house.

WERE ENTERTAINED

"Shamn Rhue" Company Were the Guests of Mr. Jas. Hickey Last Night.

The manager of the dramatic section of the T. A.S., Mr. James Hickey, showed his appreciataion by entertaining the company to a supper in Mr. T. Hooper's palm parlour. After supper, speeches were made by Mr. Geo. Lynch, Mr. Jas. O'Brien. Mr. Hickey congratulated the manager and the cast on the success with which they had handled the play. The evening closed by the singing of the

STORY OF THE OLD MAN'S CANNON

They were a group of old-timers, rehearsing old days, and I knew that yarns were being spun too good to miss, so I crowded in to listen. One of them, a grizzled old veteran, who looked as if he had seen exciting days, was speaking.

"Well, sir, he dropped in among us like a bolt from the sky. You see we had just left the Hollow with a big train and were heading for the foothills, a good many miles across the plains from where we started. It was in the days when the Apaches were thick as bees around a hive and every train went along with a big bunch of men looking out for things, and we always travelled in as big a train of waggons as we could get together without getting it too big. We made a fine start and had put a good many miles between us and the Hollow when the Injuns hit the tail of the train just as we were crossing the bed of an old stream and they stung us hard. We tumbled six of the men—one a young jolly chap—into sandy graves there and went on.

"As for us, we seemed to get hardly a chance to get back at them; they came up with a swoop and a rush, let us have a broadside and then were gone in a cloud of dust. The worst of it was that somewhere they had got hold of a lot of good rifles and they seemed, too, to have plenty of ammunition, for they gave us the benefit of a lot of it.

"We had the waggons to look out for, a long line of them, when on the march, and of course there were the women and the children. Sometimes it came pretty near being hell when they came in close long toward the end.

"As we drew near the hills they began to press us hard, getting bolder and taking big chances. The strain was beginning to tell on us, especially on the men who had youngsters and wives along. The best marksmen were given the brunt of the fighting to do, for the ordinary shot was useless in trying to hit a moving spot off a good many yards. Five of the best men were disabled and the rest were having such poor luck that it began to look as if we would have to bunch the waggons in a circle and make a last stand rather than slowly be shot away and left to bleach on the trail.

"You can bet it was a solemn looking little bunch that got together the morning of the last day before we started on the last hike for the hills. Lordy! I can see them now, way off in the distance, looming straight up into the sky, sort of calling us to hurry into their arms and there find shelter.

"But, no matter how we figured things looked pretty black: the men who had borne the brunt of the fighting were all in, and there was danger ahead and all around us. We had just about enough water to last us with careful use.

"Then, as I was saying, he dropped in among us. I can see him coming now, lean, lank, with a head of sandy, bleached hair, and a face that was a mass of wrinkles, with squinting eyes that one gets from too long looking over the bright desert. I knew he was not among the crowd when I first saw him, but where he did come from, way out there, is more than I could guess. But he enlightened us later.

"'Hullo,' he said, as much at home as any man could be.

"Henson, a sour, ugly chap, who was in charge of the train, stared at him. 'Whar in h—— did you come from?' he shot at him.

"'Aw, I got stranded back here a mile or two, over the ridge there, hoss died,' he added shortly, 'an' seein' you come along I came over to jine you.'

"I knew there was more in his story than he told, but the whole set of questions I was ready to ask him was knocked out by the way Henson turned on him. Evidently Henson's nerves were all in, and besides he seemed to think that the old man had been kicked out of some other train and had tagged us with the expectation of getting in with us. In those days there were a pile of them hanging around near the settlements without money and looking out for some chance, good or bad, to get to the hills and the gold; and old Henson thought he had one of them here, for he shot a few short sharp words at him that made the rest of us sit rather quiet.

"Henson told him that he didn't want any hanger on, any squealer, along with his outfit and that the best thing the old man could do was to leave.

"It set us to thinking some. Henson, in the nervous state he was in, having borne the burden of guiding the train, was saying things he would regret, some of the kinder hearted of us thought, so we broke in, and the result was that the old man was allowed to stay, though the addition of one of our number would only be another drawback, especially, as Henson put it in his sarcastic way, 'a man that couldn't shoot a gun if someone held it for him.'

"The old man evidently felt pretty bad over the way he had been received. I saw his eyes tighten as a man's will when he has been hurt, but we had no time for sympathy, and left him, to go to our own duties. I didn't see him the rest of the day. The Apaches struck us just as we rounded a knoll and we had our hands full, but I did not see the old man appear.

"That evening I heard someone say something about the old man's 'cannon,' and I went over to investigate. He was sitting near a chip fire, carefully polishing and rubbing a queer-looking implement in his hand. One or two of the men were watching him and having caught Henson's attitude were shooting various remarks at the old man that I knew hit hard. But he made no answer, simply kept on at work. I made out that the thing which he had in his hand was some sort of an implement of warfare, but what it was I did not know and when someone suggested the old man's 'cannon' the name stuck and the old man's 'cannon' it remained until—later.

"The next day brought us close to the foothills and we began to feel pretty sure of reaching them safely when, late in the afternoon a shout from the men in the rear passing along the line called our attention to the thing that was happening on a long slope far to our right. There, popping up in bunches over the ridge was forming a big band of Indians. Those who had hung on us all the way had been reinforced and the final rush was to be made. I shall never forget the look on Henson's face as he turned to me. Under his tan and burn there was a streak of white that made him look ghastly; and I—well, I was thanking my stars that I had no wife or kiddies in that train.

Over the whole train there seemed to fall a silence like that of a funeral, but it lasted only a moment and the orders were flying. We hurried the teams into a circle, got out what ammunition we had reserved for emergencies and made ready for the last bitter stand.

"Henson looked across to me from where he was arranging his cartridges and the look said plainly enough that in his opinion the game was up. I did not answer, for an answer was not necessary.

"So we waited, watching that big bunch of Apaches just beyond the reach of our rifles, preparing for the last rush. They wer riding around among each other, gesticulating and evidently talking over the celebration they would have after it was over. They could overwhelm us and they knew it—and so did we.

"Once one of the men farther down fired at them, but the attempt only brought back to us faint echoes of a shout of derision, and one of them, coming toward us a little way, pointed to where the spent bullet had landed, and we knew what his gestures signified.

"Then happening to glance around, I saw the old man squatted not far away busy doing something with his 'cannon.' Henson saw him at the same time and shot a few short, bitter words at him, but said nothing. Something in his attitude held me, however, and I kept very quiet, with my eyes on his work. He was putting pieces of metal together and finally, when it was all complete, it turned into something that looked like a long heavy rifle, fitted with peculiar sights. I saw him fondle it a moment as a man would something that he loves; then, with much care and precision, he stood up some sort of a rest or stand, and laid the 'cannon' across it. By this time Henson was watching him, too, with eyes that were full of a strange mixture of wonder and dislike.

"The old man leaned forward a little, his head sunk to bring his eyes over the sight. The rifle poised and steadied.

"The old man did not answer but the rifle held firm, and with the same thought Henson and I turned our eyes to the far-off ridge where the band was forming for the wild bloody rush through the train.

"For a moment I did not breathe. With a long, sharp crack the old man's gun spoke. With fingers clinched and a prayer on my lips I saw a figure shoot from a horse clear against the western sky and pitch in a heap to the ground. Then on that far ridge confusion broke loose, while the old man's strange repeating gun bit into them. Only a gun of extraordinary range could do what the old man's gun was now doing, and doing it well. To the distant Indians it must have seemed supernatural. Anyway, after a few moment's wild confusion they fled over the ridge in disorder, leaving tumbled heaps here and there as silent testimony to the old man's markmanship.

"I had sprung to my feet, as had Henson and the rest of the men who had been listening and seeing gathered around him. And it was Henson that led the great hearty cheer that went up from the beleaguered camp.

"The Indians came up once more, but the old man's long rifle spoke too much of mystery and wonder, they disappeared and evening found us safe in the shelter of the hills.

"The old man stayed with us quite a while, and he and Henson became as chummy as two men can who have come to understand each other, through trial and misunderstanding. He disappeared as mysteriously as he came one afternoon, taking with him the secret of his long-range rifle and our best wishes."

THE BROKEN DREAM

A Short Story.

The waiter led them down the room to a table at one of hte front windows and hovered obsequiously near, for his experienced eye made accurate appraisal of their bearing and he anticipated a generous tip.

Valerie sat down, lifted her veil, loosened her furs and drew off her gloves. She was very tired from her morning's shopping, and she gladly gave her weight to the chair under her. A slab of plate glass opposite showed her to be a little dull of skin, a little out of the perfect order in which she had set forth a few hours before. It showed also her husband's broad, well-clad shoulders, with his brown neck, smooth still for a man of his years, and fine gray head rising above them. Her glance shortened and rested upon him as he gravely considered the menu card in his hand.

"Well," he said, "what will you have, my dear?"

Valerie smiled. "Anything that is good and quickly to be had," she said. "I'm too hungry to make a choice. I'll leave it all to you, Timothy."

He gave the order. Then he drew two papers from his pocket and gave her one. Valerie opened it and glanced casually at the headings. Then her glance slipped from the page to the room, which she could see in its entirety by slightly turning her head. It presented a cheerful, busy scene. At nearly every table sat a woman or two wearing a new spring gown or hat, or both. They looke dhappy and at ease and chattered unrestrainedly as they ate or waited for the food they had ordered to be brought. Valerie felt a twinge of envy. It would be worth while surely to be as ugly as that old woman in green if one could enjoy life as she seemed to be enjoying it. How she was laughing! And at what? Why, simply because that preposterous old fellow, her husband, could not keep his glasses upon his nose. Would the time over come when she, too, could laugh at something so absurdly trivial? She could smile, of course—she had taught herself that—but as for laughing——

She sighed, and the paper dropped from her hand as her eyes roved over the long room with that seeking look in them which they had had ever since she came to the city. From the first she had thought, "surely I shall know him when I see him! No matter how much he ha schanged I shall know him." More than once she had started and felt her heart beat faster at the sight of a pair of eyes familiarly dark, or two white temples with thick hair waving from them. But there had inevitably followed the disappointment of being assured it was not he.

Of course, he had changed from what he had been that dear, remembered summer, when they had met and fallen in love. Oh, that was an ideal time of youth and joy and romance and darling expectancy! To marry and live together always—that had been their hope and plan. But Valerie's mother had interfered.

"I can't have it," she had said.

Otonabee Navigation Company Make Plans For Coming Season

Have Arranged a Complete Change of Time Table This Season, With Arrangements Completed for a Connecting Line With the Railways.

THE NEW ROUTES

The Otonabee Navigation Company has completed arrangements for next season's operations, and a better service will be inaugurated than has heretofore existed. The company has acquired another steamer, making five in all. These boats are being overhauled and put in first-class shape lor next season's business.

Under the new arrangement a steamer will leave Gore's Landing and other Rice Lake points every morning, arriving in Peterborough in time to connect with the mid-day trains from Toronto and western points. The boat will then proceed to Stoney Lake, arriving there early in the evening, and remaining until about 11.30 a.m., making close connections and giving ample time to make all necessary calls among the islands in both upperand lower Stoney Lake.

sary calls among the islands in both upper and lower Stoney Lake.

A boat will leave Stony Lake daily

ROBERT PINCHIN,

about 11.30 a.m., making close connections at Peterborough with C.P.R. and Grand Trunk, and reaching Rice Lake about 7 p.m., where it will remain until the following morning.

Another boat will leave Crowe's Landing and all intermediate points for Bobcaygeon, arriving there at 12 o'clock, connecting with the C.P.R. Leaving again at 1.15, she will arrive at Burleigh Falls at 4 p.m. and other points on upper and lower Stoney Lake a little later.

On the Lindsay division a splendid service has been arranged between Lindsay and Sturgeon Point, as well as Bobcaygeon, Fenelon Falls and Coboconk.

The splendid new twin screw excursion steamer Otonabee will handle the excursion business as heretofore, between Rice Lake and Lindsay, as well as intermediate points.

The company has engaged a permanent manager in the person of Mr. Robt. Pinchin, who will give the business his undivided attention. Mr. Pinchin intends moving his family to Peterborough in the near future and will become a permanent resident of this city.

The company has another steamer under construction, which will be put on the route between Lake Simcoe and Bobcaygeon. This boat will not be completed in time for work this season, but will be ready for next year. The following are the names of the company's steamers and their masters :

Otonabee, Capt. W. H. White.

Medivale, Burleigh and Bobcaygeon Division.

Steamer Carmana, (under construction.)

W. H. Robertson, President.

J. E. Henderson, Vice-President.

W. H. ROBERTSON,
President of The Otonabee Navigation Company.

CAPT. W. H. WHITE,
Marine Superintendent of the Otonabee Navigation Company.

Robt. Pinchin, General Manager.
Capt. W. H. White, Marine Superintendent.
Capt. Geo. D. Frewer, Director.

Swindle on Bank.

New York, March 19.—Charles M. Meeker and Albert Thompson, the former of Brooklyn, and the latter of South Orange, N.J., are under arrest here charged with a new international swindle. The police say Thompson deposited in the People's Bank of South Orange a draft for 107 pounds sterling, drawn to Meeker's order on The London Commercial Banking Co. The draft was good, it was found by cable inquiries, but it is alleged that after payment on it had been advanced, Meeker cabled to London ordering payment stopped. The bank is therefore out the amount of the advance—approximately $535.

Hope For Settlement.

Philadelphia, March 19.—Although Thursday's many conferences were apparently fruitless, all hope of an early settlement of the street car strike has not been abandoned. The principal hitch in bringing the Philadelphia Rapid Transit directors and the men together is over the question of reinstating all the strikers, including the 175 men who were dismissed before the strike was declared. If an agreement can be reached on this question, it is believed the union will instruct all its men to return and then appoint committees to take upgrievances with the company.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

"It would serve no purpose and might do harm. I will take the responsibility."

"Zmai ——; travels as Peter Ludovic."

Armitage carried the envelope which he had cut from Chauvenet's coat pinned into an inner pocket of his waistcoat, and since boarding the King Edward he had examined it twice daily to see that it was intact. The three red wax seals were in blank, replacing those of like size that had originally been affixed to the envelope, and at once after the attack on the dark deck he opened the packet and examined the papers, some half-dozen sheets of thin linen written in a clerk's clear hand in black ink. There had been no mistake in the matter. The packet which Chauvenet had purloined from the old prime minister at Vienna had come again into Armitage's hands. He was daily tempted to destroy it and cast it in bits to the sea winds, but he was deterred by the remembrance of his last interview with the old prime minister.

"Do something for Austria—something for the empire." These phrases repeated themselves over and over again in his mind until they rose and fell with the cadence of the high, wavering voice of the cardinal archbishop of Vienna as he chanted the mass of requiem for Count Ferdinand von Stroebel.

Chapter VIII.

"THE KING IS DEAD; LONG LIVE THE KING!"

JOHN ARMITAGE lingered in New York for a week, not to press the Claibornes too closely, then went to Washington. He wrote himself down on the register of the New American as John Armitage, Cinch Tight, Mont., and took a suit of rooms high up, with an outlook that swept Pennsylvania avenue.

It was on the evening of a bright April day that he thus established himself, and after he had unpacked his belongings he stood long at the window and watched the lights leap out of the dusk over the city. He was in Washington because Shirley Claiborne lived there, and he knew that even if he wished to do so he could no longer throw an air of inadvertence into his meetings with her. He had been very lonely in those days when he first saw her abroad. The sight of her had lifted his mood of depression, and now, after those enchanted hours at sea, his coming to Washington had been inevitable.

Many things passed through his mind as he stood at the open window. His life, he felt, could never be again as it had been before, and he sighed deeply as he recalled his talk with the old prime minister at Geneva. Then he laughed quietly as he remembered Chauvenet and Durand and the dark house on the Boulevard Froissart, but the further recollection of the attack made on his life on the deck of the King Edward sobered him, and he turned away from the window impatiently. He had seen the sick second cabin passenger leave the steamer at New York, but had taken no trouble either to watch or to avoid him. Very likely the man was under instructions and had been told to follow the Claibornes home, and the thought of their identification with himself by his enemies angered him. Chauvenet was likely to appear in Washington at any time and would undoubtedly seek the Claibornes at once. The fact that the man was a scoundrel might in some circumstances have afforded Armitage comfort, but here again Armitage's mood grew dark. Jules Chauvenet was undoubtedly a rascal of a shrewd and dangerous type, but who, pray, was John Armitage?

The bell in his entry rang, and he flashed on the lights and opened the door.

"Well, I like this, setting yourself up here in gloomy splendor and never saying a word. You never deserved to have any friends, John Armitage!"

"Jim Sanderson, come in!" Armitage grasped the hands of a red bearded giant of forty, the possessor of alert brown eyes and a big voice.

Senator Sanderson.

"It's my rural habit of reading the register every night in search of constituents that brings me here. They said they guessed you were in, so I just came up to see whether you were opening a poker game or had come to sneak a claim past the watchdog of the treasury."

The caller threw himself into a chair and rolled a fat, unlighted cigar about in his mouth. "You're a peach, all right, and as offensively hale and handsome as ever. When are you going to the ranch?"

"Well, not just immediately. I want to sample the fleshpots for a day or two."

"You're getting soft; that's what the matter with you. You're afraid of the spring zephyrs on the Montana range. Well, I'll admit that it's rather more diverting here."

"There is no debating that, senator. How do you like being a statesman? It was so sudden and all that. I read an awful roast of you in an English paper. They took your election to the senate as another evidence of the complete domination of our politics by the plutocrats."

Sanderson winked prodigiously.

"The papers have rather skinned me; but, on the whole, I'll do very well. They say it isn't respectable to be a senator these days, but they oughtn't to hold it up against a man that he's rich. If the Lord put silver in the mountains of Montana and let me dig it out, it's nothing against me, is it?"

"Decidedly not! And if you want to invest it in a senatorship it's the Lord's hand again."

"Why, sure!" And the senator from Montana winked once more. "But it's expensive. I've got to be elected again next winter—I'm only filling out Billings' term—and I'm not sure I can go up against it."

"But you are nothing if not unselfish. If the good of the country demands it you'll not falter, if I know you."

"There's hot water heat in this hotel, so please turn off the hot air. I saw your foreman in Helena the last time I was out there, and he was sober. I mention the fact, knowing that I'm jeopardizing my reputation for veracity, but it's the Lord's truth. Of course you spent Christmas at the old home in England—one of those yule log and plum pudding Christmases you read of in novels. You Englishmen"—

"My dear Sanderson, don't call me English! I've told you a dozen times that I'm not English."

"So you did, so you did! I'd forgotten that you're so sensitive about it," and Sanderson's eyes regarded Armitage intently for a moment, as though he were trying to recall some previous discussion of the young man's nativity.

"I offer you free swing at the bar, senator. May I summon a Montana cocktail? You taught me the ingredients once—three dashes orange bitters, two dashes acid phosphate, half a jigger of whisky and half a jigger of Italian vermuth. You undermined the constitutions of half Montana with that mess."

"The sprinkling cart for me! I've got a nerve specialist engaged by the year to keep me out of sanitariums. See here, I want you to go with us tonight to the secretary of state's push. Not many of the Montana boys get this far from home, and I want you for exhibition purposes. Say, John, when I saw "Cinch Tight, Montana," written on the register down there it increased my circulation seven beats! You're all right, and I guess you're about as good an American as they make—anywhere—John Armitage!"

The function for which the senator from Montana provided an invitation for Armitage was a large affair in honor of several new ambassadors. At 10 o'clock Senator Sanderson was introducing Armitage right and left as one of his representative constituents. Armitage and he owned adjoining ranches in Montana, and Sanderson called upon his neighbor to stand up boldly for their state before the minions of effete monarchies.

Mrs. Sanderson had asked Armitage to return to her for a little Montana talk, as she put it, after the first rush of their entrance was over, and as he waited in the drawing room for an opportunity of speaking to her he chatted with Franzel, an attache of the Austrian embassy, to whom Sanderson had introduced him. Franzel was a gloomy young man with a monocle, and he was waiting for a particular girl, who happened to be the daughter of the Spanish ambassador. And this being his object, he had chosen his position with care, near the door of the drawing room, and Armitage shared for the moment the advantage that lay in the Austrian's point of view. Armitage had half expected that the Claibornes would be present at a function as comprehensive of the higher official world as this, and he intended asking Mrs. Sanderson if she knew them as soon as opportunity offered. The Austrian attache proved tiresome, and Armitage was about to drop him, when suddenly he caught sight of Shirley Claiborne at the far end of the broad hall. Her head was turned partly toward him. He saw her for an instant through the throng. Then his eyes fell upon Chauvenet at her side, talking with liveliest animation. He was not more than her own height, and his profile presented the clean, sharp effect of a cameo. The vivid outline of his dark face held Armitage's eyes. Then as Shirley passed on through an opening in the crowd her escort turned, holding the way open for her, and Armitage met the man's gaze.

It was with an accented gravity that Armitage nodded his head to some declaration of the melancholy attache at this moment. He had known when he left Geneva that he had not done with Jules Chauvenet, but the man's prompt appearance surprised Armitage. He ran over the names of the steamers by which Chauvenet might easily have sailed from either a German or a French port and reached Washington quite as soon as himself. Chauvenet was in Washington, at any rate, and not only there, but socially accepted and in the good graces of Shirley Claiborne.

The somber attache was speaking of the Japanese.

"They must be crushed—crushed," said Franzel. The two had been conversing in French.

"Yes, he must be crushed," returned Armitage absentmindedly, in English; then, remembering himself, he repeated the affirmation in French, changing the pronoun.

Mrs. Sanderson was now free. She was a pretty, vivacious woman, much younger than her stalwart husband—a college graduate whom he had found teaching school near one of his silver mines.

"Welcome once more, constituent! We're proud to see you, I can tell you. Our host owns some marvelous tapestries, and they're hung out tonight for the world to see." She guided Armitage toward the secretary's gallery on an upper floor. Their host was almost as famous as a connoisseur as for his achievements in diplomacy, and the gallery was a large apartment in which every article of furniture, as well as the paintings, tapestries and specimens of pottery, was the careful choice of a thoroughly cultivated taste.

"It isn't merely an art gallery. It's the most beautiful room in America," murmured Mrs. Sanderson.

"I can well believe it. There's my favorite Vibert—I wondered what had become of it."

"It isn't surprising that the secretary is making a great reputation by his dealings with foreign powers. It's a poor ambassador who could not be persuaded after an hour in this splendid room. The ordinary affairs of life should not be mentioned here. A king's coronation would not be out of place—in fact, there's a chair in the corner against that Gobelin that would serve the situation. The old gentleman by that cabinet is the Baron von Marhof, the ambassador from Austria-Hungary. He's a brother-in-law of Count von Stroebel, who was murdered so horribly in a railway carriage a few weeks ago."

"Ah, to be sure! I haven't seen the baron in years. He has changed little."

"Then you knew him—in the old country?"

"Yes; I used to see him—when I was a boy," remarked Armitage.

Mrs. Sanderson glanced at Armitage sharply. She had dined at his ranch house in Montana and knew that he lived like a gentleman; that his house, its appointments and service were unusual for a western ranchman. And she recalled, too, that she and her husband had often speculated as to Armitage's antecedents and history without arriving at any conclusion in regard to him.

The room had slowly filled, and they strolled about, dividing attention between distinguished personages and the not less celebrated works of art.

Heart Trouble Cured.

Through one cause or another a large majority of the people are troubled with some form of heart trouble.

The system becomes run down, the heart palpitates, you have weak and dizzy spells, a smothering feeling, cold clammy hands and feet, shortness of breath, sensation of pins and needles, rush of blood to the head, etc.

Wherever there are sickly people with weak hearts Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will be found an effective medicine.

Heart Trouble Cured.

Mrs. Wm. Elliott, Angus, Ont., writes. "It is with the greatest of pleasure I write you stating the benefit I have received by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly from heart trouble, weakness and smothering spells. I used a great deal of doctors' medicines but received no benefit. A friend advised me to buy a box of your pills, which I did, and soon found great relief. I highly recommend these pills to anyone suffering from heart trouble."

The Firm Behind NA-DRU-CO

Medicinal and Toilet Preparations

When your doctor gives you a prescription and your druggist fills it, you have confidence in that medicine. You have good reason for that confidence, for behind the medicine is the professional skill as well as the honor of two men whom you know and respect.

When you buy what are ordinarily known as patent medicines at your druggist's, what guarantee have you of either the formulæ or the compounding? Your druggist can give you none, for the makers do not take him into their confidence.

Take for instance headache cures. Many people hesitate to buy them because they don't know what may be in them. Not so with NA-DRU-CO Headache Wafers. Your druggist can get the list of ingredients from us for the asking.

Head Office: 46 King Street, West TORONTO

The Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Imperial Guarantee & Accident Insurance Company of Canada, was held at the Head Office, 46 King Street West, Toronto, on the 10th inst.

Mr. E. W. Cox, President of the Company, in reviewing the business of the year, made reference to the growing popularity of Accident Insurance, and its effect on the success of the business of the Company during the year. The amount of Insurance written was over $26,270,000.00, an increase of $1,940,000.00 over the business taken out in 1908. This is considered exceptionally satisfactory in view of the fact that the business of the Company is confined to Personal Accident and Guarantee Insurance.

The Gross Income for 1909 amounted to $219,741.76.

That being an increase over the year 1908 of $4,817.34.

The Assets now total $206,974.00, and, after allowing for Reserve for unearned premium calculated on the full Government standard, and all other liabilities, the surplus for the protection of policyholders has increased to $213,447.19.

The following Directors and Officers were elected:

Edward W. Cox, President. Hon. F. T. Frost.
Noel Marshall, Vice-President. R. Bickerdike.
Hon. Geo. A. Cox. W. D. Robb.
Elias Rogers. J. J. Kenny.
Dr. P. G. Goldsmith. S. Burrows.

Do You Realize?

That despondency in women is a mental condition often traceable to some distinctly female ill!

Women who are well do not have the blues, neither are they irritable and restless. Derangement of the female organism breeds all kinds of miserable feelings such as backache, headache, and bearing-down feelings. Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. There is no doubt that it has made many remarkable cures of female ills after all other means had failed. There is hardly a day that some woman does not write us that this simple old medicine, made only of roots and herbs, has cured her of a severe illness after several doctors had done their best and failed.

Belleville, Ont.—"I was so weak and worn out from a female weakness that I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took several bottles of it, and I gained strength so rapidly that it seemed to make a new woman of me. I can do as good a day's work as I ever did. I sincerely bless the day that I made up my mind to take your medicine for female weakness, and I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kind letters, as I certainly profited by them. I give you permission to publish this any time you wish."—Mrs. Albert Wickett, Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

Rockland, Me.—"I was troubled for a long time with pains in my back and side and was miserable in every way. I had doctored until I was discouraged and thought I would never get well. I read a testimonial about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thought I would try it.

"After taking three bottles I never was so well in my life. I am recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all my friends."—Mrs. Will Young, 6 Columbia Avenue, Rockland, Me.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

GLOVE THAT MAY BE BOILED.

New Process Makes Perfect Cleansing Possible.

Chamois gloves will be widely worn throughout the winter, and all who favor these durable gloves will be pleased to know that the manufacturers have been able to prepare a chamois glove that is boilable. Although it is said that the kid may be actually boiled without ill results, the wiser plan will be to do the cleansing with hot water if necessary and avoid boiling.

These gloves are made to slip over the hand and are about six button length. A small strip of elastic at the wrist on the front of the hand is the means of giving a snug fit there. The elastic is guaranteed washable also.

There are plain chamois gloves for use with severely tailored suits in the morning and nattier designs for afternoon of important day occasions.

A novelty is a heavy suede glove. This should be popular, as this kind of kid has a tendency to make the hand look small, and, with the improvements in manufacture, it is superior in wearing qualities to the old time suede.

Glace kid is preferred for evening in sixteen and twenty button lengths, although suede, too, will be used. The latter is a little less expensive.

The newest colorings are pale yellow, ocher, primrose, banana, maize and white. There are a few delicate colors kept in stock, but it is not expected there will be much demand for them except to match costumes.

As the fashionable colors are few, so are the designs, there being no decoration of any kind upon the newest gloves.

The kid certainly is of the finest texture, but the only ornamentations are the plainly stitched back and pearl buttons for closing. Embroideries and fancy stitching are entirely absent.

The new castor gloves for winter include the usual shades—gray, taupe and mode tones. They are all short, being a glove for hard wear.

There is a heavy dogskin that closes with one clasp that is both smart looking and practical.

Pique may be bought in all the shades seen in the castor gloves, as well as white and the pale yellow tones. Black will probably be worn later on, but for the present there is no demand for this hue except by those wearing mourning.

Suede gloves are always worn for first mourning. In second or slight mourning it is a question of choice whether glace or suede kid is used.

Necessity of Air Baths.

The conditions and conventions of our civilization demand frequent bathing. Any one suspected of avoiding a daily bath would quickly find himself persona non grata in decent society. It is popularly supposed that frequent bathing is essential to health. This is quite untrue. Much of the benefit attributed to the water is in reality due to the complete exposure of the skin to the air. The respiratory function of the skin is of high importance, and, although water may be dispensed with, closing the pores to air would result in speedy asphyxiation.—New York Medical Journal.

A Dreaded Contingency.

A young girl of fourteen was taking a trip on Lake Michigan in a small steamer. The lake was somewhat rough, and many were seasick. The girl sat in the bow and was unusually quiet for her. "Are you feeling sick, daughter?" inquired her father. "No; I don't think I am sick, but I should hate to yawn."—Life.

Blocking Him.

"Say, old man," began Borroughs, "lend me your ear for awhile, will you?"

"My friend," replied Wise, shrewdly suspecting a touch, "I'd gladly lend you both of them; then I wouldn't be able to hear you ask me to lend you anything else."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Why He Gave Nothing.

"I've encountered many an excuse for 'sidestepping' the collection basket in church," remarked a Jersey commuter, "but the prize excuse came to me last Sunday out in our town. Next to me in church sat an acquaintance who had taken out a dollar bill, but when he saw the collector was a substitute for the regular brother he put the money back in his pocket. I taxed him with it good naturedly on the way out, and he was very frank.

"'You needn't publish it,' said he, 'but I know that man pretty well. Now, I happen to owe him $5, and he's dunning me unnecessarily for it. I know him so well that I know if I put that dollar bill in the basket he'd find a way to abstract it and pocket it as part of what I owe him. And he'd really feel he was justified too. That's the way he's built, don't you see.'"—New York Globe.

Rebuking a Greenhorn.

A whist expert discussed at a dinner those overconfident and foolish persons who think they can learn whist in a year or two.

"Such persons should be called to order," the expert said sternly. "I for one am always glad to see them called to order. A young greenhorn stood behind my partner during a game one night. At the end of the hand the greenhorn said:

"'Why didn't you lead hearts? That's what I'd have done.'

"My partner smiled and answered:

"'Ah, but you, my young friend, have the world before you and none but yourself to consider. You have no wife and family dependent on you for bread, and if you lose heavily no one suffers but yourself. With me it is different; hence I led spades.'"

LA GRIPPE

Arrested, and Consumption Cured

Mr. G. D. Colwell, of Walkerville, Ontario, was stricken down with La Grippe in 1906 and it left him in very bad condition. He says: I was all run down and bordering on Consumption. I could not sleep at nights, had awful sweats, and coughed nearly the whole time. This is how I was when I began to take Psychine, in a low nervous state; but from the first bottle I began to improve. It did marvels for me and brought me back to health in no time, making a new man of me. It fortifies the body against the attacks of La Grippe and is a sure preventative. PACKING MADE EASY.

There wouldn't be so many tired and cross women to start away on journeys if they would only exercise a little gumption and common sense about the way in which they pack their trunks. The average woman seems to think that she must break her back putting things in a trunk that stands on the floor. How seldom one sees a trunk elevated at a convenient height to obviate stooping over it in a back breaking fashion! Yet two chairs placed at proper distance apart will do the trick, or a steamer trunk may safely be packed on a strong table. Just try these methods the next time you are packing and see what a difference there is in convenience and comfort. Of course there are expensive trunks that open bureau style, with hat boxes and drawers on one side and hangers for gowns on the other, that make the work of packing a positive pleasure, but it is the exceptional woman who is fortunate enough to possess one of these treasures.

SHE DOESN'T HAVE TO STOOP—TO CONQUER.

THE RIBBON SANDWICH.

An unusually pretty sandwich is of the "ribbon" variety, says the Delineator. To make it cut five slices of white bread about half an inch thick and spread each with softened sweet butter before slicing it from the loaf. Trim off the crust from the slices and shape the latter into squares of even size, about 3 by 3 inches.

Lay each slice, buttered side up, upon a pastry board. Spread the first one with cream cheese rubbed smooth with minced parsley and cress, the latter previously sprinkled very slightly with lemon juice. Cover the next slice with a thin layer of smoked tongue freed from skin and gristle. Strew the third with riced yoke of a hard egg seasoned with salt, pepper and a bit of dry mustard and put a layer of smoked salmon or of rosy ham on the fourth slice.

Pile the slices one upon the other evenly and in the order mentioned and top them with the fifth slice laid with the buttered side downward. Wrap carefully in a cheesecloth binder which has been slightly dampened and weight with a book for an hour or so.

When ready to serve remove the cheesecloth and divide the little brick into thin slices, cutting downward with a keen edged carving knife. The result will be a square formed of half inch strips of bread pressed together and crossed by lines of green, red, yellow and pink. A different style of ribbon sandwich is made with a number of slices of brown bread and of white bread piled alternately, each slice previously spread with cream cheese blended with finely minced nuts and overlaid with a crisp leaf of lettuce. When sliced downward the sandwich shows a pretty medley of brown and white crossed with hair lines of light green.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Children who suffer from swelling of the glands should have abundance of fresh air both by day and night and a complete change of air as often as possible. Plenty of good, nourishing food should be given them, and cod liver oil or emulsion is also helpful in putting things right.

Women who have prominent ears may modify their size by the individual dressing of the hair, bringing it low and partially concealing them. At night a rubber bandage may be employed, which is brought down to cover the ears and a piece adjusted at the back to hold it in place.

A simple exercise which may be indulged in at almost any time of day when the woman is at leisure is the contraction and expansion of the abdomen to keep it flat. Sit very erect in a chair or stand with the shoulders well back. Clasp the hands across the abdomen and without moving any other part of the body quickly contract the abdominal muscles. Hold a second and then relax quickly. Do not lift the chest in the exercise.

Nothing is uglier than a skin that is coarsened by enlarged pores. With all one's care it is bound to get clogged and add blackheads to its unsightliness. A good lotion that has been known to relieve this tendency in many instances is made by mixing one dram of boric acid with four ounces of witch hazel. Apply night and morning. Any one with pores of this kind should make it a point to use an astringent wash of some kind after the face has been washed in hot water, as the heat opens the pores.

ANOTHER MIRACLE IN NOVA SCOTIA

Thought the Disease was Cancer of the Stomach

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Cured Him

SYDNEY MINES, N. S., JANUARY 25TH 1910

"For many years I suffered torture from Indigestion and Dyspepsia. Two years ago, I was so bad that I vomited my food constantly. The agony I endured all these years, I cannot describe and I lost over 25 pounds in weight. I also suffered with Constipation which made the stomach trouble worse. I consulted physicians, as I was afraid the disease was cancer but medicine gave only temporary relief and then the disease was as bad as ever.

I read in the "Maritime Baptist" about "Fruit-a-tives" and the cures this medicine was making and I decided to try it. After taking three boxes, I found a great change for the better and now I can say "Fruit-a-tives" has entirely cured me when every other treatment failed, and I reverently say 'Thank God for Fruit-a-tives'!!"

REPRIMANDED.

By Foxcroft Davis

LIEUTENANT HALKETT, in command of the United States torpedo boat Gaddy, in the harbor of Hong Kong, was bound upon a very delicate international mission up the Pearl River and was receiving his last instructions from Admiral Cotesworth in the cabin of the flagship.

The Admiral, a short, fiery man, was not averse to collisions; in fact, he courted them.

"Here," said the Admiral, handing to Halkett a large official envelope, "are your official instructions. They will do to show. Understand?" The Admiral winked.

"Yes," replied Halkett, who could not wink at an Admiral, but could nod intelligently.

"Now," continued the Admiral, "you are directed in those instructions to make a thorough investigation into the alleged carrying off by force from the ground of the British Consulate at Hwang-Kwo of John MacBean, a Scotch engineer, by the Hon. Lucius Quintius Curtius Gowdy, American Vice Consul at Hwang-Kwo, and to report to me. You are especially directed to act in concert with the local authorities and the British Consul. It's a pretty serious business to get into a row with a British representative in the East, as you know, and it shows that Gowdy, the American Vice Consul, knew about as much concerning his business as a horse knows about playing the fiddle. Damn the whole lot of 'em, I say."

To this Halkett nodded a silent approval.

"What you really have to do," the Admiral kept on with an impressive forefinger, "is to earn for yourself an official reprimand for overzeal. I'll see to it that it is taken off your record at the Navy Department. The fact is, Gowdy and MacBean got into a row in the grounds of the British Consulate about the Lord knows what. Gowdy, who is from the bad lands down on the Arkansas River and is a giant, grabbed MacBean and dragged him across the public square into the American Vice Consulate, and MacBean hasn't been seen since. The British Consul, Mr. George Frederick Reginald Lascelles, saw it all from his bedroom window and heard MacBean yelling for help. The Consul was shaving, and before he could wipe the lather off his face and get down stairs MacBean had disappeared into the American Vice Consulate.

"Mr. Lascelles went over to the American Vice Consulate and demanded an explanation. Gowdy was impudent and refused to give any explanation of his conduct or what had become of MacBean. Lascelles did the only thing possible—reported it to the Consul General at Hong Kong. The cruiser Dryad was just about going up to Hwang-Kwo—British cruisers are always in the act of going to places where they may be useful. So the British Consul General is sending a man up there on the Dryad to investigate the matter. Meanwhile Gowdy telegraphs privately, asking for a torpedo boat or something to come up, as there are signs of a native uprising—I think everything is as quiet as a Scotch Sunday.

"So you are to go up there, and get there at least six hours in advance of the Dryad, and get Gowdy out of the hole as best you can. Be particular not to investigate anything, but just take Gowdy's word for everything and stand pat. Avoid seeing the British Consul if you can. Bring Gowdy down here and I'll try to persuade him to ask for a six months' leave of absence from the Department of State, and I will cable privately that Gowdy is making trouble and ought to be recalled, so his request will probably be granted.

"When you come back and the row becomes general you can be reprimanded, you know, for overzeal. That's a little trick we have learned. It is what Stubbs, the quartermaster, calls an abomination unto the Lord and a very present help in time of trouble.

"Now be off! I've known an officer to receive an official reprimand from his flag officer one day and be recommended for promotion the next—all for overzeal."

"I'll try my best to earn that reprimand," said Halkett, smiling, and then bowed himself out of the cabin. Ten minutes later he was aboard the Gaddy, which was snorting and puffing for her dash up the river.

The harbor of Hong Kong is remarkably beautiful in fine weather, and fine weather it was. In the golden May morning the war ships of many nations lay at anchor, civil to one another, but menacing. Close by the little Gaddy lay the big Dryad. She had just finished coaling and her coaling canvases were hung in the rigging to whip themselves clean. Halkett knew to a fraction what the Dryad could do. She had not been docked for six months and was fourteen years old, quite an old maid of a cruiser. Fourteen knots was her best at present, but the Gaddy, of the very last batch of torpedo boats, could log it at a twenty-five knot gait under forced draught and without regard to coal.

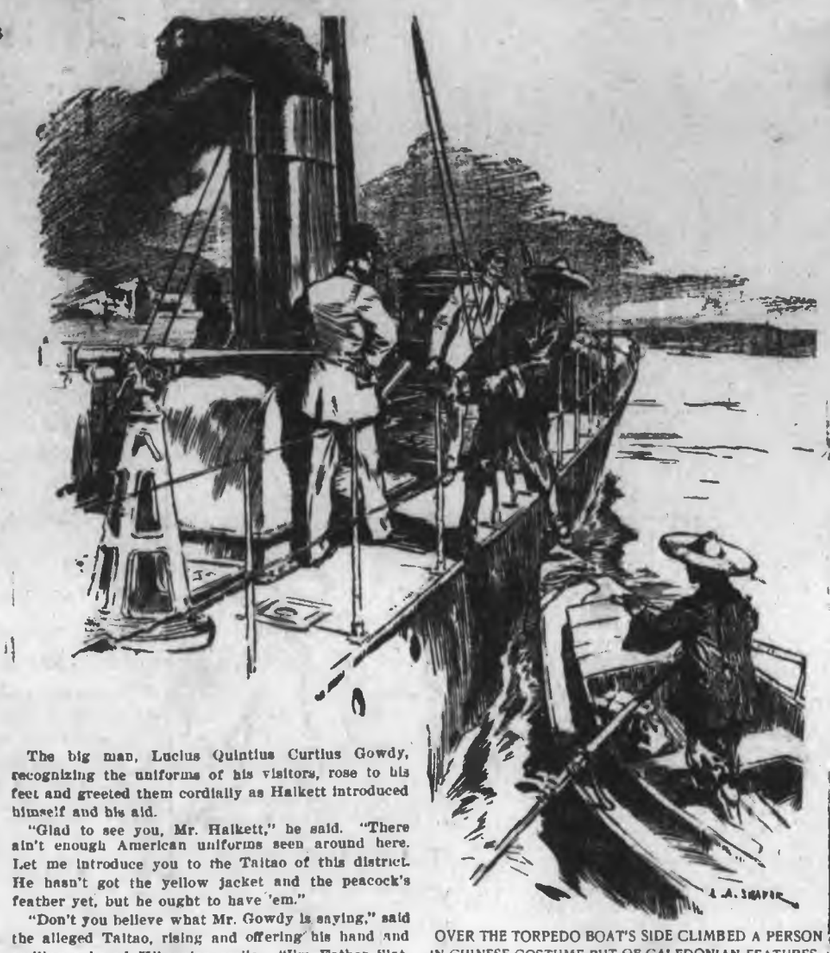
She started off, however, quite leisurely, and not until she was a good three miles from the eyes of the Dryad did she suddenly shoot ahead and go tearing up the Pearl River like a rabbit running from the hunters.

Hwang-Kwo is exactly 136 miles from Hong Kong, and just at six o'clock, in the softest hour of the glowing afternoon, the Gaddy, still breathing hard, tossed her anchor overboard in the harbor of Hwang-Kwo. As the cable shot out the launch dropped into the water, and, with Halkett and a midshipman in it, ran out as fast as she could to the landing. Ford, the midshipman, a pink and white boy on his two years' cruise, looked and felt extremely important.

Not a war ship was visible except the Gaddy, which made Halkett's youthful heart jump for joy. Half a dozen flagstaffs rose from houses in the square. This denoted consulates. The hours of work being over, none of these flagstaffs but one showed a flag. From the biggest and tallest of them floated still a huge American flag as big as the mainsail of an old fashioned frigate. This, Halkett knew, was the abiding place of the Hon. Lucius Quintius Curtius Gowdy, Vice Consul of the United States of America.

The Vice Consulate, however, was by no means an imposing building, being a one story house, with barred windows and the general aspect of a jail. Nevertheless Halkett, with his midshipman aid, felt like an admiral going to pay his official call upon an equal.

The door of the Vice Consulate stood wide open, and as Halkett entered he discerned a six foot three giant, sitting in his shirt sleeves and conversing amiably with an individual in Chinese dress.



The big man, Lucius Quintius Curtius Gowdy, recognizing the uniforms of his visitors, rose to his feet and greeted them cordially as Halkett introduced himself and his aid.

"Glad to see you, Mr. Halkett," he said. "There ain't enough American uniforms seen around here. Let me introduce you to the Taitao of this district. He hasn't got the yellow jacket and the peacock's feather yet, but he ought to have 'em."

"Don't you believe what Mr. Gowdy is saying," said the alleged Taitao, rising and offering his hand and smiling a broad Hibernian smile. "I'm Father Slattery, of the missionary station here, born and bred in Fall River, Mass., and sent out here to preach the Gospel to the heathen and the consuls."

At this little Ford's eyes nearly jumped out of his head, but Halkett, who knew the missionary custom of wearing native dress, was not at all surprised, and he shook the reverend gentleman's hand with great cordiality.

"You see," continued the Vice Consul frankly, "we've been having a hell of a time here. The muddle all came about this way:—You see, all the steamers in this part of the world have Scotch engineers. It's perfectly safe to call down the engine room hatch, 'Hello, Mac!' and the whole engine room force will come tumbling up the hatch. Well, MacBean and I were good friends—he's a fine judge of whiskey, is MacBean. He told me that the Presbyterian preachers in Glasgow, his native town, used often on Sunday to preach against drunken men, saying 'drunkenness may lead to vice.' But MacBean is sober, for a Scotchman, and, strange to say, very thrifty. He was chief engineer on one of the big river boats that got burned up last month, and while waiting for another regular steamer to be sent out to take her place he got a holiday. So he came to Hwang-Kwo.

"John got to worrying because he wasn't making but half wages for a whole month, so I said to him one night, when the whiskey got low, 'Why don't you raffle yourself off among all these women here, John?' Now, a very remarkable state of affairs, Mr. Halkett, exists in the European colony at Hwang-Kwo. In every other European colony in China there are more men than women, more bachelors than spinsters, but here there is a regular famine of bachelors. All the European men are married and they all have old maid sisters and spinster daughters. You never saw anything like it.

"Then as to merry widows, there are so many of them here that I can't help thinking some of them made away with their husbands. There is a big boarding house run by Mrs. MacNab, the widow of a Scotch engineer, with two maiden sisters and three unmarried daughters, and there is a European shop here conducted by half a dozen widows of various civil employes. In fact, the whole place is overrun with widows.

"John and I talked it over that night, and the next day he came to me quite seriously with a large sheet of paper, on which he had made out a prospectus. He proposed to offer himself to be raffled off at £20 a chance and ten chances. The lady that got him would also get the £200 in good round English sovereigns, and he asked me if I would guarantee his respectability and would superintend the drawing for him. I told him yes, I would do it with pleasure.

"Well, John sent out his prospectuses, and, if you will believe me, ten women were found who were willing to put up that £20 for the chance at him. There were a good many more than ten who were willing to negotiate, but Mac stood pat on the £20, and that discouraged all but ten.

"The British Consul, Lascelles, one of the most ladylike men I ever knew in my life, got hold of the scheme and called upon Mac for an explanation, threatening him with proceedings for fraud, but Mac convinced him that there was no law or regulation anywhere that could hold him, because there was no fraud attempted. He was ready to give a valuable consideration—that is to say, himself—and £200 to the lucky winner. So Mr. Lascelles couldn't block the proceedings.

"In about a fortnight the chances on Mac were all taken, and Mac was here, all shaved up and dressed spick and span. I was dressed up, too, and the £200 in gold sovereigns was piled up on my desk. Above the building floated the biggest American flag on the tallest flagstaff south of Hong Kong.

"Well, the ladies lined up, ten of them. I must say my heart sank for John MacBean. They were certainly the homeliest crowd I ever struck, and eight of them were widows and the other two were spinsters, and extremely shopworn at that. I made them a speech eulogising Mac and telling them that the United States flag flying over their heads was a guarantee that everything would be done on the level and on the square. I conducted the drawing myself, putting the envelopes in my hat, as I've seen them do it at church fairs in Arkansas. And Mrs. MacNab, the widow that kept the boarding house, got the envelope with Mac's photograph in it. I won't say anything about Mrs. MacNab's appearance, ought I, Father Tim?"

OVER THE TORPEDO BOAT'S SIDE CLIMBED A PERSON IN CHINESE COSTUME BUT OF CALEDONIAN FEATURES.

"Well," said Mr. Gowdy, pouring some more whiskey in a glass and watering it faintly, "I'll admit Mac looked very chopfallen. One of the spinsters, however, the sister of a German merchant here, spoke up and said she didn't believe the drawing was fair. Mac, seeing a chance to escape, at once proposed another drawing to satisfy everybody, but Mrs. MacNab refused to entertain the idea, and asked me if I thought the drawing had been fair. I was bound to tell her it had been. Then she reached over, snapped up the £200 with one hand and caught Mac with the other, and was about to march him off. Then occurred a miracle—a miracle, sir.

"Herbert Spencer said there were no such things as miracles, and so did the late Dr. Temple, Archbishop of Canterbury, as stubborn an agnostic as ever I heard of, and so says Dr. Goldwin Smith, of Toronto, Canada, but I deny it, sir. I saw a miracle with my own eyes. I saw John MacBean, a Scotchman, propose to give up £200 to Mrs. MacNab to be let off from the bargain.

"Well, then there was, of course, a racket. In fact you never heard such a noise in your life. It was like killing pigs. But Mrs. MacNab stood her ground and had the £200. The matter, I saw, had got far beyond me, so I excused myself on important public business and went to the Chinese theatre in the native town where there was a play going on that took twelve hours to act.

"When I returned, late that night, to the Vice Consulate, for I live in this building, there was no sign of Mac. I concluded that the widow had her prey. The next morning, however, being up and dressed very early, I looked across the square and saw Mac going into the gates of the British Consulate grounds. I crossed the square and caught up with him just under the Consul's window, and offered him my congratulations on his marriage. 'You are premature,' says Mac. 'I wouldn't marry that confounded old battle axe, Sally Ann MacNab, for £500, much less £200. She can keep the money and welcome, and I'm going down to Hong Kong to-day.' 'No you don't,' says I. 'I pledged my word and I also pledged the honor of the American flag that you would act square in this deal, and you are acting like a thief and a scoundrel.' 'I'll sue you for libel,' says Mac, getting white about the chaps. 'Certainly you may,' says I, 'and I'll prove the libel, but you can sue me for assault and battery, too, for I mean to give you now the biggest licking"——

Here Mr. Gowdy interrupted the proceedings to finish drinking his whiskey, with a little water in it.

"Mac resisted, but I could have got him with one hand tied behind my back. I didn't want to be interrupted by any of those people at the British Consulate, so I dragged Mac across the square and finished up the licking here and then locked him up in the dungeon."

"In the dungeon," coolly reiterated Mr. Gowdy, "and I've got him there now. He has been there for four days. The British Consul sent over a formal demand in writing for an explanation of my conduct in the proceedings, and I replied in writing, saying that I had licked the said John MacBean in the grounds of the British Consulate, knowing him to be a British subject, and then and there had kicked, cuffed and otherwise lambasted him and called him a thief, a rogue, a liar and a scoundrel; had dragged him across the square and had with malice aforethought administered six body blows and an upper cut on the person of the said John MacBean, had punched him in the solar plexus and had slapped his face and tweaked his nose and pulled his ears and blacked his eye, and had then kicked him off the premises of the United States Vice Consulate, and didn't know where the said John MacBean was, and didn't give a damn, either. Then I telegraphed to Admiral Cotesworth, at Hong Kong, that I expected a native uprising and desired a United States vessel sent here and a guard for the Vice Consulate. Meanwhile I had a perfectly satisfactory interview with Mac. I went in and told him what I had done."

"And what was MacBean doing all this time?" asked Halkett in wonder.

"Oh, Lord! Mac was as snug as you please. He was safe from Mrs. MacNab and he had a good case for false imprisonment against me, and was likely to make money all around. I had made him good and comfortable in the dungeon, with plenty of first class whiskey, newspapers and a hymn book and a Bible to read, and he was comfortably waiting for the thing to blow over. I went in after I had replied to the British Consul and had a heart to heart and nose to nose talk with Mac. I told him that I would give him £2 of good English money for every day I kept him there, and that I would smuggle him off on the vessel I expected, and would give him £20 in English money at Hong Kong, and he could simply disappear and get another job on one of the Yang-tse boats, and he need never see Hwang-Kwo or the MacNab woman again.

"Mac has a sound Scotch head on him. He saw the advantages of the proposal at once. So I made it all out in writing and he signed it, and I did, too. I gave him the two English sovereigns every day I've had him locked up. Would you like to see him?"

"Certainly I should," said Halkett.

Mr. Gowdy rose and, opening a secret compartment in his desk, took out three large keys and led the party, little Ford bringing up the rear, into a narrow passage, at the end of which was a large, heavy iron studded door with three padlocks. The Vice Consul unlocked the padlocks and the party entered the room. It was indeed a stone dungeon, but with four windows high up against the low stone ceiling and barred with iron. At a table in the middle of the floor sat Mr. MacBean in a large American rocking chair. Mr. Gowdy introduced the party and Mr. MacBean greeted them affably.

"It's all fixed, Mac," said Mr. Gowdy. "I shall make an official request of Mr. Halkett to take me and my Chinese servant on board the Gaddy, and it will be easy enough to dress you up as a Chinese carrying my baggage and smuggle you on board, too."

"Thank you very much," said Mr. MacBean, leaning back in his rocking chair and speaking with a smile, "but I don't propose to leave. I'm getting my board and £2 a day as long as I'm the guest of the American Vice Consul, and I propose to stay on indefinitely. We have an agreement in writing that when I get to Hong Kong I'm to be paid £20 and to disappear, but there is nothing in that paper that specifies when I am to leave Hwang-Kwo, so I propose to stay on here and continue this rest cure I'm taking."

At this a silence fell upon all present and Mr. Gowdy looked thoroughly disconcerted.

"Come, now, Mac," he said, "you didn't act square with the widow, but you've got to act square with me. This is my only chance to get out of a devil of a fix, and I think you ought, for the sake of friendship, stand by me."

Halkett then felt it his duty to offer a solution.

"The Gaddy is a very comfortable vessel of her class, and it is a pleasant run down the river to Hong Kong, and Hong Kong is certainly more agreeable than being shut up as you are in this place," he said.

"But I'm getting £2 a day while I'm shut up here and keeping quiet," responded Mr. MacBean.

There was nothing for it but to leave him, which they did, Mr. Gowdy locking all three padlocks carefully, but with a downcast air. They returned to the office and again seated themselves around the table.

"As I see it," said Father Tim dolefully, "the American government will be called upon not only to pay a heavy indemnity, which it can stand, to Mac, but also to make a formal apology for the actions of its representative and to recall Mr. Gowdy. It is all easy enough, but I don't like the notion of the State Department at Washington making any formal apologies to the Briton. It would be an awful blow to the American Consuls in China, and the natives will get wind of it and be twice as saucy as they were before. It will impair American prestige in all this part of the country."

"That of course must not occur," said Halkett. "To-morrow morning at daybreak, Mr. Gowdy, I will be here at the back of the premises with a file of sailors, and perhaps Mr. MacBean can be persuaded to go quietly on board the Gaddy. You can do the same and cable your resignation to the State Department when we get to Hong Kong."

Mr. Gowdy looked relieved and upon his countenance appeared a grin like an open fireplace.

"I'll be ready," he said, "if you can only get Mac out of the way there won't be anybody to appear against me. I'll be only too glad to call it square and go back to Arkansas."

It was still dark next morning when a boat pulled softly toward the pier. Six sailors headed by Halkett and little Ford tumbled out and slipped up to the American Consulate, not by the broad modern street, in which the lanterns still flickered, but up strange windings and turnings until they reached the back entrance of the American Vice Consulate. Mr. Gowdy, his belongings packed in several grip sacks, was waiting with a gleeful countenance.

"He says he'll go all right," whispered Mr. Gowdy to Halkett. "He's dressed in Chinese clothes, and says he will be as quiet as a lamb. I told him it was that or being gagged and carried down by the sailors."

Mr. Gowdy went out of the room for a moment and then came back with Mr. MacBean, dressed in Chinese costume.

"This," said Mr. Gowdy, "is my Chinese servant, Ma-Liang, which means in Chinese 'conscientious bearer of burdens.' He is delighted at the opportunity of going with me to Hong Kong, but it would be just as well to put him in the middle of the procession."

This Halkett did.

Daybreak, wan and chill, was at hand when the Gaddy turned her nose about and went scampering down the Pearl River. A bright lookout was kept for the Dryad, which would be visible to the Gaddy long before the Gaddy would be seen by the Dryad. It was nearly eight o'clock when, under a dull sky and upon the leaden water, the Dryad was discerned coming up the river. As soon as the British cruiser was sighted the Gaddy turned within her own length and went back upon her tracks at a six knot gait.

Soon the bulky cruiser grew large astern and then came abeam the Gaddy. The Dryad was making her fourteen knots very comfortably with the tide running out. She signalled politely to the lame duck flying the American flag, "Is there anything the matter?"

To this the signal went back, "Propeller blade loose, no assistance needed. Thanks."

Then the big cruiser and the little torpedo boat bowed and said goodby, and the Dryad went steaming fast up the river.

As soon as she was well out of sight the Gaddy was suddenly cured of her lameness, turned about and galloped down the river at a twenty knot clip. When she reached the entrance to the harbor at Hong Kong she stopped again. The sun was shining brightly, and passing up and down were the rude junks and sampans of the natives—the sampan, which in Chinese means "three boards," is not an aristocratic boat, but much favored by the Chinese—when one of them, which was empty except for the two boatmen, was signalled by the Gaddy and stopped. Over the torpedo boat's side climbed a person in Chinese costume but of Caledonian features. In his breast pocket reposed a rouleau of English sovereigns, for Mr. MacBean had pointedly declined a draft, check, or note from his former friend and backer, Vice Consul Gowdy.

Within an hour Mr. Gowdy had landed and had cabled to the State Department at Washington his resignation as Vice Consul at Hwang-Kwo.

Halkett also sent a cipher despatch marked "private and personal" from Admiral Cotesworth to a chum of his in the Navy Department. The cipher ran thus:—

"Get the State Department to cable acceptance of Gowdy's resignation, otherwise there will be the devil to pay out here with the British Consul at Hwang-Kwo."

Then Halkett went back to his launch in order to report to the Admiral on the flagship. But just then the flagship was going outside for target practice for a couple of days, so Halkett's official visit to the Admiral was necessarily postponed. The flagship stayed outside three days instead of two.

Halkett had meanwhile got a letter from Admiral Cotesworth saying he would send to the Gaddy when he was ready to receive her commander. Therefore Halkett waited patiently until next morning, when he received by the morning mail boat another private letter directing him to report on the flagship at ten o'clock. This he did and found Admiral Cotesworth smiling and debonair.

"Everything worked to a charm," said the Admiral. "Gowdy sent in his resignation and the State Department acted on private information and had sense enough to cable an acceptance at once, so that lets the State Department out of the row. Here's the letter I had from Admiral Harbord on the subject. Harbord, you know, is a regular old tiger, but I think we've succeeded in buncoing him and he knows it, but can't help himself."

"Vice Admiral Harbord presents his compliments to Rear Admiral Cotesworth and begs to call his attention to the following facts. On Monday, the ninth instant, at an early hour in the morning, Mr. Lucius Quintius Curtius Gowdy, Vice Consul of the United States at Hwang-Kwo, made, upon the grounds of the British Consulate at Hwang-Kwo, and in sight of H. M.'s Consul, Mr. George Frederick Reginald Lascelles, a personal attack upon John MacBean, a British subject. After beating MacBean the American Vice Consul dragged him across the public square and into the American Vice Consulate.

"Mr. Lascelles at once made a demand in writing upon Mr. Gowdy for an explanation of the affair. This Mr. Gowdy refused in a letter, which Mr. Lascelles is compelled to consider insolent in terms, and declared he knew nothing of MacBean's whereabouts. Representations concerning this part of the controversy have been made to H. B. M.'s Consul General at Hong Kong. It is, however, learned that the American Vice Consul kept MacBean under duress for five days. Meanwhile on the twentieth the American torpedo boat Gaddy came up to Hwang-Kwo and her commander, Lieutenant Halkett, visited and was in conference with the American Vice Consul.

"The next morning, the fourteenth, shortly before daybreak, Lieutenant Halkett with a guard of six sailors appeared at the back entrance of the American Vice Consulate and returned to the Gaddy with the American Vice Consul, a considerable amount of luggage and a person in Chinese costume, whom H. M.'s Consul, Lascelles, has reason to believe was MacBean.

"At eight o'clock on the same morning H. M. S. Dryad, coming up the Pearl River, met the Gaddy bound in the same direction, and professing to be in difficulties. The Dryad offered assistance, which was declined, and proceeded upon her way. The Gaddy then turned about and made for Hong Kong, which it reached about noon on the same day. Since then nothing has been seen of either the American Vice Consul or MacBean. Vice Admiral Harbord requests Rear Admiral Cotesworth to forward him any information which Lieutenant Halkett may be able to give on the alleged circumstances.

"I sent a reply at once, saying that Lieutenant Halkett's share in the matter would be closely investigated and the report forwarded to Vice Admiral Harbord. Meanwhile, if Lieutenant Halkett had been guilty of any impropriety Vice Admiral Harbord would be informed of the discipline to which Lieutenant Halkett would be subjected. Now here is a second letter I've prepared and sent old Harbord:—

"'Rear Admiral Cotesworth begs to inform Vice Admiral Harbord of the following facts concerning the recent visit of the U. S. torpedo boat Gaddy, Lieutenant Halkett commanding, to Hwang-Kwo. Mr. Lucius Quintius Curtius Gowdy, late American Vice Consul at Hwang-Kwo, telegraphed on Sunday, the seventh, saying that there were fears of a native uprising and requesting an American vessel of war to be sent to Hwang-Kwo in order to protect the Vice Consulate if necessary.

"'In accordance with this request the Gaddy was sent up, and Lieutenant Halkett, as stated by H. B. M.'s Consul at Hwang-Kwo, Mr. Lascelles, had a conference on the evening of the eighth with Vice Consul Gowdy. In this interview Mr. Gowdy stated that all immediate danger of a native uprising was over, but that for personal reasons he wished to come to Hong Kong as early as possible, and requested that no and his Chinese servant, Ma-Liang, be permitted to return to Hong Kong on board the Gaddy.

"'This request, which appeared perfectly reasonable, was acceded to by Lieutenant Halkett, and next morning shortly after four o'clock a party consisting of an officer and six sailors to transport such baggage as the Vice Consul might wish to take with him, proceeded to the American Vice Consulate. There were found Mr. Gowdy and his Chinese servant Ma-Liang and they were escorted with their luggage on board the Gaddy.

"'So far Lieutenant Halkett's conduct appears natural and justifiable. With regard to the meeting with the Dryad and changing his course Rear Admiral Cotesworth regrets to say that Lieutenant Halkett's statements are not wholly satisfactory, and he has been reprimanded for this by Admiral Cotesworth and the report forwarded to the Secretary of the Navy at Washington, U. S. A.

"'As to the Chinese servant leaving the Gaddy before entering the harbor of Hong Kong, Lieutenant Halkett appears to be blameless, as it is hardly probable he had any suspicion that the man in question was a British subject, John MacBean by name.

"'Apart from Lieutenant Halkett's share in the affair the Department of State at Washington, U. S. A., will act. It is unfortunate, however, that the resignation of Mr. Gowdy of the American Vice Consulate was accepted by the State Department before the complaint as to his conduct reached Rear Admiral Cotesworth. It would have been quite possible for Admiral Cotesworth to have cabled the State Department to await action on Mr. Gowdy's resignation until his alleged delinquencies were investigated.

"'Rear Admiral Cotesworth sincerely regrets the unfortunate affair and hopes that the reprimand to Lieutenant Halkett for his inexplicable conduct with the Dryad will be accepted as a disclaimer of any apparent discourtesy of H. M. S. Dryad.

"So you see," continued Admiral Cotesworth, with a colossal grin, "it is all settled. As a further rebuke to you, I shall remove you to-morrow from the command of the Gaddy, but the despatch boat Seagull, twice as big and forty times as desirable, is at the Philippines and you will be given command of her in a fortnight."

Halkett, with a grin which rivalled the Admiral's in size and intensity, shook hands cordially with that old seadog.

"The Lure Of Thespis"—The Stage Has Its Joys And Tragedies

We had gone early to the theatre, for a box offered greater privacy than the club or cafe, and my own rooms were several snowy miles away. The lights were still dim when we settled into our chairs, and we looked out on an empty, shadowy house.

"All the better for a comfortable chat," remarked Thurston; "and, besides, it is almost as diverting to watch the audience file in, arrayed in its purple, as to see the play itself.

"Ah, I hear the old, familiar sounds," he continued as the noise of the stage setting began behind the curtain. "Theseus is already donning his Athenian splendours, I dare say. What an art it is! Outside are the winds and storm of winter; here we have 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' Oberon, Titania and the rest of the fairy tribe. I tell you, my dear boy, there's nothing like it! It keeps young the heart of the nation."

"Every man should be enthusiastic over his own profession," I admitted, leniently.

"Oh, I do not speak from professional bias," he laughed, "though I admit that the taint is in my blood. It was there yesterday; it will be there tomorrow. Tonight I am enjoying an interval of sanity, but sooner or later the ghost of old Thespis will stretch out a hand and drag me back to my proper sphere. Of course," he added, complacently, "considering my genius, you could scarcely expect me to remain immune. But you will do me the justice to concede that, though in the life, I am not of it."

I smiled under cover of my programme, remembering how often I had heard a similar statement from lips dedicated to rouge and limelight. It was the cry of the profession from the illustrious star down to the vapid youth with a seven-word part. One and all they cherished the fatuous illusion that they were "in the life, but not of it"—a subtle distinction which none but themselves perceived.

Nevertheless, I lent Thurston a sympathetic ear, for the man's magnetism, coupled with the glamour of an old college chumship, rendered my patience another quality than bald courtesy.

"How can I concede anything about you?" I reproached him, "when you've not had the decency to send me a line in ten years? Yes, ten years, old fellow; not a day less. We met last in Australia, where I was hunting and you were——"

"Selling pills," he completed, mirthfully. "Lord, how keen I was for customers! And it was ten years ago—a thousand apologies to you! I had not forgotten you, but the actor's career is very crowded, you know—very crowded. Art's demands of her devotees are heavy. Then we have the social side to contend with, for the dear public must show us at its parties; and so, to borrow from Henry James, there you are!

"It was jolly luck, running on you at the club tonight. I'm no end glad, dear chap, and ready to make amends for the neglected past by relating my autobiography. Can your friendship bear the test?"

"Proceed," I encouraged warmly. "It is precisely what I want."

"It will have to be a telegraphic edition," regretted Thurston, "for we've a scant fragment of time. After all, the only thing of importance is the development of one's temperament, and that would be too long a story.

"You may remember that you met me in Australia during one of my normal periods. I had resolved to earn my daily bread by mercantile endeavour and to follow for the remainder of my life the safe and practical paths, though, at the bidding of the restless spirit which inhabits me, I had sought those paths in Australia rather than in the gardens of home. The country interested me for a while and I bore my virtue passing well, but when the novelty wore off the sight of pills sickened me, and I pined for pastures new.

"I had been on the boards a bit directly after leaving college and I made a hit I assure you, a quite phenomenal hit. Naturally, my thoughts wandered stageward, but I hated to be defeated even by my own genius, so I compromised on the decision to open a studio of dramatic art in the land of my birth.

"Back I came, assumed the role of instructor with an excellent grace, and soon found myself making a tidy livelihood. Blessed with an engaging personality, it was easy enough for me to obtain pupils, and I could mention more than one successful actress of today who climbed the first rungs of the ladder under my supervision. My greatest annoyance rose from the fact that the girls would fall in love with me—to a modest fellow that becomes embarrassing, but it would be churlish to complain of the generosity of fate.

"Besides, fate turned the joke on me—in time she usually does—and I woke one morning, not famous, but in love! The object of my adoration was the most winsome thing under heaven. I give you my word, a slim, little wisp of a maid who laughed her way through the world with the prettiest provoking deviltry that ever a woman was guilty of. She laughed at me, too, from the day when I first bowed over her little mocking hand until the moment that I received her at the altar—and afterward! Her demure name was Marjorie, but I called her Puck, for she was more like a haughty, charming sprite than a woman.

"I was utterly mad about her, at first—indeed, I am mad about her now, when I remember her—but after we had been married half a year that incessant laughter got on my nerves. The artistic temperament has its penalties, and I needed a woman who could occasionally show a maternal side to her love. To make it worse, the dramatic fire flared up in me again. I had been holding myself in leash rather hard for several years, and had just about reached the end of the rope. I tried to explain to her, thinking that a crumb of sympathy, of friendly comprehension, would set me right. She put her slender oval face into her hands, looked at me with the eyes of an elf, and laughed, as if I were either a freak or a fool, disporting myself there merely to tickle her fancy. I can still feel the rage that rushed over me!

"That was really the end, though we dragged on for a while afterward. I kept busy with my pupils through the long days, and in the evenings we sat the width of the hearth apart, I brooding over my warped destiny, she consoling herself with her uncanny wit and sphinxlike laughter. When my nerves were ragged I went to the play, but that was only a change of strain, for Thespis was calling me and every drop of blood in my veins clamoured to answer.

"I reached the point where I could not walk by the door of a theatre without a leap of my pulses, and once inside, every sight, every sound from actors or audience fed the passion. It was like nothing less than a drunkard's appetite for liquor, and in the end it was master of me. Duty spoke fainter and fainter, and finally—I deserted my wife!

"Sounds ugly, doesn't it, old man? I do not expect, or perhaps, even want you to understand it. Your law is it not? No, do not offer your condone that sort of thing. But, believe me, it was the only way out, both for her and for me. I have never seen her since. She had a small fortune of her own, and I left her all I had. so my conscience has been fairly quiet. There are hours when I feel that I would barter a lifetime for one happy year with her, but I have my art and the rich rewards it has brought me.

"Why, London was wild over me, old chap, wild, and it's impossible not to value such triumphs. Fame is fleeting, I grant you, and popularity an empty-handed god. Tonight I know that my crown is tinsel, but tomorrow?——

"Ah, the house is filled. Listen to the language of Chopin—perfect, is it not? No, do not offer your condolences; I have my baubles, you know. And it is time now to attend on Shakespeare."

The loves of Hermia and Helen seemed pale and substanceless when contrasted with the brief and bitter drama from real life which Thurston had confided to me; for, knowing my friend's ardent nature, I realized how much more there was to his tragedy than the skeleton he had shown me. In spite of his vanities, his absurd temperamental weaknesses, all his emotions, however changeful, were intense, for he was compact of dew and flame—a true child of Thespis.

An odd constraint followed his confidential mood and I guessed that he was already regretting his impulsive confessions. To relieve his embarrassment, I filled the wait between the first and second acts with gossip regarding the young woman who would presently appear in the character of Puck and whom the programme introduced as Felicia Fennelle.

She was a recent and brilliant ornament to histrionic circles, who had cleverly enough concealed her private personality and life to excite further the interest her work alone awakened. Thurston, who had only just returned from a prolonged stay in England, knew even less of her than I, and I seized the chance to give him news of his own profession. He turned indifferently away, murmuring with a melancholy air that the creation of Puck required little ability, in his judgment, and to him individually was actually distasteful. Luckily the rising curtain interrupted my opportunity for other blunders, and it was with genuine gratitude that I heard:

How now, spirit? Whither wander you?

Instantly Thurston leaned forword, displaying an attention that his previous words had scarcely promised, but I did not look at him, for the next few minutes, so absorbed was I in the debonair beauty, the delicate beauty of Felicia Fennelle's Puck.

So eagerly did I follow every gesture, every word of hers, that I might well have concluded my own eyes to have been touched with the magic flower, which worked such havoc on the affections, and after the curtain had fallen the enchantment still held me until Thurston's hand on my arm drew me back to earth. I turned to hear his criticism, only to see him staring at me, mutely, with the gaze of one who has beheld a ghost.

"Are you ill?" I questioned, in alarm. "Let me take you out, Thurston."

"No, no," he responded, impatiently, pushing me back into my seat, "nothing is the matter except that I have seen—my wife!"

"Where?" I cried, turning to the audience.

"Not there, old chap, not out there. She was on the stage. She is playing Puck!"

"Felicia Fennelle? You're mad, Thurston! She can't be!"

"Don't you suppose I know my own wife? Her face, her voice, her laughter? Playing Puck? She is Puck! I told you that I named her so long ago. To find her here tonight is only further proof of it."

"What will you do," I dared ask.

"Do? I'll see her! I'll see her, if I have to break down the door between her and me! And if she will let me, I'll be a decent husband to her till the day of my death. Why, man, do you think I will have my wife on the stage?"

"But, Thurston, the stage is your world."

"My world—yes. But I'm a man. And if she won't leave it without me, I'll give it up, too. I tell you, she's my wife!"

He flung frantically from the box, leaving me to wonder if the fairies had tricked his brain and mine, and he did not return until after the first scene of the third act.

During that scene, Puck's mirth had reached almost too high a key even for the irresistible foolery of the lines, but I marvelled that a woman who had probably just met a supreme crisis could handle herself so resolutely.

When Thurston reappeared I knew in one glance at his transfigured face that the course of true love had at last run smooth. A light, a purity that had never before sat in his eyes looked from them now, giving him such an air of sweetness as a boy may wear. Indeed, the years had dropped away from him like worn and soiled garments, leaving him as untainted as youth himself.

"A miracle has been wrought for you," I said, as he sank into the chair beside me; and he inclined his head.

"I want to tell you something wonderful. She has forgiven me! She came into the profession because she believed that, sooner or later, it would bring us together. And now we are going home."

His voice quivered in the first sincere sob that he had uttered since the spell of the footlights had lured him from love.

"She told me tonight," he resumed, when he could command himself, "that women laughed lest they should weep."

When Puck entered again there was not even the touch of hysteria which I had noticed in the previous scene—perfect artist whom I watched in amazament!

"My mistress with a monster is in love."

Rapidly the comedy progressed to the discovery of Puck's mistake regarding the identity of the mortal lovers whom the fairy king desired to make happy, and on to the moment when Oberon, bent on setting right the mischief done, commands Puck:

"About the wood go swifter than the wind,"
And Helena of Athens look thou find."

Blithely Puck answers him:

"I go, I go; look how I go,
Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow!"

To the understanding ear a note of triumph rang silvery through the words as Felicia Fennelle uttered them. To her and to another they were the speech of prophecy. Slender as a wind blown reed, light as a bit of thistledown, she swayed delicately in the rhythm of the soft orchestral music; her wings vibrated as if with life itself and lifted her into the air.

"Of course she's safe," whispered Thurston uneasily. "No!" his voice rising in a shriek. "Oh, my God! My God! She has fallen."

The whole house was swept forward on a mighty wave of terror and of pity, and Thurston's tortured cry was echoed in the wailing tone of many women. Someone stooped over her, but with a bound Thurston pushed in between and gathered the little broken body to his breast. She did not stir, she did not breathe.

EVERY WOMAN WHO SUFFERS

Can Find Sure Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. J. Oliver Tells How She Lost Her Pains and Weakness When She Used the Old Reliable Kidney Remedy.

Elgin, Ont., March 18.—(Special)—Women who suffer, and there are thousands of them in Canada, will hear with interest the experience of Mrs. J. Oliver of this place. She has suffered and found a cure, and she has no hesitation in saying that cure is Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I suffered for over a year from Backache and Fainting Spells," Mrs. Oliver states. "I was tired and nervous all the time and the least exertion would make me perspire freely. My feet and ankles would swell and I had a dragging sensation across the loins. I saw Dodd's Kidney Pills advertised and bought some. Twelve boxes cured me."

All women who suffer should use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They make healthy Kidneys and healthy Kidneys are the first rule of health for woman. The female organs depend almost entirely on the kidneys for their health. No woman can hope to be healthy and happy unless the Kidneys are right. The Kidneys need occasional help or they must become tired or sick. And almost any woman can tell you out of her own experience that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the help they need.

KNOWN THE WORLD OVER

—The Razor For Real Men

When the "GILLETTE" was first introduced, some men were inclined to regard it lightly. It was so simple and convenient and safe, that they thought it could not be good, and were inclined to jeer at those who used it.

Years ago, in the West, one was regarded as a "tenderfoot" unless he drank, swore, gambled and had "killed his man". Today, the "bad man" is regarded as a nuisance whose proper place is the penitentary.

The real men of today—presidents of railroads and banks—heads of big corporations—young heads on important work—are men who use their brains and are always on the lookout for new and better things.

They are the men who now know that for shaving comfort and satisfaction, the "GILLETTE" Safety Razor is in a class by itself.

Have you the "GILLETTE" face?

"Old Bill Stumps who used to run the bake-shop in our town told me that 'Cream of the West' Flour
was the strongest doggone Manitoba flour he ever baked. It was Bill that first called me the Flour Wizard, and even up to the time of his death he was kind of suspicious that I put something in the flour to make it so powerful strong.

Here's a Flour, Madam, That's Labor Saving

The question is:

"How can I dodge the command to "earn my bread at the sweat of my brow"?

How to make perfect bread without tiring yourself out in the "dough punching", eliminating hard labor.

Yes, Mistress Housewife, you guessed right—

By using that FIVE ROSES flour.

Not only because of its fine granulation, you know.

Which, of course, makes your dough go together so quickly and easily, becoming lively and elastic.

But also on account of its uniform granulation, making your sponge rise evenly and smoothly, uniform and responsive.

Other reasons galore, Madam, contribute to make FIVE ROSES the easiest worked and most versatile flour to use.

Requiring the least kneading in your bowl or mixer. In fact, you should never "overwork" your dough.

* * * *

That's where FIVE ROSES scores heaviest.

Being a fourfold saver—of time, work, worry, money.

Making child's play of bakeday.

* * * *

And then the joy of creating such bread, Mistress Housewife.

Filling up on FIVE ROSES bread-stuffs, leaving the expensive stuff alone.

And the family well balasted with the brain-building, brawn-building, bone-building elements in FIVE ROSES is bound to sail on an even keel.

* * * *

Save yourself worry, Madam, and work and waste.

Learn "the tricks of the trade"—feel the wonderful, smooth, soft texture, the consistency of a FIVE ROSES dough.

And use FIVE ROSES SOON.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

March 20, 1910.

Golden Text. The Son of Man hath power on earth to forgive sins. Matt. 9: 6.

Verse 1.—From what place did Jesus sail, and where was his destination?

Can you express an opinion, based on experience, and stating the facts, as to whether one man's faith may be the means of the salvation of another man? (This question must be answered in writing by members of the club.)

What was the nature of palsy, the disease from which he suffered?

Verses 3, 4.—Why was it evil, for the scribes to doubt the authority of Jesus to forgive sin?

Why is a man guilty for sincere doubt, when the doubt is a result of a sinful life?

Did Jesus always know all the thoughts of all men, in the same way that God does, or did he only know their thoughts through their actions, and from his general knowledge of human nature just like other men who can readily read men?

Verse 5.—Which was the more difficult, to pronounce the forgiveness of the man's sins, or to cure him of his disease?

Was it God, or the man Jesus, that forgave this man of his sins, and has every other holy man got authority to pronounce when a man's sins are forgiven?

Verses 6, 7.—How did the cure of this sick man demonstrate that Jesus had power to forgive sins?

In what way are the miracles of Jesus a demonstration of the claims of Jesus, and of the truth as taught by him?

Why was Jesus' life from start to finish filled with miracles, and does God mean miracles to continue to this age, or does he propose to carry on the world now by law?

Verse 8.—Mention some of the phenomena of the laws of God, in matter and mind, and compare them with Bible miracles and say which is the more wonderful.?

In an intelligent age and to thinking men, which demonstrates the existence, the power, the wisdom and love of God most convincingly, law or miracle? Why?

Verse 9.—Matthew was busy at his post when Jesus called him, can you mention any whom Jesus called to be his apostles who were idlers, or were not busy men?

Why is it impossible for a lazy man to a true Christian?

Did Matthew seek Jesus first, or was it Jesus who first thought Matthew, and what is the rule as to the initiative, with most or all persons who become Christians?

Verse 10.—In whose house was Jesus eating with these publicans and sinners? (See Mark 2: 14, 15. Luk 5: 17-29.)

When Matthew became a disciple he invited Jesus and the Apostles and his late business associates, the publicans and sinners to a feast, what was probably his motive, and what suggestions are there in the incident for us?

Verses 11-13.—Would it be better today, and why, if earnest Christians sought the company of unconverted people more than they do?

A sick man is of more interest to a physician than a well man, so a sinner is of more interest to Jesus than a saint. State why this is so?

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Carbolic soap should be freely used about the house to keep down vermin.

It is easier to scale fish if they are first dipped for an instant into boiling water.

Honey should be stored in a dark place, for if it is kept in the light it will soon granulate.

If a wooden chopping bowl is turned upside down after use there will be no danger of it splitting.

To clean white paint dip a clean cloth in hot water, then in bran, and rub it. Rinse with clear water.

Wooden tubs should be used for washing glass an ddelicate china, as there is far less danger of breakage.

Never buy meat that is palish pink, for it is diseased. Good meat is red, with the fat clear white and firm.

Bacon fat may be saved and used to fry fish. It gives a good flavor, and keeps the fish from falling apart.

To mend a glove, turn it wrong side out and sew the rent over and over with cotton thread. Silk thread will tear out.

Good proportions for French dressing are one teaspoonful of vinegar, three of oil, and salt and pepper to taste.

To scour brass, dip half a lemon in table salt, rub briskly over the surface, wash off with clear water, and dry.

A pinch of borax stirred into a quart of milk will keep it sweet, if you object to the taste after boiling.

To keep clothes from running where the colors are not fast, use a cupful of salt to each gallon of washing water.

Lemons that have become hard from long standing can be made useable by covering them with boiling water.

A kitchen churn that holds but one quart is useful for turning cream into butter, and also as a cake mixer, and for beating eggs for angel cake.

Cold water should be poured on grease as soon as it is spilled on the floor, as it will harden the grease and prevent it soaking into the wood.

Dish cloths should always be well washed in hot water after being used, or they will soon become not only sadly discolored, but full of bacteria.

To keep a parasol looking well, have a bag for it hung inside the closet door, where the dust will not get at it. Brushing a silk parasol wears it out.

How to buy an EDISON Phonograph

Do not buy an Edison Phonograph until you are convinced that you want one.

Hear it at the dealer's first.

Hear it play a number of pieces. Hear it play the kind of music that you like—music that you have heard people sing and play—so that you can know how well it does it. Hear it play Amberol as well as Standard Records.

You will decide that the Edison Phonograph is the best.

Then remember that it takes only a small amount of money to buy it. You can get a perfect Edison Phonograph at your own price, whether it is $16.50 or any price up to $162.50—one that will last a life-time, that will give pleasure every day, that will help you to educate your family, that will entertain your friends, and that will while away many hours that might otherwise be misspent.

PETERBOROUGH, January 29th, 1910

W. H. HILL, Esq.,
Manager Sun Life Assurance Co., of Canada
PETERBOROUGH, ONT.

DEAR SIR,—About five years ago my late husband took out $1,000.00 insurance in The Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada, on which he only paid the first three premiums. Shortly after his death, which occurred on the 6th inst., although I was under the impression that his policy had lapsed, I called at your office to inquire if anything could be done whereby we might get something out of it. You can imagine my surprise and genuine gratitude to learn that, owing to your non-forfeiture privilege, the policy was still in force at his death, and that I was entitled to the full thousand dollars, less only the two unpaid premiums and interest.

This seems to me such extraordinary and generous treatment that I wish to add my expression of most sincere thanks and appreciation to the many others your Company must receive.

I also wish to acknowledge and thank you for your courtesy and promptness in procuring for me a cheque to-day covering the policy, and to state that if my endorsation of the already mentioned feature of your policies is of value you are quite at liberty to use it.

Gratefully yours,

MARGARET LONG,

THE MAGIC NEEDLE.

A Fairy Story About Dear Old Grandmother Tippy Toe.

Grandmother Tippy Toe
Lost her needle and cannot sew.

Of course if it had been just an ordinary needle the dear old lady could have bought a new one at the store, but this was a magic needle given to her by the fairies. She used it to make their dresses and mend the butterflies' wings.

All the fairies turned out to hunt for it, but it was nowhere to be found.

The fairy queen was very sorry to know Grandma Tippy Toe had been so careless, but finally promised that if grandma would go to the magic thorn apple tree at midnight alone she would find a new needle, which would be hers, growing there on the tree. In payment for it she must make the queen a new dress out of moonbeams.

Grandma was a little afraid to go alone, but to keep up her courage she hippety-hopped all the way to the thorn tree. She was so happy to get her new needle that she made a beautiful dress for the queen of spun silver cobwebs trimmed with dewdrops for pearls and one out of moonbeams.

Really, do you know these beautiful dresses pleased the queen so much that she gave grandma a magic thorn tree of her own to grow right in her own back yard, so she could have all the needles she wanted, 'cause all old ladies lose needles.

THE FROG AND THE MOUSE.

One day there was a great argument between a frog and a mouse. Each pretended to be mistress of the marsh.

"Gossip," said the mouse to the frog, "you shall yield me the place, if you please. It belongs to me by right. I occupied it before you."

"Me yield you the place! Surely you don't imagine that! Why, I have lived here for more than ten years. Learn to know yourself and be content with your mudholes."

The mouse, offended at the answer of the frog, gave her a challenge. It was accepted. The two rivals, anger and vengeance in their hearts, appeared on the field of battle armed with bulrushes instead of lances. The combat seemed likely to become cruel and bloody. But a hawk who was hovering in the air saw the two heroines and finished their quarrel by carrying them both away in his talons.

This is the fruit of petty disputes between weak people. They are usually the dupes of their own quarrels.—From the French of Perrin.

The Chinese Burglar.

"The Chinese burglar is the most difficult to nab," declared Lecoq, the detective. "I might say he is impossible to nab. When this yellow scoundrel goes burgling he goes naked and covered with oil, and thus he is as slippery as an eel. But, you say, why not nab him by the pigtail, hey? The answer to that is that his pigtail is done up in a knot on top of his head and stuck full of needles and hatpins with the points turned outward. You often see a Chinaman in Pekin or Shanghai with his clothes stained with oil and with tiny red pricks all over him. He's been having trouble with a burglar."

Her Daughter
Took Very Sick As Result Of Catching Cold.

Mrs. Dennis Delaney, Friar's Head, N.S., writes: "At the close of the year 1907, our youngest daughter, five years old, took very sick as the result of catching cold. She became very weak and could not move around at all. We consulted doctors and gave her various kinds of medicine but they did not seem to relieve her any. On the advice of a friend I procured a bottle of your valuable remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after using the first bottle noticeable improvement was the result and after using three bottles she was entirely cured. I can certify that it was through your valuable remedy that she regained her strength and would advise every mother having young ones similarly afflicted to obtain your valuable remedy. For myself I would not be without a bottle in the house."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup contains all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree combined with Wild Cherry bark and other pectoral remedies. It has stood the test for many years, and is now more generally used than ever. Price 25 cents at all dealers. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Vegetable Suspension Bridge.

A remarkable suspension bridge spans the river Apurumac in central Peru. The ropes of this bridge are composed of pliable roots and vines, while the planks are made of branches. In the humid climate of Peru it would be by no means extraordinary if this vegetable bridge were one day to start growing.—Wide World Magazine.

The Court's Double.

"You say it was your 'double' that stole the chickens?"

"Yassuh."

"You know I gave you thirty days once for chicken stealing?"

"Ah remembah, sun."

"Well, this time you get sixty. That's the court's double."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Practical Considerations.

"My family tree"— began the titled suitor.

"I'm tired of hearing about family trees," answered Mr. Cumrox. "In the part of the country I came from a man's industry and consequence are measured by the size of the family wood piles."—Washington Star.

KIDNEYS ACT FINE AND BACKACHE GOES

A Few Doses Regulate Disordered Kidneys And End Bladder Misery.

If you take several doses of Pape's Diuretic, all backache and distress from out-of-order kidneys or bladder trouble will vanish, and you will feel fine.

Lame back, painful stitches, rheumatism, nervous headache, dizziness, irritability, sleeplessness, inflamed or swollen eyelids, worn-out, sick-feeling and other symptoms of sluggish, inactive kidneys disappear.

Feeling miserable and worried is needless, because this unusual preparation goes at once to the disordered kidneys, bladder and urinary system and distributes its healing cleansing and vitalizing influence directly upon the organs and glands affected, and completes the cure before you realize it.

The moment you suspect any kidney or urinary disorder or feel rheumatism pains, begin taking this harmless medicine, with the knowledge that there is no other remedy at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure as a fifty cent treatment of Pape's Diuretic, which any druggist can supply.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker or any mercantile agency will tell you that Pape, Thompson & Pape, of Cincinnati, is a large and responsible medicine concern, thoroughly worthy of your confidence.

Only curative results can come from taking Pape's Diuretic, and a few days' treatment means clean, active, healthy kidneys, bladder and urinary organs—and no backache.

Ladies First!

"Scratch a southerner and you find a knightly soul" might be said to be one of the morals of the Chicago Record-Herald story below. The second moral is reasonably obvious:

"What is the reason," began the irritated traveler from the north, "that the trains in this part of the country are always behind time? I have never seen one yet that ran according to its schedule."

"That, suh," replied the dignified Georgian, "is a mattah that is easily explained. It is due to southern chivalry, suh."

"Southern chivalry! Where does that come in?"

"You see, suh, the trains are always late in this country because they wait for the ladies, God bless them!"

The Patient Man.

Mr. Henpeck had hesitated a long while about doing this bold thing, but he felt that now was the time or never. "Dear," he said, in a very timid voice, "I wish you wouldn't call me 'Leo' any more."

"I know, my dear, but it makes my friends laugh when you call me that. I was thinking you might call me 'Job,' just for a pet name."—Catholic Standard and Times.

One Beauty of Classical Music.

Mr. Sourdropp—Yes.

Miss Gush—Oh, I am so glad! Do you not find in it great inspiration, sublime thought and true beauty?

Mr. Sourdropp—Not exactly. I like it because no blithering idiot can beat time to it with his foot.

Breaking the Fast in Ramazan.

The Arabs say Ramadan; the Persians and Turks say Ramazan. They all observe throughout the month a species of fast that has no precise counterpart in the west. So long as the sun is in the sky food or drink of any kind may not pass the true believer's lips. He is not even allowed the sweet solace of a cigarette. But from the firing of the sunset guns until it is light enough to distinguish a black hair from a white he may feast to surfeiting. Watchmen will patrol the streets with drums to warn him that his moments of grace are numbered, and cannon once more announce their end.

Nothing is more characteristic of late afternoons in Ramazan than the preparations for the evening meal which preoccupy all Moslems, particularly those who work with their hands. As the sun nears the horizon fires are lighted, tables are spread, bread is broken, water is poured out, cigarettes are rolled, and hands are lifted halfway to the mouth in expectation of the signal that gives liberty to eat. This breaking of the daytime fast is called iftar and is an institution in itself. To be invited to iftar is a particular mark of friendship.—Scribner's Magazine.

The original of the singular saying "A skeleton in the closet," which is found in almost every language in Europe, is found in one of those curious collections of stories that have come down from the middle ages. In one of these collections, compiled by an unknown hand about the middle of the tenth century, there is a story of a wealthy lady who, having a secret grief, confided it to a friend who was apparently a perfectly happy woman. She was the wife of a nobleman who lived in his castle in the south of France. She and her husband were outwardly on the most loving terms. Not a care cloud seemed to cast a shadow on her path.

After hearing the story of her afflicted friend the noble lady took her by the hand and led her to a secret chamber adjoining her bedroom, there opened the door of a closet and exposed a skeleton. "Know, my friend," she said, "no one is happy. Every day I am forced by my husband to kiss this grinning death head, which is that of a gentleman who was my husband's rival and whom I would have married had not my parents willed otherwise."

Coming out of one of the large department stores two well dressed women saw a group of street urchins gazing at their automobile, and one little girl was heard to say, "Wish I could have a ride in it." The women smiled, and then the child was asked if she would really like a ride and was helped into the machine after assuring the women that she would not be missed at home. Her companions set up a cheer as the machine started, and some of them were still on the spot when it returned half an hour later, bringing back the little girl. The women congratulated themselves on having given the little one an extraordinary treat, but were disenchanted when she told them that her father was a chauffeur and that she liked his machine "a great deal better."—New York Tribune.

A Compliment to the Minister.

In Albert Dawson's work, "Joseph Parker—His Life and Ministry," there are some anecdotes of the famous minister of the City temple. We are told that what Dr. Parker regarded as, in its own peculiar way, the best compliment he ever received came from an omnibus conductor. The vehicle was crossing Holborn viaduct, and when it came to the City temple a passenger alighted.

"That's the man, and that's the place," said the conductor, indicating Dr. Parker's church. "I went there once, and I enjoyed myself so much that I'm going again the first night off I have. We laughed, and we cried, and we had a rare time. You see," the conductor continued, "he doesn't make religion so —— serious."

Seeds Planted in Eggshells.

Fill half an eggshell with good rich earth, stick in a seed or two, stand the shell up in a box of earth, keep it warm and moist, and then, when you think you can trust the weather out of doors and the seeds have sprouted, you knock the shell off and put the little ball of earth into Mother Earth, and there you are. Not a root has been disturbed, and if you choose a favorable time for transplanting there will not be a wilted leaf to retard the growing of the plant.

Painted Lips.

The "Personal Recollections of Sutherland Edwards," English music critic, records that after the peace of 1815 it used to be the rule for every hussar to wear a black mustache, and those who had neither a black mustache nor a fair one which they could dye were required to paint the semblance of a black mustache on their upper lip.

"You are both too young. You especially, Valerie. Listen to me. You see what I am now, but I was just as beautiful and young as you when I fell in love with your father. I had no mother to advise me, so I married him. And I have never ceased to be sorry. Oh, you don't know how many times I have wished myself dead, but when one is young and strong one lives somehow through the hardest things. Then your father died and I was left to take care of you and myself or starve. Hugo is a nice boy, but if you marry him you'll be coming to me some da a disillusioned woman, with, maybe, a little child or two, for children come no matter how poor people are. No, I can't have it. You think I'm cruel now, bet some day, my darling, you'll go on your knees to me and thank me fo rsaving you from Hugo and from yourself."

In the end Valerie had obeyed her mbother. And when Timothy Lore wooed her she left him win her. But she had no love to give him and she told him so. She had been married four years now and she still admired and honored her husband, who, she was sure ,was the best man living. But her heart was Hugo's, her boy lover's, who had gone out of her life and her knowledge perhaps forever. It was very nice certainly to have all the good clothes one wanted, to be petted and caressed, to live in a fine house, with no more to do than one cared to. but these were mere creature comforts which did not ,after all, quite satisfy the heart. She was fond of Timothy. How could she help being? But she was only fond. And all the love stories she had ever read demonstrated to her very clearly that she would never , be anything else. Once Timothy had said to her after a profound discussion of heart affairs in general:

"You are convinced that I can't make you love me, aren't you, dear? Well, maybe I can't, but I'm going to try. To use a law term, I think I've got a pretty clear case."

Ever since Timothy had decided upon their coming to eN wYork for a round of sight-seeing and theatre-going and incidentally to buy the sealskin coat she wanted and could have just as well as not since he had triumphed in a certain long-pending suit, her one thought had been that somewhere she might run across Hugo. oT see him again, to hear him speak, to know that he kept his heart for her still—ah, what would she not give!

There was a movement at the entrance of the great dining room of folg going out. And one man was coming in. He hesitated, looking rather helplessly about as if in search of someone. He seemed to feel and to be out of place. He was a slight man, with a sallow skin, and hair as gray as Timothy's, neat but shabby and lacking that air of pleasant assurance that characterized the frequenters of the place. Valerie watched him curiously. Suddenly a look of gratification came over his face and he started forward, pushing past chairs empty and occupied with the same inattention to all but the one object. Valerie sought in surprise:

And then he was there. She leaned across the table, jerking at the newspaper in her husband's hand.

"Timothy, here is someone to see you."

Her husband glanced up, his mind making the change almost painfully from an absorbing editorial to the man's reality. He dropped his paper then and rose with his usual air of pleased courtesy which was his unfailing charm.

"Yes, yes," he said, "I beg your pardon . I sent for you to meet me here because I thought it would be most convenient for you." He had given his hand. "How are you, McCall? This is Mrs. Lore. Sit down, Hugo."

The name fell upon Valerie's ears with the startling effect of a blow. But she managed to control all save the ebbing color in her cheeks. The man stared at her, but it was the start of admiration only. He bowed and said something civil. Then he turned to Thurston, in whom obviously he was most interested.

"Sit down," Timothy reapated genially. "We're about to lunch—ah, there's the waiter now!—and we want you to join us, McCall."

McCall seemed very glad to accept the invitation. He had not lunched, and he ate heartily, with great enjoyment of his food. Valerie, poignantly conscious of him, was almost ashamed to see how much and how eagerly he ate. The fact of her presence did not seem to concern him in the least. Even when Timothy spoke her name he did not heed. Did he then remember nothing? For he must know it was she. There was only one Valerie in Arlington. Her appetite had fled, but she made a pretense of eating by breaking a roll and mincing the salad. Timothy, oblivious of her feelings, talked on with his guest. There was little time to spare. The man must be back at his work at 1 o'clock. It came to Valeri ethat Timothy had somehow, somewhere, received knowledge of McCall and sent for the man in order to make some proposition by which he could better his condition. Timothy was always doing those things. The ywere so common that she scarcely observed them. His heart was big with kindness and charity, for he remembered the time when he, too, had been poor and struggling at odds in a world that was none too gentle with the young and inexperienced.

Suddenly McCall looked at his watch.

"I must go," he exclaimed. "Excuse me, Mr. Lore. If I don't hustle I'll be late, and that means they'll dock my time an hour."

"Go on—go on," Timothy said. He rose and laid his hand on the younger man's shoulder. "Good luck to you, boy. I'll see that you get that place as soon as you are ready for it."

"Thank you, Mr. Lore. You're a white man." McCall said, and his voice trembled as did the hand he gave to Timothy. He bowed hastily to Valerie and was gone.

Valerie sat fingering the handle of her teacup and watching the process apparently with absorbed eyes. Suddenly she looked up at her husband.

"What are you going to do for him?" she asked.

"Why—just this." Timothy dropped into his chair and faced her with his arms upon the table . "He's Milligan's cousin, you know—Milligan in Arlington—and Milligan spoke to me about him—asked me to look him up and do something for him if I could. I'm going to get him out of that place he's in—it's killing him, as you can see—and dgive him something better. Harlin and Mills have said they'd place him. Didn't you hear that? It's a lucky shift for him, poor chap. You see he's got a sickly wife and five children to support——"

Valerie had risen and was fumbling with her furs. The waiter made a quic kmoveemnt forward, but Timothy interceded and with his own hands laid the mink stole across his wife's shoulders. They walked out of the restaurant in silence.

"Tim," Valerie said suddenly, when they were out in the street and the crisp air had blown t hecolor back into her face. "Did you know that—that I once fancied myself very much in love with Hugo McCall?"

"Did you?" returned Timothy, looking straight ahead. But there was a curious expression in his eyes, and about his mouth . He seemed to be trying to figure something out in his mind without being very sure of the result. But when he turned and looked into Valerie's steady eyes his doubt seemed to vanish and he smiled. "Why, what difference does that make to us, sweetheart?" he asked.

Valerie drew a long breath. What a wonderful man her husband was, to be sure!

"Nothing—now," she said softly.

Nervous Prostration For Three Years

"Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine cured me of a period of nervous prostration of over three years duration, and the Anti-Pain Pills are as necessary to us as the roof of our house. They have been household remedies with us for many years."

WM. J. LOUGHRAN, 1214 Catherine St., Philadelphia, Penna.

Much sickness is due to nervous troubles. Headache, dizziness, epilepsy and insanity are nervous troubles. Then there is a large class of disorders which arise from a weakness of the nerves of an organ or part, as weak lungs, heart, stomach, kidney, bladder, eyes, etc. Dyspepsia and indigestion are usually the result of nervous disorders.

Restorative Nervine soothes the irritated nerves, and assists the nerve cells to generate nerve force.

Challenge From the Tribune.

Berlin, March 19.—For the first time in the history of the Reichstag a challenge to fight a duel has been issued from the tribune of the House. The challenger was Herr von Oldenberg, a prominent Conservative and former cavalry officer, who made himself notorious last January by advocating in the Reichstag the Kaiser's right to send a lieutenant and ten men to close the House.

Oldenberg denounced certain members who had attacked him as being devoid of anything approaching honor. He then went to the tribune in a white heat, and challenged four deputies, whom he named to fight him anywhere at any time.

Roosevelt at Abu Hamed.

Abu Hamed, Soudan, March 19.—Col. Roosevelt and his party arrived here yesterday morning after a comfortable journey in a special car over the Soudan Government railway.

Most of the trip thus far from Khartoum, which was left at nine o'clock Thursday night, was made in the night, but the early hours of yesterday afforded a sight of considerable stretches of country. Col. Roosevelt expressed himself as astonished at the luxury of railway traveling through a desert and spoke of the railroad system as a monument to British enterprise in colonization which was able to conquer all difficulties.

New York, March 19.—One-half million dollars, a record high price for a painting, was paid yesterday for the celebrated portrait of Franz Hals, the Dutch painter, and his family, painted by himself. The purchaser was Otto Kahn, the banker, who secured the portrait from the Duveen Brothers. J. P Morgan bid between $300,000 and $400,000 for the picture.

BEST IS RELEASED.

Young Man, However, Gets the Cold Shoulder at Comber.

Windsor, March 19.—That Mrs. Arthus Best, the bride of a month, had threatened to do away with herself on several occasions is the statement of Martha Frankfurth, her cousin, who lives in Comber. She declares that Alice was disappointed in love at least four times.

"Alice said to me several times she had better be dead than alive," said Martha, yesterday afternoon. "The more I think of the situation, I am firmly convinced that Alice, in a fit of despondency, threw herself in the river. Her husband, Arthur, certainly did not treat her as a husband should."

Comber has turned against young Best, who arrived there early yesterday morning, after his release by the Detroit police, and was treated coolly on all sides. He has also lost his position as a tinsmith during his absence. the hardware store where he worked was sold and the new proprietor will not hire him. Comber does not think the young man guilty of serious crime, but censures him for posing as a bachelor. The mother of Alice Frankfurth is seriously ill. She is 60 years old, and the disappearance of her daughter, imparted to her yesterday, may result fatally. Elinore Frankfurth, a daughter, a school teacher near Essex, and her brothers in Detroit were notified, and are now at the bedside.

Mixed Weddings.

Ottawa, March 19.—Mixed marriages and the alleged interference of Roman Catholic priests was the exceedingly interesting subject discussed by the 300 members of the Orange Grand Lodge of Ontario East, which was in session until two o'clock yesterday morning. There was a long discussion and some heated remarks regarding this.

A prominent member of the order said to the reporters:

"There have been several cases throughout the province where, when a Protestant is married to a Catholic priests have interfered, and in some instances as good as said that the couple were living in open adultery, because they had not been married according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church. Protestant clergy do not interfere in any such way. Both the Orangemen of Ontario East and Ontario West agreed that this has got to stop. Lately, according to the press reports, a Canadian Roman Catholic Bishop went so far as to annul a marriage."

Suffragette Freak.

London, March 19.—The freaks of the Suffragettes have hitherto caused more amusement than annoyance to the bulk of the Londoners, but more than a little indignation was excited yesterday when seven of them drove a hired fire engine at high speed through West-end streets at a busy hour. The women, wearing a parody on the firemen's uniform, managed the engine, which was decked with the Suffragette colors. The familiar note of the fire gong caused traffic to follow the custom of drawing aside to let the engine pass, and the ears of the police being equally deceived, the constables assisted in clearing the way until the fraud was discovered, and the career of the engine was stopped.

Referred to Committee.

London, March 19.—The House of Lords referred Lord Rosebery's resolutions looking to the reform of the chamber to a committee, which will consider them next week.

TO MEET EXECUTIVE

Legal Committee Decide to Put Forth Every Effort to Secure the Annual Convention ot Retail Hardware Merchants in February Next.

HALLS AVAILABLE

It was decided at last night's meeting of the Legal committee that the chairman and the Mayor appoint a deputation to meet the executive of the Retail Hardware Merchants Association and guarantee them such halls as they desire for the holding of their annual convention which they propose holding here if the inducements offered by the city are suitable to them. A meeting of the Legal committee was held last evening when there were present Ald. Duffus, chairman, Ald. Turner, Phelan, Buller and Turner. Mr. R. H. Fortye, representing the Peterborough Lock Co., and Mr. H. Morgan of the Peterborough Hardware Co., and Mr. W. Campbell, of Best and Campbell, were also present. They were of the opinion that the city should put forth every effort to secure this convention. It would be a splendid advertisement. Several halls such as the Armouries, the Collegiate Assembly Hall, the Market, the Grand Opera House and the new T. A. S. building were mentioned as mostly likely for such an affair.

WERE ENTERTAINED

Mr. H. P. Kennedy at Home to Members of His Bible Class Last Evening.

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Kennedy were "at home" last evening in their beautiful home, Aylmer street, to Mr. Kennedy's Bible Class. Games of different kinds were played and were greatly enjoyed by all present. After the games were over refreshments were served by the hostess, and then, after several musical selections had been rendered, the President, Mr. N. Perry, and Mr. Saunders, ably moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy. Mr. Kennedy responded briefly on behalf of the hostess and himself, and this brought a very enjoyable evening to a close.

The evening afforded an opportunity to the young men to get better acquainted with Mr. Kennedy and with each other. The class has made rapid progress during the winter; its membership is now over fifty.

Charlotte Street church is to be congratulated on having one of the largest young men's Bible classes in the city, and great credit is due Mr. Kennedy in working up and holding such a fine class of young men.

"The Girl Question"

Bubbling over with fun and laughter, with stage crowded to the utmost, with pretty girls who dance and sing with an enthusiasm positively exhilarating "The Girl Question" comes to "The Grand" Good Friday, for matinee and evening, under the management of H. H. Frazee.

"The Girl Question" is a musical play with an absorbing story of human heart interest developed in its plot, yet filled with such humorous types of characters and situations that an audience is kept in an almost continual stream of laughter. It is written by Adams, Hough and Howard, authors of "The Time, the Place, and the Girl," and is along the same slangy, funny lines of every day life as that wonderful success.

"The Girl Question" has been staged by George Marion, universally acknowledged to be a past master of stage direction, and who produced "The Prince of Pilsen," "The Merry Widow," "The Stubborn Cinderella," "The College Widow," and dozens of other record-breaking hits, and Mr. Marion's name is an assurance that the play will be full of dramatic climaxes, beautiful stage pictures of colour and ensemble, as well as pretty graceful dancers, replete with action.

"The Girl Question" has a record of 339 consecutive performances at the La Salle Theatre, Chicago, and on tour through the larger western cities last winter crowded every theatre in which it played to the very doors.

The cast, which will be seen here is a notable one, and the song hits include "Good-Bye Bal," "I Hate to Work on Monday," "O, Gee, Be Good to Me, Kid," "Waltz With Me Around Till I'm Dreamy," "When Eyes Like Yours Look Into Eyes Like Mine," "The Old Buck and Wing," and "Do Something."

Major Chas. Stapleton, R. O.
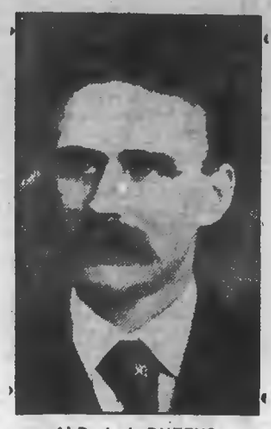
Lieut. J. J. Duffus, Signalling Officer.

A number of matters of importance to the Regiment were taken up and disposed of, principal amongst which was the adoption of official designs for cap and collar badges.

The report of the Inspector of Cavalry was read and officers congratulated Col. Syer upon the splendid tribute paid to his command by the Inspecting Officer, Col. Williams.

The officers present were delighted with the new armouries and were particularly pleased with the handsome new headquarters of the 3rd Dragoons, which have been provided. Most of the officers stayed over, and during the evening at the armouries played indoor baseball, bowling and other indoor games with the officers of the 57th.



ALD. J. J. DUFFUS,
Chairman of the Reception Committee of the City Council, who is working industriously to secure the Hardware Dealers' Convention for Peterborough.

The officers of the 3rd Dragoons were very pleased to have with them their first quartermaster, Major Chas. Stapleton, who has spent, perhaps, more camps with this regiment than any other officer in its history. Major Stapleton is on the Reserve of Officers now, but his enthusiasm for the 3rd Dragoons is always at fever heat.

Major Young, of the 24th Field Battery, and former Medical Officer of the 3rd Dragoons was a welcome visitor at the meeting.

Nelson Shields Ready To Be Distributed In District

We are authorized to state that Rt. Hon. Lord Strathcona's Nelson Shield has been offered by Rev. Alfred Hall, of Toronto, to each of the Schools in the Separate Schools Inspectorate of Eastern Ontario.

There are no charges or conditions.

The British and Foreign Sailors' Society, which received the "Victory" copper from the Lords of the British Admiralty, has undertaken the expense of mounting, engraving, and distributing these historic shields, and only asks some voluntary contribution to reimburse them, and aid their Sailors' Institutes for men of the Royal Navy, Merchant Ships, etc., in Canada, and all over the world.

These Nelson Shields are highly valued for their patriotic and educational uses in the universities, colleges and schools where they are already placed.

Private colleges and schools are eligible to receive the Nelson Shield, and should apply for them.

433 CHILDREN SHELTERED IN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS

Interesting Facts Gleaned From the Annual Report of the Superintendent of Neglected and Dependent Children Mr. J. J. Kelso.

Some interesting facts are gleaned from the annual report of Mr. J. J. Kelso, Superintendent of Neglected and Dependent Children of Ontario, concerning the Industrial schools of the Province. There are four of these institutions and they are doing a good work in moulding and shaping the lives of some 433 children.

Victoria Industrial School for Boys, 245; St. John's Industrial school for Catholic boys, 77; Alexandra Industrial School for Girls, 92; St. Mary's Industrial School for Catholic girls, 19.

Of the total number, 146 are from Toronto and 287 from other cities and towns throughout the Pro

During the past year the Government contributed toward the maintenance of children in three schools the sum of $40,097.51, being at the rate of $1.75 per week for each child.

In addition to this, the municipalities to which the children belonged paid $28,576.75, being at the rate of $1.25 per week, the total maintenance of the children being $3 per week.

The children are only retained long enough to give them a good start in right doing and right thinking. Although they are placed in the school without definite sentence, the average length of stay is less than two years, many of the better children being paroled in a year to a year and a half, the principle prevailing that the children are better off under normal conditions of ordinary life when this can be managed.

The work of the Schools is directed by a benevolent association, and Mr. Kelso, in his report, states that the officials are all thoroughly interested in their work and are seeking in every way possible to aid and encourage the young people under their care to grow up good men and women.

RAN AWAY FROM HOME

Two Lindsay Girls, With Ambition To Go On The Stage, Left Home Last Night and Came Here, Where They Were Arrested.

WERE SENT BACK HOME

Two young girls who a few months ago left Lindsay and went to Buffalo without permission, appeared this morning before Magistrate Dumble on a charge of running away from home.

It appears the girls were on their way to join a vaudeville show in Montreal, but were stopped.

This morning P. C. Adams was called to a house on Simcoe St., where he took the two girls into custody. The woman at the house told the officer that the girls had slept there from early morning.

The sister of one of the girls came from Lindsay this morning and gave evidence in court. She stated that the young girls were causing their parents much anxiety. She also said this was the second time they committed this offence.

The young girls are of highly respected families and the magistrate took this into consideration and allowed them to return home, warning them to reform.

Lecture by Gen. Booth's Son.—Mr. Herbert Booth will deliver his inspiring lecture, entitled: "The Enchanting Story of the Early Christians," illustrated by 200 life models and 1200 feet of animated pictures, in St. Paul's Church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid, on Wednesday evening, March 23rd. STOLE SOME BEER

Three Havelock boys about fifteen years of age are said to have stolen several bottles of beer from the cellar of a well known resident of the village and taken it away to some secluded spot, where they treated some of their friends and drank the balance themselves. It is also alleged that they were bribed by a man who keeps a poolroom, by the promise of being allowed to play the game free of charge, to secure some more of the beer, whereupon it is said they stole some more. Mr. R. E. Wood received a letter from Constable Bennett, of Havelock regarding the matter which has been handed over to Magistrate Edmison. Informations will be laid against the boys and the case will come up for hearing at Havelock on Wednesday.

DANDRUFF DON'T WASH OUT.

The Germ that Causes It Has to be Destroyed, to Cure Dandruff.

Many a woman spends an hour twice a week scouring her scalp, thinking that by scrubbing off the scurf she will cure the dandruff. Two hours a week, at the age of 40 years, she has spent 260 days of 12 hours each, or two-thirds of a year of her life, in that vain hope; vain because you can't cure dandruff without killing the dandruff germ, and the only hair preparation on earth that will do that is Newbro's "Herpicide"—also a delightful hair dressing, and thorough antiseptic against all contagion from use of other's hair brushes. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

CHAINS IN DEMAND

These are dog days, but nevertheless the hardware merchants in Lindsay are not complaining in the least for there has been an exceptionally brisk demand for steel chains. The citizens of Lindsay are law-abiding and as the council issued the mandate that all dogs must be tied up (or at least prohibiting them from running at large), they are compelled to purchase chains.

The demand has been so large that there is at present a dearth in the supply and some of the hardware merchants have sold out the entire stock of leashes. As a consequence of this famine The Warder mascot trotted home at his master's heels this morning tied to a parcel string.

WAIT FOR PICTURES

Cleveland Plain Dealer Has a Humourous Article.

The moving pictures play a very important part in big fights nowadays. There has been considerable joshing because Jeffries and Johnson in signing the articles to fight paid more attention to what they would get out of the pictures than they did to the battle itself. The Cleveland Plain Dealer has a very humorous article about a fight and the picture man. It is worth reproducing here:

The referee held up his hand.

"Them last two rounds don't count," he hoarsely announced. "The fight will have to start all over again."

"What's the trouble, Reddy?" shrieked a fiery-faced man in the tenth row.

"The' trouble is," he explained, "that th' movin' picture man has struck a bad spot in his film an' th' pictures is no good. Are you ready up there, perfessor? All right. Shake hands, boys."

And the battle made a fresh start.

THE MYSTERIOUS NERVES

How like electricity is the mysterious nerve force which courses through the body, controlling the movement of every muscle and the working of every organ. The secret of keeping the marvellous nervous system in health and vigour is found in the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great blood builder and nerve restorative.

John Baptiste De La Pante, the Oldest One, is Nearly 85 Years of Age.—His Daughter, Mrs. Frances Le Fave, Was Married When Only Fifteen.—Her Daughter Also Married at That Age.

ALL WERE BORN HERE

Five generations in one household is something to be proud of and it is isn't every city can boast of it. However Peterborough has a family in which are represented five living generations, and with the exception of two members o fthe group who reside on Water street, they all live at 472 Elm street. This is distinctly unusual and the family might well feel proud, as they surely do, of it.

The oldest one is Mr. ohn Baptiste De la Plante. He is nearly 85 years of age, but he is yet quite smart, and never misses a day without attending mass at St. Peter's Cathedral. The next one is Mrs. Frances Le Fave, a daughter of Mr. De la Plante, and who resides with him, she is 59 years of age. She was married when she was fifteen. She and her husband still look quite young. They have raised a family of twelve children, eight of whom are still living. Mrs. Le Fave's daughter, Mrs. Ernie Lawrence is the next link in this family chain. She has been married twice. She was wedded to her first husband, Wm. Huffman, at the age of fifteen, and her first son was born when only sixteen years of age. He is Mr. Wm. Huffman, Water street. He is married and has two children, the older one, Gwendoline Huffman, being nearly two years of age. It is their intention to have their picture taken and it will, indeed, make an interesting group.

With the exception of Mr. De la Plante, all the above mentioned persons were born and have lived all their lives in Peterborough.

WILL GIVE LECTURE

The Ladies' Art Association of Peterborough have succeeded in securing Mr. E. Wyly Grier to give a lecture on "Ideas in Contemporary Arts." Mr. Grier is one of the foremost portrait painters in America, and his lecture on "Ideas in Contemporary Art." those taking up the work.

The lecture will be given on April 6th.

The Press Association Arranges For Convention

Toronto, March 19.—The Executive committee of the Canadian Press Association met last night at the King Edward Hotel, with the acting President, Mr. J. F. MacKay of The Globe, in the chair. Among those present were Messrs. William O'Bierne, Stratford Beacon; W. J. Taylor, Sentinel-Review, Woodstock; Hal B. Donly, Simcoe Reformer; W. R. Smallfield, Renfrew Mercury; F. Dobbin, Peterborough Review; A. E. Bradwin, Sudbury Star; David Williams, Collingwood Bulletin, and J. R. Bone, Secretary-Treasurer, Toronto Daily Star.

It was decided to hold the annual convention on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 17 and 18, when the guest of the association will be the Hon. Col. Henry Watterson, the famous editor of The Louisville, Kentucky, Courier-Journal. At the conclusion of the convention the association will become the guests of the Grand Trunk Railway and the T. & N. O. Railway Commission for a three days' trip to Cobalt, Cochrane and intermediate points, the trip including, it is expected, a fifty-mile run through the celebrated clay belt on the National Transcontinental Railway.

Mr. Wand Honoured By Friends With Presentation

The choir and congregation of the Mark Street Methodist Church surprised Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Wand, East City, last night by calling on them in a body at their home, and making a presentation to Mrs. Ed. Wand. Previous to her recent marriage Mrs. Wand was soprano soloist of the Mark Street choir, and was very popular with the members of that organization. Last night she was presented with a handsome china set, as a mark of the esteem in which she is held. The gathering spent a very enjoyable evening with games and music, while the ladies served refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Wand wish to express to their many friends their thanks for the very kind gift.

HYDROPHOBIA SAID TO HAVE CAUSED THIS DEATH

New York Lawyer Passes Away in Agony---Was Bitten by a Stray Dog a Month Ago and Had Been Treated in a Pasteur Institute.

New York, March 18.—Arthur Howard Wadick, a lawyer, died yesterday from what is said to have been hydrophobia at his home, No. 683 East 236th street, the Bronx. He had suffered great agony since early Tuesday evening.

On Sunday, Feb. 13th, while walking near his home with Judge Peter A. Shiel, of the Municipal Court, Mr. Wadick was bitten by a stray dog, which attacked him without warning, inflicting wounds on both legs. After returning to his home Mr. Wadick was advised by his wife to have the wounds cauterized.

Wadick went to the Pasteur Institute the same day, and remained there until Tuesday morning. About five o'clock yesterday evening he was seized with convulsions, and Dr. Charles M. Hickey, of No. 23 West 71st St., was summoned. He called in Dr. Thompson, an expert on hydrophobia, who administered opiates, but the man's suffering continued, and he died shortly after daylight.

LANGFORD WON HIS BOUT FROM FLYNN

Los Angeles, Ca., March 18. — Sam Langford of Boston, yesterday did away with Jim Flynn, the fireman, in the last half of the eighth round of a fight that was scheduled to go 45 rounds. The knockout was not a clean one. The uppercut which Langford delivered with his left hand merely accelerated Flynn's fall, after he had missed a right swing at Langford's jaw, and lost his balance. Flynn fell prone on the mat, with his arms extended, and dislocated his jaw.

With his face cut and swollen, bleeding from the nose and mouth, and apparently weakened in body and spirit by the terrific blows of the coloured fighter, Flynn fought through six more rounds and came up for the eighth.

In the first seven rounds Flynn had prevented the coloured fighter from setting himself tor a knockout by closing in whenever he found his arms free and butting his head up against his opponent's chin. He could not do that in the eighth.

When that round was half over, Langford leaped backward from a clinch and started his right to Flynn's jaw. Flynn launched a swing with his right but it failed to find the mark and his body followed through. Langford's left hand shot to Flynn's jaw, but it was more from his own momentum than Langford's blow that Flynn went down and out.

The first round was Langford's Flynn fought close and hugged continually. He was bleeding profusely at the mouth when the round ended. The second round was more even, with Flynn hugging and keeping his head on Langford's shoulder. Neither was harmed.

Both Armstrong and Lew Byers seconded Langford, while Flynn was looked after by Abdul the Turk, and Bill Rooney. Charles Eyton was referee.

Flynn was badly punished in the third round, being down at one time for seven seconds.

Flynn stood back in the fourth round, and let go some long arm punches, and then rushed into a clinch. He was distressed and cut under the chin. Langford appeared unhurt.

Langford tried to force Flynn to open up his guard in the fifth. He landed right and left on Flynn's ribs, and Flynn clinched the round out. The sixth round was a series of clinches. Langford came out of it bleeding from the right eye and the mouth. Flynn seemed to be stronger.

The seventh round was a series of clinches.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL

Miss Myrtle White, of Smith, has returned home after spending a week with friends in Lakefield.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert White, of Toronto, have been visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. White, Communication Road, Smith.

To-morrow at George St.

To-morrow, Sunday, March 20th, is Women's Missionary Sunday at George St. Methodist church and the ladies have been fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. (Rev.) Aikenhead, Barrie for both morning and evening. Mrs. Aikenhead is a forceful, eloquent speaker with a vast experience in evangelistic and home mission work, and we are sure that she will both interest and instruct all who hear her. A cordial invitation is extended to the members of other congregations to attend at least one of these Sunday services.

THE QUEEN'S

Toronto, the Queen City of Canada, has much of the beautiful. It is found in the many handsome churches, artistic public buildings, imposing offices, public drives, parks and gardens. Its government buildings are fine. Of hotels there are many; none, however, approaching the Queen's for perfect service, quiet comfort, and homelike surroundings, and the peculiar excellence of its cuisine. Its fame is far-reaching, and many remember with pleasure the hours spent within its hospitable walls. The charges are based on the American and European plan, and are as follows:

Rooms without bath (American Plan) $3.00 per day up; Rooms with bath (American Plan) $3.50 per day up; Rooms (European Plan) $1.50 per day up

THE TARIFF-WAR SITUATION.

There seems to be no clearing up of the tariff situation. There is no sign that President Taft will be able to resist the influences that demand that he exercise his powers to bring the maximum tariff into effect against Canada. All the excitement over the situation, however, exists at Washington. At Ottawa the government is placidly pursuing the even tenor of its way. Of course, nothing definite is being said by, or on behalf of, the government. If the United States makes a declarstion of tariff war Canada has alleviative weapons to wield in refusal. We can put the surtax of 33 1-3 per cent upon the duty now levied upon United States imports. This operating with the maximum tariff, imposed by our neighbours, would, seriously and possibly for a time, disastrously, affect international trade conditions. But there seems to be a posibility of saving the situation—at the same time asserting our independence and dignity and protecting if not improving our trade interests. If our neighbours bring down the maximum tariff club, can we not quietly ignore them by refusing to use the 33 1-3 per cent. surtax as an act of retaliation, and do as we have done before, take practical steps to extend and improve our connection with the British market. When we gave the British preference of 25 per cent. our trade with the Mother Country took a great increase; it was further stimulated when the preference was increased to 33 1-3 per cent. Now suppose, we advance the British preference to 50 per cent., will this not go far to compensate this country for whatever loss of trade the action of the United States may cause, and at the same time relieve Canada of the reproach of being a party to a foolish tariff war. If Uncle Sam wants a tariff fight, he can have it all to himself.

OWNERSHIP AND OPERATION.

Public ownership of public utilities cannot stand alone; the question of operation is inseparably associated as the one important condition. Ownership of an utility by a municipal corporation loses its chief value, under municipal operation, that is operation in a municipal council. Theoretically, it is possible; practically, it is impossible.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trade derived special importance and interest from the discussion, or rather discourse, upon the question of public utilities. Mr. W. H. Moore, in his treatment of the subject eliminated the idea of successful municipal management in favour of management by commission. He showed how successful had been the operation of municipally owned water works under commission.

It is safe to infer that similar success would attend the placing of such related services as streets and sidewalks, sewers, and sewage disposal, under a commission; and if we added to the water commission the responsibility of light and power, with, of course, increase of remuneration for increased responsibility, we should have the chief public services provided for by commission.

With the successful experience we have had with the water works commission, and with a short experience of streets and sidewalks and sewers under a similar commission, we should have conditions provided by which we could judge of the propriety of adopting what many towns are advocating—the whole work of municipal government by an elective commission. After a few years' trial we should have had in training, say six commisioners, who would have gained a valuable experience; and, if we should consider it advisable to try municipal government at large by commission, we should have six experts to choose from—a very promising beginning.

The changing elements in the average municipal councils account for the average unsatisfactory administration. This is especially true in regard to the administration of our streets. To make this a success there must be practical knowledge and experience, continuity of service and consequent possibility of system. These we can't get by the present arrangement. The chances are a thousand to one against getting a Board of Works selected from an annually elected council, that will meet the conditions of business ability (not to speak of length of service to give experience) necessary to give effective management of street work.

By placing our streets and bridges and sewers under a commission, we should, in the beginning, stand a very good chance of obtaining a trio of capable men. Thus equipped to begin with, with a few years' experience, they would develop a capability that would insure effective work. We should always have on the commission one member with two years' experience, one with one year, and always the advantage of the system, which would be worked out at the beginning. But, with the experience of the water commissioners before us we should, if we made a happy choice in the beginning, have a practically permanent Board of Commissioners, and what we have not now, an assurance of effective and economical administration of our street interests.

We have not that now. Mr. Matthews may be correct when he says that Peterborough has better streets than other cities and towns. If that is the case we, or our manner of spending money on our streets are not to blame for it—the comparative credit is due to natural conditions. Peterborough stands, for the most part, upon a gravel bed, naturally good street soil, and it takes a good deal of ingenuity to spoil it. But it cannot be denied that our streets, outside the sidewalks, are not ideal; that they do not show satisfactory results for the large sums that have been spent, or, rather, wasted, upon them year after year for years.

If we are to spend several thousands upon our streets every year, we want to see something for it. With the natural advantages of soil and facilities for drainage, we have spent enough on our streets in the past 25 years to have permanently macadamized every mile of our city streets, and to have not only better streets than any other town or city, but streets that meet the demands of perfect traffic and pleasure driving surfaces.

We can never expect to accomplish this under the average board of works, changing every year and with no fixed policy or practical system, and subject to the influences of electoral considerations.

It was not in the public interest that the city council last year turned a deaf ear to a proposal to supply for a period of five years, Stony Lake granite street material at the same price as the comparatively worthless and soft street material now employed.

Under municipal management and the electoral influences to which it is subject, we have the examples of inefficient management of our sewers—Romaine street and Downie street—quoted by Mr. Moore.

A commission constituted like the Water Commissioners, and with a membership possessing equal business ability, we could save money, and have our street and sewer work done infintely better than it is now done, because, these services would be administered upon business principles, systematically and connectedly.

We may not be prepared to hand over the whole system of municipal government to a commission, but we have a chance to make a test and gain valuable experience by beginning with the streets and bridges and sewers managed by a commission. It is understood the Council of last year favoured the idea, which may very profitably form a subject of discussion among our leading citizens as well as the general body of ratepayers.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

(By F. M. D.)

The 17th of March.

It may not be generally known that the 17th March is a day that is associated with an historical event quite distinct from the honour of being dedicated to the memory of St. Patrick. Early English calendars tell us that on the 17th of March Noah and his family entered the ark.

Mediaeval calendars and legends are interesting reading. They have such a charming "know-all" ring about them. We learn from the latter that Mrs. Noah was a shrewd of even a worse type than Xantippe, the abusive wife of Socrates. Evidently Chaucer was well acquainted with the story, for, in the Canterbury Tales, Nicholas, examining the carpenter on his knowledge of Noah's flood, asks him:

"Hast thou not heard," quoth Nicholas, also
The sorive of Noe, with his felawship,
Or that he might get his wife to ship?
Him had to be lever, I dare well undertake
At thilke time, than all his wethers blake
That she had had a ship herself alone."

Inoculation for Smallpox.

On March 18 Lady Mary Wortley Montague, the whilome friend of Pope, and one of the most noted women of the day, being on a visit to Belgrade, caused her infant son to be inoculated with the virus of smallpox, as a preventive against the dread disease. This fact is deserving of record as it was the preliminary to the practice of vaccination in England. Lady Montague was of course bitterly assailed by the medical profession and also from the pulpit and a pamphlet against the practice entitled, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God," was scattered broadcast through England. Those who have read the magazines of that day will call to mind how savagely Dr. Jenner, the introducer of vaccination was attacked by his professional brethren. One sage physician, a certain Dr. Mosely went so far in his denunciation as to write as follows regarding the treatment:

* * *

"Can any person say what may be the consequences of introducing a bestial humour into the human frame, after a long lapse of years? Who knows, besides, what ideas may rise in course of time from a brutal fever, having excited its incongruous expressions on the brain? Who knows but that the human character may undergo strange mutulations from quadrupedan sympathy? Mosely also described a boy whose face and part of his body after vaccination became covered with cow's hair and a Dr. Smyth wrote: "Among the numerous shocking cases of cow pox which I have heard of I know not if the most horrible of all has yet been published, viz., of a child at Peckham who, after being inoculated with the cow pox, had his former natural disposition absolutely changed to brutal, so that it ran on all fours, bellowing like a cow, and butting with its head like a bull." The wildest opponent of all was a certain Dr. Ferinand Smyth Stuart ,who wrote: "The omnipotent God of nature, the inconceivable creator of all existence, has permitted evil, Bonaparte and vaccination to exist, to prosper, and even to triumph for a short space of time.  But are we to worship, to applaud, or even to submit to evil, Bonaparte or to vaccination because they have been for some time prosperous? No! Never let us degrade our honour, our virtue, or our conscience by such servility; let us contend against them with all our exertions and might, not doubting we shall ultimately triumph in a cause supported by truth, humanity and virtue and which therefore, we well know, Heaven itself will approve."

* * *

We who live in more enlightened days can appreciate to the full the debt we owe to both Lady Mary Wortley Montague and Dr. Jenner, when it is remembered that prior to the practice of inoculation the average mortality of those attacked by smallpox was one in four.

* * *

The City Council and the Dogs.

The City Council has taken, as was to be expected, a common sense view of the dog question. The plain fact of the matter has been that a newspaper paragraph has created a widespread and absolutely causeless scare throughout the whole of this province. Dr. Rutherford whose dictum as being authoritative ought to be final, tells us that he has received no notification whatever of a case of rabies east of Toronto, and from other sources we learn that it is highly doubtful if a case of rabies has really been discovered in the province. Newspapers are indispensable in their way, but an irresponsible article or letter appearing in cold print can do more mischief than any amount of speechifying. If writers would bear this fact in mind the public would be the gainer.

Going out of Business

As I am compelled to vacate the premises where I am at present doing business, I am offering all my stock of buggies, wagons, democrats, wheelbarrows, and delivery sleighs and cutters at prices to clear that cannot be met any place in the city. Anyone requiring any of the above can secure a snap if they have the cash. I have also a stock of neck yokes, whiffletrees, double trees and 20 pair of twin neck yokes.

THE NEW GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC SHOPS AT TRANSCONA NEAR WINNIPEG

Government Building Big at Winnipeg ---Progressive Policy Gives New Transcontinental Largest Railway Shops in Canada at Chief Divisional Point---Splendid Structures Well Under Way and Will Be Ready For Occupation Within the Year

STORY IN SENTENCES

- Largest Railway Shops in Canada.
- Thirteen Separate Buildings.
- Eighteen Departments.
- Eight Buildings of Steel Construction.
- Five Buildings of Reinforced Concrete.
- 5,000 Tons of Steel Required.
- Largest Construction Steel Contract in Canada in 1909.
- Winnipeg Firm Awarded Contract.
- Shops Will Employ 3,000 Men.
- Employees and Families Will Make a New City.
- Shops Will Be Ready for Work by January, 1911.

The Grand Trunk Pacific railroad shops—now in process of construction at Winnipeg—will be the largest railroad shops in Canada. Shops and grounds will cover three hundred acres, and there will be seventeen acres of floor space in the thirteen several buildings that will make up the plant. Details arising out of this general statement make up an interesting story of progress made in this, one of the largest transportation systems in the world—as the Grand Trunk Pacific, with its many branches by land, and lake and ocean steamship lines, will be when completed.

The great shops that are now being built at Winnipeg are, of course, but a part of Grand Trunk Pacific development in that city. Winnipeg is the chief divisional point on the new transcontinental road, west of Quebec, and as such has been made very much a part of the system—has had a big place in all the plans of the new road. Grand Trunk Pacific offices fill a whole floor of one of the largest buildings in Winnipeg, and a new block, twelve storeys high—the tallest in Winnipeg—has been erected for office purposes, already too considerable for the space that was taken for temporary quarters about a year and a half ago. There is a new Union Station that cost a million and a half dollars, and Grand Trunk Pacific terminal facilities are being worked out in a generally large and fine way—quite in keeping with the magnitude of the project and the character of the city in which these landmarks of progress are located.

Shops Will Employ an Army.

The Grand Trunk Pacific shops alone will employ a small army of men—as many as 5,000 or 6,000 when they are in full operation. As stated, there will be thirteen buildings in all, and these buildings will house the various departments and shops. The main building — the framework for which is nearly all in place—is to be 880 feet long, 180 feet wide, and 47 feet high. In this immense structure will be the locomotive, boiler and tank shops. Other buildings will be smaller than the main structure, but each will be ample for the first demands to be made upon it, and the whole plan has been laid out with a view to such increased size and facilities as the road's growth may make necessary. Dimensions of the principal departmental shops are as follows:

- Locomotive Machine and Erecting Shop, 180 by 612 feet, 47 feet high.
- Boiler Tank Shop, 180 by 210 feet, 47 feet high.
- Stores and Scrap Shop, 40 by 220 feet, 47 feet high.
- Forge Shop, 100 by 260 feet, 47 ft. high.
- Grey Iron Foundry 130 by 200 feet, 47 feet high.
- Power House 110 by 150 feet, 49 feet high.
- Cleaning Room 48 by 80 feet, 25 feet high.
- Locomotive Carpenter and Pattern Shop 70 by 100 feet, 43 feet high.
- Stores 60 by 200 feet, 18 feet high.
- Oil House 40 by 60 feet, 15 feet high.
- Wheel Foundry 92 by 138 feet.
- Engine House 170 feet radius, 1,068 feet circumference.
- Freight Car Shop 200 by 600 feet.
- Paint Shop 100 by 325 feet.
- Coach Shop 125 by 250 feet.
- Planing Mill 100 by 300 feet.
- Lumber Shop 60 by 115 feet.
- Dry Kiln 40 by 80 feet.

Like all other work done by the Grand Trunk Pacific in making the second great transcontinental railway across Canada, the Winnipeg shops are being built in the most substantial and solid manner. Steel, stone, brick and concrete are the materials used, and construction work is being done upon strictly scientific lines and according to the latest and best plans for such operations.

Local Firm Got Contract.

A fact contributory to securing the best possible results in material and workmanship lies in the awarding of the contract for building the Grand Trunk Pacific shops to a Winnipeg firm, the Manitoba Iron & Bridge Works. This firm has the biggest and best plant for doing work of the kind that is involved in building the new railway shops, west of Toronto, and—in the matter of construction in Canada for the year 1909. This contract calls for the use of 5,000 tons of steel.

The plans, drawings and building details all have been prepared in the engineering department of the Manitoba Bridge Works, under the direction of Chief Engineer Hugh McKay. All of the structural steel for the contract is fabricated and painted at the city shops of the constructing firm—enlarged last year by the addition of $200,000 worth of new buildings and machinery—and is taken to the shops' site by the trainload. At the point of construction, the work of putting the steel framework in place is under direction of Mr. T. P. Farley, a man of much experience in this line of work.

Work Pushed During Winter.

Concrete foundations and piers were put in place last fall, and were, therefore, in readiness for the steel superstructure that has been put up this winter. Work on this part of the big shops was begun January 6th, and in the two months that followed no less than 2,500 tons of steel was erected and riveted in place for the brick, stone and cement filling which will follow the steel framework.

Already the great shops are taking on a look of near-completion. Long avenues of steel posts, girders and roofwork stretch into the distance, and show the limits of the shops that soon are to be, most substantially. Huge piles of bricks, carloads of steel, travelling derricks busily worked by skilled mechanics; teams of horses coming with loads of steel from the near-by cars, and going away for more material to keep the builders supplied; forges for heating rivets, and the rattling tattoo of the riveting hammer driven by compressed air, all tell the story of work that is being pushed to the full of reasonable haste and diligent purpose.

Storehouses, blacksmith shops, boarding houses, and such other temporary structures as the nature of the work demands, have been erected, and are in use by the workmen who are engaged in building the big shops. The scene is full of business, and the intention to have the shops ready for occupation by next December seems likely to be forestalled by the speed with which the work is being pushed along.

Roundhouse Nearly Completed.

Outwardly the big roundhouse is practically finished. Workmen are putting the last touches to the roof, and the structure presents a completed appearance. This building has a radius of 170 feet, and a circumference of 1,068 feet, with a shop attached that is 200 feet long by 50 feet wide. Inwardly, the locomotive house is being thoroughly prepared to do its work as a well-equipped structure for the housing of locomotives, while off duty. Solidity of construction, an admirably adapted system of drainage, and generally good and convenient arrangement of the building for its work, mark the making of the Grand Trunk Pacific roundhouse, a structure which has 25 stalls now, and may be enlarged to forty when need demands.

When the plant is ready for work it will be not only a thoroughly equipped part of a great railroad system, but it means the building of a city around the Grand Trunk Pacific shops. At the start there will be from 2,000 to 3,000 men employed at the big shops. With their families, the shop employees will make up a population of 6,000 at least, and the number is sure to be increased rapidly. Growth and expansion of railroads in Western Canada is a thing of speedy development and reasonable expectation will give the new town that is to spring up around the Grand Trunk Pacific shops a population of from 10,000 to 15,000 within the next three years. Plans have been made for this. A townsite has been laid out, and hundreds of lots have been sold, very largely, thus far, for speculative purposes.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

The Peterborough Bowling Club, situated in the old Opera House, George St., has changed hands, having been acuired by two enterprising local gentlemen, whose names are an assurance of satisfactory management in future. These gentlemen have purchased the entire splendid outfit from Mr. Lester, of Toronto, with the distinct attention of improving bowling alley methods in this city, so that the game may attract a class of patrons who will appreciate the healthy exercise and recreation which it is calculated to promote. The Peterborough Bowling Alley is said to be the best between Toronto and Montreal, and its equipment the most perfect and up-to-date. The chute has been found scientifically constructive and every feature of the alleys adapted for good scoring. The regulation balls have been pronounced by experts to have the desired characteristic in perfect balance and weight. With good management and a rigid system of rules the new proprietors expect to work up a new enthusiasm for the game.

THE ADVENTURES OF A JOURNALIST IN SOME OUT OF THE WAY PLACES

Mr. Frederick Wright, an English Newspaper Man, Has Had Some Unusual Experiences Around the World.

SOME OF HIS IMPRESSIONS

To have been driven out of Russia because of police censorship, to have been arrested in Berlin for a breach of what might be styled military etiquette, to have been an eye witness of the Indian Durbah, to have seen victims of the Belgian cruelty in the Congo Free State, to have visited every hole and corner of the terrestrial foot stool except the United States, are experiences that have come to few men, but there has been one of these lucky individuals in Peterborough this week in the person of Mr. Frederick Wright, an English journalist, who has been here on business, and whom many local citizens have met. Few, however, have had any idea of Mr. Wright's adventures, as he is quiet and unassuming, and unless drawn out of his shell is rather uncommunicative. Once started, however, he is a store house of information of an unusual character, and as he is a charming conversationalist, with an ability to paint word pictures that bring the scenes he describes vividly before his hearers, those who have been fortunate enough to listen to his experiences have followed his remarks with unbounded interest. An Examiner reporter was privileged to have an hour's conversation with Mr. Wright, the other night, and the scribe will not soon forget the chat. Mr. Wright has seen the world as few men have been privileged to see it; not with the globe-trotting methods of the Cook tourist, armed with his Baedeker, but with the keen insight of the trained newspaperman, who gets on the inside of things. In the interests of his paper, the London Telegraph, he has visited, as has been stated every portion of the world, with the exception of the land of Uncle Sam, and has seen the seamy side of life, the portion in every country that is generally hidden from the casual visitor. A special writer, assigned to study the social conditions, and with the instinct and the ability to get down to fundamental principles, he has been enabled to amass a volume of interesting information, a knowledge of the people and conditions of the world that is unique.

Speaking of his experiences in Russia to the Examiner, Mr. Wright remarked that he did not like that country very much, at least not the police methods that obtain there.

"I was sent to Russia by the Telegraph," he remarked, "to study the situation there at the time, three years ago, when there was so much discontent among the lower classes. I found the peasants to be a good class of people, but the Czar I considered a weakling, and that is where I got into trouble with the police. You will remember that the peasants asked the Czar to show himself to them, and he refused like a coward. There would not have been the slightest danger of an attack on his person if he had appeared on the balcony of the palace, as the people were too far away to harm him had they wanted to. However he refused to accede to their request and I considered him a weakling and wrote as much to my paper with the result that I got several hints from the St. Petersburg secret police that my presence in Russia was objectionable and it would be much more pleasant and safe for me to leave the country. Things got so bad that I was afraid to go out on the street alone at night. The police had understood all three codes that we used and the blue pencil of the censor never ceased working until finally I concluded that I had better depart whilst I was safe.

"The only time that I got into actual trouble was in Germany. You know in that country the military authorities are supreme and civilians are expected to give way to them. If a beer garden is crowded, and some officers come in the civilians meekly get up and make room for them. One night there were six of us English newspapermen sitting at a table in a Berlin garden. The party included Williams, of the London Times, a strapping man, who was paying his first visit to Germany. Presently a party of German officers came in, and, failing to find a vacant seat one of them came over to our table, and nudged Williams, as a gentle hint, that he should get up and allow him to sit down. Williams paid no attention and kept on with his conversation. Mr. Officer did it again with the same result. Then, exasperated by the nonchalance of the Englishman, the German drew off his glove and struck Williams across the face. Our man, who is almost a giant in stature, drew himself up to his full height, and before the Kaiser's bravo could realize what was about to happen, he was prostrated by a smashing right-hander from the fist of the newspaperman. In an instant there was a melee. We rushed in to help our comrade, and seized the officers before they could draw their weapons. The police rushed in, we were arrested and hauled off to the station. It was just about the time that an officer had cut down a civilian, and the Kaiser had stated that he was perfectly justified in doing so, and our position, therefore, was not the most pleasant in the world. However, we escaped with a reprimand from our ambassador delivered in the presence of the German officials. We were given a terrific wigging, which appeased the wounded dignity of the Germans, but after it was all over the ambassador shook hands with all of us.

Belgian Cruelties.

"You were in the Congo Free State, were you not?" asked the reporter.

"Yes, I spent two months there," replied Mr. Wright, "and the conditions there are just as bad as they have been described. I have seen the natives with their hands chopped off because they did not bring in the proper complement of rubber. You know the natives are sent out to collect rubber, and if they do not return with their buckets filled they are cruelly punished. Sometimes, as I have said, their arms are cut off as a warning to the others to work harder. In other cases they are sent to the whipping post, because they have not collected quite enough. I witnessed a whipping one day and with my companion, also a newspaper man, stopped another one in the name of the British Government, although, of course, I had no authority to do so. However, our blood boiled at the sight and we could not permit it to go on.

What I could not understand was why the natives submitted to such atrocities. At one post there were only seven Belgians and about twenty-five black policemen, as opposed to some three hundred natives, and yet those fellows endured torture and cruelty, allowed their wives and daughters to be treated in a shameful manner by the black fiends who go under the name of police, and never made an attempt to resist. Why, they could have wiped the Belgians and their allies out of existence without the slightest difficulty, but they cringed meekly before them.

Japan Progressing.

"Japan is a wonderful country," said Mr. Wright, speaking of the land of the Rising Sun." The people are adopting Western methods, and are advancing in modern manners in a way that is dangerous. An old sea captain once told me of an experience that illustrates what I say. Many years ago, before the country had been touched by civilization, at least by Western civilization, he had occasion to be in Tokio, and having heard of the innate honesty of the Japanese, determined to test it. Accordingly, he left a valuable handkerchief in the centre of a public square through which many hundreds of people passed daily. Next day he found that the handkerchief had not even been touched. Years afterwards he again visited Tokio, and found conditions totally changed. The people had learned to steal, and the influence of Western civilization had apparently worked a surprising transformation in their ability to distinguish between meum and tuum."

The Japanese are learning our methods fast, and if they bring the Chinese along with them the ultimate struggle will not be between white race and white race, but between the white race and the yellow. It will not be a case of England versus Germany, but of the white powers against the forces of China and Japan. Then will come the battle and it will be a case of the survival of the fittest.

NOTICE TO FAT WOMEN

Presumably you know, ladies, that the proper caper nowadays is lines. Curves are passe. You have got to take off your fat. This must be done in one of three ways. By dieting, by exercises, or by means of Marmola Tablets. The two former will keep you busy for months and punish you pretty severely, the latter will cost 75 cents at the druggist's. The tablets will not make any alteration in your diet necessary, and yet in all probability, before you have used up one case, you will be losing from 12 to 16 ounces of fat a day. Which method do you like the best?

If you fancy this pleasant method of getting off the fat, see your druggist instantly ,or else write the Marmola Co., 833 Farmer Building., Detroit, Mich., to send you a case by mail. These cases contain so generous a quantity of tablets that the treatment is very economical. It is, also, quite harmless, for the tablets are made exactly in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription.

Ghost Story From Cavan Township Was Enlarged Upon.

Messrs. Fred and Robert Johnston, of Cavan, called on the Examiner yesterday afternoon and stated that the story that appeared in the Sunday World and was afterwards published in this paper, regarding the appearance of the ghost in their stable, was greatly exaggerated and enlarged upon. While they admit that the girl said she saw something she could not say what it was and never at any time said it was a ghost.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

Renovating a Suit.

Of course everyone likes to have a new suit each season, but four suits a year soon land one in a mess of half-worn clothes that are a burden and a reproach to a conscientious woman. It is often wiser and more satisfactory to remodel a last year's suit than to buy a new one.

A good material should give two or three seasons of hard service if it is handled in the right manner. It can always be cleaned, turned or dyed so that the most fastidious woman can satisfy herself as to its absolute freshness.

A new lining, new cuff and collar facing for a coat and a general overhauling for a skirt will put a last year's suit quite in order if one only intends using it for rainy days.

But if the suit must make a presentable appearance in good society one will have to go to a little more trouble. It should be recut, the sleeves made up-to-date and the neck opening, collar, etc., made to answer to the last word on smart tailoring.

Velvet will be used on the more dressy coats for spring in facing the collars and cuffs and as an edge in place of the braids we have used so long.

The wraps and capes are mostly sleeveless, with large or small openings for the hands, as they have been for the present season, but they are decidedly new in the arrangement of the drapery and in the bands which are used to hold in the fulness of the lower portion, just as they are used on the new skirts.

Linings need not harmonize to be in good taste, many gay colors are used, making the most brilliant colour combinations, while bands of velvet are used as a trimming, as for the coats.

The unbelted coats, and there are just as many of these as with belts, which are not always becoming, are about hip length, and they are cut away at the front in a curved or diagonal line or lapped over wide at the left side.

Unless there is fulness given by the cut of the coat, have it finished with a deep plait at each side of the back, as this will be one of the distinctive points about the new coats.

Small bone buttons set very close together are much used on coats buttoning higher up, while two or three buttons of a larger size are placed low on the coats with long lapels.

The lapels and revers should be very wide and short, or very long and more narrow in appearance.

Many times, says a writer in the Housekeeper, the belt on the sewing machine can be tightened without being taken off. Pour two or three drops of your machine oil on the leather, then run it swiftly round for a minute or so. This treatment makes it possible for one to continue her work with a tightened belt with the loss of very little time and no soiled fingers.

Even such simple things as a button and buttonhole require proper treatment to insure neatness. When buttoning or unbuttoning a garment, forcing the button across the width of the buttonhole will soon tear out the latter. For the same reason buttons with only two holes are better than those with four, and should be so placed that their holes will be on a line with the length of the buttonhole. Even with a four-holed button, one seamstress sews through only two—those on the farthest corners.

While riding on the street car the other day I noticed a thin shirtwaist that hooked down the back, finished with French knots along the closing. It was not until some time afterwards that I realized that the main idea of the decoration was not so much beauty as it was to hide the fastening of the hooks to the sheer material. I should think this would be a splendid way to conceal the unavoidable defect in thin collars and silk waists.

When sewing machine needles become blunted, rub them across a whetstone, which repoints as good as new.

If for any reason, either poor eyesight or lack of light at machine, one has difficulty in threading the machine needle, try holding a piece of white cloth or paper on the opposite side of the needle eye, which will then be so prominent that threading will be easy.

Keep a bag hanging on sewing machine to catch scraps. Have scissors hung by a cord or ribbon.

The Fairies' Gift.

"What shall we give?" the fairies said,
Dancing by night 'round the cradle bed,
"Give her," said one with an emerald zone,
"Give her of earth the sweetest things known—
Love that is watchful and tender and true,
Joy that is fresh every morn with the dew,
Graces of beauty and roses of health,
Sparkle of genius and splendour of wealth,
All that doth render the earth most bright,
Many a dazzling gift to tell
That the fairies love and love her well."

Potato Rolls.

Take four large potatoes, boil until quite soft in a small saucepan of water. Take two large cups of flour and three tablespoonfuls of yeast, or a small half yeast cake, and a little salt; knead all to a thick batter about three o'clock and at nine knead in a little more flour, and set in a warm place until morning. In the morning knead into the dough half a cup of sugar and a little shortening, with a very little more flour. Let it rise two hours, then make into rolls, allowing an hour for them to rise after they are in the pans. Keep the dough nice and spongy, not too stiff with flour. When nearly baked wash over with a little milk to make them a nice brown.

Potato Soup.

Four pounds mealy potatoes boiled very dry, pepper and salt to taste, an onion or two, two quarts stock. Mash the potatoes smoothly and gradually add the boiling stock; pass it through a sieve, season, and simmer five minutes. The onion should be boiled in the stock. Some minced parsley served in the soup is an improvement.

Salmon Croquettes.

Prepare two cups of salmon, chopped fine, freed from skin and bone and seasoned with a level teaspoonful of salt, a good dusting with paprika or white pepper, a teaspoonful of minced parsley and a teaspoonful of lemon juice.

Make a pint of white sauce by melting two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, adding four tablespoonfuls of flour or two heaping tablespoonfuls of corn starch, and stirring until well blended.

Then add two cups of hot milk or half cream, and stir until smooth and thick. Season again with salt and pepper to taste—it will only need a trifle—add the fish, stir until heated, then turn out on a platter to cool. When cold and firm shape into croquettes, roll in fine bread crumbs, then in egg and again in crumbs and fry in boiling fat. Serve hot, with a garnish of parsley and thin slices of lemon.

A Pretty Tie.

A pretty tie that can easily be made at home from scraps of material is a box-plaited tie of handkerchief linen or fine lawn, trimmed with lace.

The linen is cut about six inches long, and two inches from the bottom it has two rows of hemstitching run across it. The edges are rolled and finished on sides and across bottom with a half-inch insertion of Valenciennes lace.

The tie is made up with a central box plait and three side plaits on either side. The top is finished with a narrow band of the lawn, which may have a buttonhole worked in the middle of it to slip over the collar button.

ARNPRIOR DRUGGIST ENDORSES D. D. D.

Canadian druggists are becoming enthusiastic about D. D. D. as they find it really cures customers of eczema and other torturing skin diseases.

"I have handled D. D. D. ever since you commenced advertising it in Canada, as I know it to be good, having sold it for several years in Belt, Montana, where I found it gave superior satisfaction."

(Signed) J. CHAMBERS.

For years doctors tried to cure eczema through the blood. As it is caused by germs in the skin itself they were naturally not very successful.

Then came D. D. D. Prescription—a mild, soothing, yet penetrating compound of oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc., that kills the germs in the inner skin, relieves the awful itch and cures.

"A TRIP TO BERMUDA," THE TITLE OF FINE ADDRESS

Rev. Dr. Marsh of Springville Gave a Most Interesting Lecture at St. Paul's Church Last Night—The Land of Coral.

WAS MUCH APPRECIATED

Rev. (Dr.) Marsh, of Springfield, gave a most interesting lecture last evening on a "Trip to Bermuda," at St. Paul's church.

Throughout Dr. Marsh's lecture he pointed out the beauties of nature in the Caribbean Sea. Accompanying his lecture were seventy-five illustrations, which he obtained while there.

When very young the Rev. Doctor had heard of the beauties of the Bermudas, and he determined to some day see them. This impression remained on him, and in 1903 he at last had the pleasure of seeing the base of the British navy, in that portion of the world.

Dr. Marsh left the City of Hamilton on a Friday, and arrived in New York on Saturday morning. Saturday afternoon he boarded the steamer Trinidad for the Islands. Soon the ship was floating out into the broad expanse, known as the Atlantic. Sunday morning was spent steaming through the Gulf Stream. The Coral Islands came in sight on Monday morning, and soon Dr. Marsh and his friend, Mr. Wallace were standing in Hamilton, the capital of the Islands. As the ship was approaching the islands, it was at once steered directly away from them, this was necessary as they had to pass coral reefs, buried in the water. The islands are three hundred and sixty-five in number, so that a person could spend a day on each island for every day in the year.

Dr. Marsh found the educational system developed and the people well mannered. The industry of the people was farming. The products exported from that country are red bananas, onions and small vegetables. The buildings were constructed out of coral blocks and the government compelled the natives to whitewash their houses, thus making the house a block of white. Surrounding the farms were groves of red cedar, which made the different homes very picturesque. Trains are not known of in this country; all the traffic and transportation being carried on by means of donkeys and small two-wheeled carts. One walking down the streets in Hamilton would find himself between two perpendicular walls of white coral.

While in Hamilton Dr. Marsh visited the vicinity where Thomas Moore, the poet, wrote many of his poems. He also visited the ancient city of St. George, where he saw a lighthouse four hundred feet in height, the greater part being made of coral. This signal house gave permission to boats to approach the islands. After spending several weeks in examining the beautiful islands he returned home, satisfied that his wish had been gratified.

Dr. Marsh expressed his thanks to the people for their kind attention, and thus concluded his lecture.

Mr. J. C. Shook moved a vote of thanks to the lecturer, which was cordially carried.

The entertainment closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

CLAUSE IN NEW DOG BY-LAW OPPOSED AND WAS STRUCK OUT

Legal Committee Considered By-law Introduced by Ald. Turner—If Barking Dogs Keep You Awake Lay Complaint—Some Changes.

REFERRED TO SOLICITOR

What should be done with the dogs of Peterborough was discussed by the Legal committee at a meeting last evening. Ald. Turner presented a by-law which was referred to City Solicitor Hall for ratification. The clause recommending that the dogs be muzzled was ordered to be "cut out," it being the opinion that such action was unnecessary. Dr. McNulty was at the meeting. He stated that he was strongly opposed to the "muzzling" order. There had been no rabies here, he said, and there had been considerable doubt expressed as to whether it was rabies up in West Ontario. The fact that there had been no deaths, save one, was strong proof that it wasn't rabies. There was a certain class of dogs running at large that it would be well to keep out of town. A higher fee should be put on them.

The By-law.

The chairman read the by-law, after which it was taken up clause by clause, after which upon motion of Ald. Turner and Ald. Buller it was referred to the city solicitor. It was as follows:

A by-law for restraining and regulate the running at large of animals in the City of Peterborough.

Whereas by section 492 of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1883, the council of every city is authorized to pass by-laws for the restraining and running at large of any animals and it is desirable to pass a by-law for the purpose aforesaid in the City of Peterborough.

The Corporation of the City of Peterborough by the council thereof enact as follows:

Clause 1—No person shall suffer or permit any animal to run at large, or trespass upon the property of any other person or body corporate in the City of Peterborough.

Clause 2—Any person violating the provisions of this by-law shall on conviction thereof be subject to a fine not less than one dollar and not exceeding fifty dollars and costs to be levied in case of default of payment by distress and sale of the offender's gods, and in cases of nonpayment of the fine inflicted, and there being no distress out of which such fine can be levied the offender shall be liable to imprisonment with or without hard labour in the county jail in the County of Peterborough, for any period not exceeding 21 days.

Clause 3—This by-law shall not affect or diminish the right to impound animals running at large or trespassing under any by-law of the said corporation, nor any other law in force, giving a right to obtain compensation for any damage done by animals running at large and doing damage or trespassing on or to the property of any other person.

Clause 4.—This by-law shall not apply to dogs accompanying the owners on the public streets when under control, because of leash for the proper control of any dog or bitch provided such dog or bitch shall have and carry securely attached to a strap or collar about their neck a tag of the character hereinafter described.

4. This by-law shall not apply dogs accompanying the owners on the public streets when under control, but use of leash for the proper control and restraint of any dog or bitch provided such dog or bitch shall have and carry securely attached to a strap or collar about their neck a tag of the character herein described.

5. Such tags shall be of the form and character decided upon from time to time by the city council or police committee thereof, and shall be is sued by the city clerk of the said city yearly on payment for the use of the said corporation of the fee of two dollars for each dog and five dollars for each bitch and shall be valued until the thirtieth of April in the year following for which the same shall be issued.

6. The city clerk will keep a register of the issue of such tags and the persons to whom the same were issued and the sum paid therefor, the number in each case corresponding to the number of tags issued and in making out the collector's roll he shall credit as against the dog tax otherwise payable by any other person according to such roll the sum or sums paid by such person for tags pursuant to this by-law.

7. Where the owner, possessor or harbourer of any dog or bitch has paid the tax on such dog or bitch for any year no further tax or fee shall be payable for such dog or bitch by the same or any other person for the same year, but nothing herein contained shall affect the right to kill any dogs or bitch running at large with or without a tag.

8. Any dog or bitch owned, possessed or harboured on any premises which may be deemed a nuisance by reason by the amount of barking, crying or howling must be removed or destroyed by the owner, possessor or harbourer upon being adjudged guilty by the magistrate or justice of the peace before whom a charge will be laid upon information of the complainant. In event of the owner, possessor or harbourer failing to carry out this clause after being told by the magistrate or justice of the peace to do so within twenty-four hours he shall beliable to a fine of not less than one dollar for each twenty-four hours afterwards and at the expiration of forty-eight hours after judgment has been given the police will destroy the dog or bitch and the owner, possessor or harbourer will remove the same at his own expense.

9. The police will be instructed by the commissioners to impound all dogs or bitches found running at large with or without muzle and to keep the dog or bitch for twenty-four hours after being impounded to give the owner a chance to claim his property, pay the expenses incurred and take the dog or bitch away. If at the expiration of twenty-four hours the dog or bitch has not been claimed the police are authorized to destroy the same.

Remarkable Pictorial Lecture

BY MR. HERBERT BOOTH

(Youngest Son of General Booth)

The lecture which will be given in St. Paul's Church Wednesday evening, March 23, by Mr. Booth, on "The Early Christians," promises to be the greatest treat the people of Peterboro have ever enjoyed. It will be exquisitely illustrated by 200 Life-Model and 1,200 feet of animated pictures—made under Mr. Booth's own direction from dramatic Tableaux by 600 Living Models. Secure your tickets early, as it is expected the Church will be filled beyond its capacity. Admis. 25c

POST CARD COLUMN.

Peterborough, March 18, 1910.

Mr. Editor,—There are some things that die hard. You have to hit them often and hit them hard before they down. Now this church entertainment business, such as church operettas, concerts, cantatas, etc., and all church suppers, high teas, etc., where these are sold at the door of the sanctuary or by ticket it is in direct violation of an ordinance on the statute books of the city. All who are in this business (and some seem to be in it to stay) I would say, do one of four things, 1st either petition the Council to exempt churches and Salvation Army from the penalty attached to violating of said ordinance or by-law, 2nd take out an eating house and also a play house license, 3 quit the business, or 4th prepare to pay the penalty attached to the violation of the law. Saint Paul said, I Tim., 1-9, "The law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and for sinners." "Submit yourself to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake," 1 Peter, 2:13, is a clincher for those who will persist in dealing out thousands and tens of thousands of meals in their churches in defiance of the city ordinance which says ye shall not do so without taking out a license. The Review hit this business between the eyes the other day when the editor said: "If these charges about the churches being turned down into eating houses be true, the civic officials should get after them for eating house licenses."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for another privilege of speaking to the hearts and consciences of your many thousand readers, I remain, yours, etc.,

JNO. CARLISLE.

MR. HERBERT BOOTH COMING TO PETERBORO

To Deliver His Lecture in St. Paul's Church on "The History and Heroism of the Early Christians."

Peterborough is to be favoured with a visit from Mr. Herbert Booth, youngest son of General Booth, head of the Salvation Army. He will appear in St. Paul's church on the evening of the 23rd inst., under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid, and will deliver his bioscopic lecture on "The History and Heroism of the Early Christians."

"Speaking of methods, Mr. Booth, I heard you had made quite a sensation in America by developments in the use of the lantern and cinematograph:

"Yes, it is, I think, generally admitted by experts that my lecture which is attracting such enormous crowds everywhere, is about the best development in its line; but I regard it as only the beginning of far greater possibilities."

Proceeding, Mr. Herbert Booth said the subject of his lecture was "The History and Heroism of the Early Christian Church." "The idea occurred to me in Australia. I wanted to bring before the churches of to-day a vivid portrayal of the devotion of the early Christians — to bring the saints from their graves and let them live and move and testify again for their Master. To portray their heroic struggle in the streets of Jerusalem, in the squares of Rome, in their primitive sanctuaries, in their hiding places among the mountains, exhorting each other and burying their dead in the catacombs, their fidelity before kings, their struggles in the Coliseum—I wanted to make it all real and stirring by the aid of life model and moving pictures."

"How did such a good theory work out?"

"Having collected my facts, I organized a company of living models—Christian men, women and children. These I correctly costumed and trained to act their several parts—there were about 600 in all. Then I had scenery painted, an open-air stage erected, and on this stage I posed my models so as to follow my story with a picture for about every forty words spoken. The cameras did the rest. When the story was thus illustrated by still pictures I got my models to act it before the cinematograph and secured my films.

These still pictures secure me the attention of my audience, enabling me to enforce the truth while the motion picture repeats and re-impresses it to the accompaniment of hymns sweetly sung. The effect is wonderful, as you may judge when I say that I have had as many as 8,000 people in America listeneing with the keenest attention to the sacred subject till after eleven o'clock at night."

Taft Has Been Working Hard

Earl Grey, Hon. Mr. Fielding and the President Will Meet In Albany and Visit There Will Be Made a Private Conference on the Subject of an Agreement Regarding the U. S.-Canadian Tariff.

Albany, N.Y., March 19.—History both state and international, may be made here to-day and to-morrow, when Albany entertains the Governor-General of Canada and the President of the United States. The President comes on the invitation of personal friends and originally, it is believed his visit was intended to be purely social. Since he accepted the invitation several weeks ago, however, the Canadian tariff situation has become acute.

It was learned last night that Earl Grey accepted the request for the Albany University Club, to attend it dinner here to-night only after he was informed that the President desired to meet him here.

An announcement from Rochester that President Taft has invited Hon. W. S. Fielding, the Canadian Minister of Finance, to discuss the tariff dispute with him during his stay indicates the chief reason for the Governor-General's wish to be present at the same time.

President Taft first invited Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Canadian Premier, to a conference, but the latter was unable to come. Henry M. Hoyt, counsellor of the State Department, and Charles M. Pepper, tariff expert of the Department of Commerce and Labor, will come on from Washington, to be present at the conference.

Thus far, Canada has shown a disposition to stand pat that has all but put an end to any further negotiations. The President is making a last effort, however, to reach an agreement before allowing the maximum duties of the Payne-Aldrich law to go into effect against imports from Canada.

If the maximum rates are invoked, it will mean that imports from Canada will have to pay 25 per cent. more than imports from other countries, that have not been "unduly discriminatory" against the United States.

The dispute with Canada grows out of the fact that Canada negotiated a treaty with France whereby that country was given a reduction of from 2 1-2 to 5 per cent. over other countries. Through Great Britain favored nation treaties, however, this preferential treatment given by Canada to France was automatically extended to thirteen other countries. This, in effect, left the United States as the principal country affected by the higher rates.

President Taft announced last night that a complete agreement had been reached with France on all tariff differences and that at Albany to-night he would sign a proclamation giving to France the 25 per cent. reduction of rates provided for in the Payne-Aldrich tariff law.

The President will be met on his arrival at 2.30 by Governor Hughes and Mayor McEwan and representatives of the University Club, and go with them under escort to the executive mansion. Earl Grey is not due here until two hours later, and, since Governor Hughes will be with the President at that time, the Governor-General will be welcomed on behalf of the state by Adjutant-General Henry, the governor's chief of staff, and a committee from the University Club, which will include Speaker Wadsworth of the Assembly. Local military companies will escort Earl Grey to the Hotel Ten Eyck.

Sunday morning the President will attend church with Governor Hughes, and in the afternoon the governor will give an informal luncheon at the executive mansion. Among the guests will be the President and Earl Grey, Hon. W. S. Fielding, President Nichols of Dartmouth College, Bishop Doane and Bishop Burke, the Episcopal and Catholic prelates, respectively of Albany, and former Governor David R. Francis of Missouri.

Rutherford Has Yielded

Great Waterways Railway Construction Is Held Up Until After the Charges of the Insurgents Have Been Looked Into — Smith of Camrose Makes Charges of Extravagance — High Salaries.

Edmonton, Alta., March 19.—The Government yesterday made a final and complete surrender by granting the insurgents what they were preparing to demand—the adjournment of the House until the royal commission has completed their enquiry into the Great Waterways Railway deal.

When the Legislature adjourned, it stood adjourned until Thursday, May 26, when it will again be called upon to hear the report of the commission.

Premier Rutherford made the statement that no money would be paid to the railway company on their guarantee until the investigation was over. It was also promised by the Premier that no portion of the route, to a further extent than Battenburg, 23 miles from Edmonton, would be approved by the Government until the investigation finished.

Smith of Camrose demanded that something be done in order that the Government might have a check on all expenditures on the road. He made charges that exorbitant salaries were being paid to officials of the company. He understood Consulting Engineer Dr. Waddell was paid $25,000, while the chief engineer of the Grand Trunk Pacific only got $10,000. Also, the general manager was getting $50,000 a year.

Holding in his hand Waddell's estimate of the cost of the road, he quoted estimates of $12 an acre for right-of-way. This was exorbitant, for the country through which the road was passing, as most of the land was, Dominion Government land, and therefore would cost nothing. He quoted $1 a yard for loose rock and $2.40 for solid rock work. He compared this with the G.T.P. figures at Wolf Creek, a much harder country, which were only 65 cents for loose rock and $1.25 for solid rock.

SPRING REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

Changeable spring weather often raw, cold and damp, is pretty sure to bring a time of misery to people who suffer from rheumatism. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism, the trouble is rooted in the blood — the damp, changeable weather merely starts the aches and often almost unbearable pains going. The trouble must be reached through the blood, and the poisonous rheumatic acids driven out. This is a medical truth every rheumatic sufferer should realize. liniments, outward applications, and so-called electric appliances, never did, and never can, cure rheumatism. The sufferer is only wasting valuable time and money with this sort of treatment, and all the time the trouble is becoming more firmly rooted—and harder to cure. There is just one sure way to cure rheumatism—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the impure, weak, acid tainted blood. They purify and strengthen it and so root out the cause of rheumatism. Mr. John Finnamore, Marysville, N.B., says: "I was laid up with rheumatic fever for a year, and for eight months of that time I could not go about. My blood had seemed to turn to water, and the pain I endured was at times almost unendurable. Notwithstanding I was under the doctor's care I was not regaining my strength and I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. I took altogether nine boxes and they simply worked wonders in bringing back my lost strength. I still take the Pills occasionally as I am working in a saw mill where the work is pretty heavy."

Not only rheumatic sufferers, but all who have any trouble due to weak, watery blood, will find a cure through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It is because of their direct action on the blood that these Pills cure such troubles as anaemia, indigestion, general weakness, neuralgia, and the aches, pains and secret troubles women folk alone know. Give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, and they will not disappoint you. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Congress Sat Thirty Hours.

Washington, March 19.—At twelve minutes before five o'clock last night the House of Representatives adjourned until noon to-day after thirty hours spent in one of the greatest Parliamentary struggles in its history. The result is a drawn battle. When the final roll call came, 164 Republicans voted to postpone further action on the Norris amendment, reorganizing the rules committee until to-day, and 150 Democrats and insurgent Republicans voted to continue. With the regular Republicans voted fourteen of the insurgents following of Norris of Nebraska, who left him and sided with the majority for a postponement. The result, they said, conveyed no significance and meant anything else than that they had deserted the insurgent cause.

The particular obstruction in the pathway of agreement between the regulars and the insurgents is the proposed elimination of the speaker. The regulars say the speaker having committed no wrong, should not be discredited. Some friends of the speaker contend that if the House overrules him to-day, he would "welcome" relief from the committee. The speaker himself is silent.

Will Consider Request.

Ottawa, March 19.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier was waited upon yesterday by a deputation named by the recent French-Canadian Congress of Ontario. The deputation, which was introduced by Senator Belcourt, presented the resolution adopted by the congress, which among other things called for representation of the French-Canadians of Ontario in the Senate and on the High Court bench.

Sir Wilfrid was asked to consider that although there are over 300,000 French-Canadians in Ontario there is no French-speaking judge on the High Court bench, and only one French-Canadian Senator. There should be at least one more French Senator and a representative of the race on the bench, it was argued.

The Premier said that there was much force in the arguments advanced, and the figures submitted. The matter would receive the serious consideration of the Government.

Will Consecrate Elevator.

Rome, March 19.—An electric elevator, carrying ten persons, has been installed in the stairway leading to the cupola in St. Peter's. An appropriate Latin inscription, in which the elevator is termed "electricum anabathrum," is placed at the entrance. The lift will be solemnly blessed and inaugurated by Cardinal [illegible] next Saturday.

An Agent In Germany Now

Proposed Canal From Near Montreal to the Richelieu River Is Mentioned in the House of Commons—Easter Vacation Will Last From March 28 to 30—House In Committee of Supply Yesterday.

Ottawa, March 19.—The most important event in a day spent in supply was Hon. Mr. Fisher's announcement that before long the recent trade agreement with Germany will be followed up by the establishment of a trade agent in Germany, probably in Hamburg.

It was J. E. Armstrong, who elicited this statement, when the Minister of Agriculture was putting through supplementary estimates, pertaining to the Trade and Commerce Department.

The Easter recess was fixed. The House adjourns on the 23rd and reassembles on the 30th. The motion put forward by the Government was that the House meet again on Easter Tuesday, but Sir Wilfrid Laurier acceded to the request for one extra day. Mr. Warburton of Prince Edward Island, and some western Conservative whose mouthpiece was Geo. Taylor, protested that it meant so much longer time spent by western members, who remained in Ottawa, in absolute idleness.

W. F. Maclean asked if the Government would make any pronouncement before Easter on the tariff war.

Mr. Fielding replied that it would depend on the state of business at that particular time. At present, it would not be in the public interest to make any statements.

A project for a new cut-off canal to connect the St. Lawrence River with New York waters was alluded to by Mr. Pugsley. There is a vote for a survey of the deepening of the Richelieu canals, and the Minister of Public Works stated that it has been proposed to dig a canal from a point on the St. Lawrence opposite Montreal to the Richelieu River. This would save 100 miles and give a waterway from Montreal to New York rather shorter than the present rail routes.

"That would be a diversion of trade from other Canadian ports," opined E. A. Lancaster of Lincoln.

It appears that Mexico has dropped her subsidy of $25,000 to the Pacific steamship service between her ports and the British Columbia seaboard, and Canada has accordingly assumed and that amount extra. The Atlantic and Pacific Mexican subsidies are now costing Canada $125,000 a year. Report was made of a $25,000 subsidy for a St. John to Cuba line, given last November to the Wm. Thompson Co. of St. John.

It was a case of urgency, said the Government, when Hon. John Haggart complained that Parliament should have been consulted before entering upon the contract.

Major J. A. Currie asked if the West Indies would not help with some of the subsidies, and Mr. Fielding, in reply, talked hopefully of the work of the recent royal commission on trade between the West Indies and Canada.

While he was defending a vote of $425,000 for dredging in the current year in Thunder Bay, Hon. Mr. Pugsley made the statement that the G.T.P. has decided to erect at Port Arthur elevators to contain ten million bushels of grain. Ultimately these elevators will have a capacity of thirty million bushels.

At the Lumsden committee yesterday Mr. Lumsden, still under examination by R. C. Smith, K.C., pressed as to why he had not dismissed the engineers, Mr. Lumsden said the commission sided with them.

"And the Department of Justice and the lawyers agreed with the commission?" suggested Mr. Smith.

"I do not think the Department of Justice did.

"To make a long story short, I have always regretted I did not resign in January, 1908, when the commission sided with the engineers, and before I made an amendment on the interpretation of classification."

Winter Wheat Excellent.

Calgary, Alta., March 18.—Winter wheat is looking excellent and all are looking forward to a bumper crop. Spring wheat prospects could not be better, as there is already so much land sown or ready for sowing.

Such seems to express the opinion of farmers in this district. From all points come reports that preparations for seeding are being rushed. Incoming Americans are enthusiastic regarding the outlook for next crop.

Owing to building operations being carried on throughout the entire winter in Calgary, a brick famine is predicted for this summer.

New C.P.R. Line.

Calgary, March 18.—It is reported that the C.P.R. has acquired the interests of the Alberta Central Railway, with the idea of getting an easier grade across the Rockies than the Kicking Horse Pass affords. It is said work on this new line will be commenced this spring. It will run eastward from the coast to Red Deer, and thence to Saskatoon.

Will Not Fight.

Hamilton, March 19.—The controllers yesterday refused to join with Toronto and the Canadian Union of Municipalities in fighting the Hamilton, Waterloo, and Guelph bill at Ottawa. They decided they would be opposing their own interests by placing any obstacles in the way of the building of this road.

Special Notice.

BETTER THAN SPANKING.

Spanking does not cure children of bedwetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 231 Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions. Send no money, but write her to-day if your children trouble you in this way. Don't blame the child, the chances are it can't help it. This treatment also cures adults and aged people troubled with urine difficulties by day or night.

WOMEN CURED AT HOME

Women's disorders always yield from the very beginning of the treatment to the mild, but effective, action of Orange Lily. Within two or three days after commencing its use the improvement becomes noticeable, and this improvement continues until the patient is completely cured. Orange Lily is an applied or local treatment, and acts directly on the womanly organs, removing the congestion, toning and strengthening the nerves, and restoring perfect circulation in the diseased parts. In order to convince all suffering women of the value of this remedy, I will send a 35-cent box, enough for ten days' treatment, absolutely FREE to each lady sending me her address. MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont. 6

Russian Girls Kill Themselves.

New York, March 19.—A St. Petersburg cable says:

Something like an epidemic of suicide due to melancholia is accentuated here by the suicides of three girls of social status, one of them an heiress to $10,000,000.

The three met, and after one of them had played Chopin's funeral march, all drank poison and died. They left letters saying they were tired of life.

Fifteen other suicides, mostly girls, were reported during the day. The Russian law severely punishes attempted suicide, but a bill has been proposed by some members of the council of the empire, abolishing the penalties, on the ground that life is an individual's private property, and he should be allowed to dispose of it accordingly.

Firebugs Threaten Town.

Huntingdon, Pa., March 19.—Incendiarism ran wild in this city early yesterday. At 1.30 o'clock fires were started almost simultaneously in every section of the town. The local fire department got help from Lewiston and Tyrone. Losses are estimated at $200,000.

Mrs. James Miller, a widow, whose residence was destroyed, died as she was being removed from her invalid bed.

Abe Reed and John Earl are being held on suspicion.

A WORD TO MOTHERS

No matter whether baby is sick or well, Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the home always. They not only cure the minor troubles to which babyhood and childhood is subject, but will prevent them coming on if the child is given an occasional dose of the medicine. Mrs. George T. Walker, Mascouche Rapids, Que., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for constipation and other disorders of childhood and am so pleased with them that I always keep the Tablets in the house." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mr. Borden on Trip.

Ottawa, March 19.—R. L. Borden and Mrs. Borden left yesterday for New York, where they will spend a few days before going to Boston, where he will speak on March 23. On March 28 Mr. Borden will be the guest of honor at a Conservative banquet in Halifax. He will return to Ottawa on April 1.

British Government Not Informed.

London, March 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the House of Commons Col. Seely stated that the Government had no information on the tariff discussion at Ottawa. When it was received the Government would be in a position to consider whether any representations should be made in the interests of British trade.

Lloyd-George Needs a Rest.

THE PIANO FOR THE HOME.

New Scale Williams Piano is especially suited to the home.

How long a piano will last, should not be the only question to be decided, but it should be carefully considered.

As a rule, only one piano is bought in a lifetime, so that durability and permanency of tone and action, are even more important than design and finish.

If you are going to buy a Piano, at least see the new designs of New Scale Williams at the warerooms of the J. M. Greene Music Co., L't'd., Opera House Block

A REAIEW OF THE HOCKEY SEASON JUST COMPLETED

Study of the Situation Shows That Peterborough Had a Royal Chance of Capturing the O. H. A. Junior Championship---Mistaken Policy in Entering Two Teams in the Race.

The hockey season of 1910 is at an end. It has not been a brilliant success as far as a showing outside of the city is concerned, and yet it has not been such a bad season after all. In fact a close examination leads one to the conclusion that the local fans have a good deal to be thankful for in the number of promising players that came to light during the campaign and in the outlook for the future. Championship teams such as represented Peterborough in 1906 do not come along every year; they must be built up and it is not reasonable that you can produce a seven of such a calibre in a short time when you have to start all over again from the beginning.

One bad mistake in policy was made this season and that was in entering two junior O.H.A. teams from this city, thus killing what subsequently looked like a golden opportunity to win the junior championship. The material was herein the city for a Colts team that would have taken a terrific lot of beating, but with two teams in the field the opportunity was thrown away. Markham's showing against the Kingston champions goes a long way towards proving the truth of the statement that Peterborough had a royal chance to annex the honours. The Collegiate team should have beaten Markham; the writer saw both games that were played against the Tournament town and has no hesitation in saying that the students were the better team handicapped by a strange rink and away from home they held Markham to a six to four score and had no doubt of their ability to overcome that lead. In the return game, however, partially though a decided slump on the part of the majority of the players and more on account of a weird decision on the part of the goal umpire they could do no better than tie the Markham seven, whereas had they played to form they should have roundly trimmed the visitors. Markham followed up their success in the round by a splendid showing against the ultimate champions. When it is said that a considerably stronger aggregation could have been chosen here, no attempt is being made to criticize the students or their style of play as it must be and is conceded that they had a fine, hard working team. However, when one figures out the line-up that might have been selected to represent this city, one is inclined to say, "We should have had that junior championship.

That septette would certainly have had the class and every man on the team has shown in games where they were called upon to go up against heavier, older, and more experienced players in the City League campaign. Everyone of the seven named made good in the City League, and together on one team would have taken a lot of beating. Every element that goes to make up an effective hockey machine is represepted. Halpin has proved himself a reliable, effective goal guardian, his stopping and clearing all through the season having been giltedged. Heffernan and Denison have developed this season into the most promising pair of defence players this city has seen in many moons. They have the weight, the speed, and the gameness that are necessary to make an effective rear guard. Both are hard but clean checkers. They get the man or the puck, but they stay on the ice and are of invaluable assistance to their forwards by their grand rushing. The forwards have shown their mettle in many hard-fought games this season. The centre-ice pair, Crane and Burritt, led the City League in scoring, the latter with 28 and the former with 25 to his credit. Fifty-three goals between two "kids" in their first year in City League company shows just what kind of scoring machines they are when supported by a team that plays combination. Short and Giroux on the wings would round out the team to perfection, and on their showing in the last two games against the Strathconas would give any pair of junior wings in the country an awful argument for their money. As far as scoring ability goes perhaps they would not have been as strong as the pair in centre, but they would have played combination all the way, and their checking back and all-round good work would have helped greatly.

There is no use howling about it now, but the more one looks over that line-up the more he regrets that it could not have represented Peterborough in the Junior O. H. A. The team outlined here would have speed, stick handling and shooting ability, the knowledge of how to work in on the enemy's nets and the grit to take them regardless of the bumps they might be handed. Such a chance may not come again in years.

The Intermediate Team.

Peterborough's Intermediate O. H. A. team, after a grand start, ran aground on a shoal marked Lindsay, before the district harbour had been left. The O. H. A. ruling that goals should count on the four games between Lindsay and Peterborough threw a crimp in the championship aspirations of the Petes before they were into their stride. They stole a march on Lindsay by beating them in Scugogville in the first game by 3 goals to 2. Lindsay came back with a well-earned victory here, although at that the Petes were a little off colour. Then came the downfall of the locals for in the return game at Lindsay they took an awful slump in the second half, and were beaten 13 to 3. In the last games the Petes came back to form and roundly walloped the Scugogites in one of the best games seen here in years by 8 goals to 3. The attendance at the games was encouraging; the team was well supported by the public, and on the whole, the season may be marked down on the books as not entirely devoid of encouraging signs.

The City League.

The City League had the best year in its history. With four strong teams the interest was kept up throughout: the attendance was the biggest on record, and the quality of hockey better than at any other period in the career of the local body. The season went through without the slightest unpleasantness; there were no protests, and everything ran smoothly and well. The twice before winners, the Strathconas, came back after having been beaten in the finals last year by Lakefield, and added another Strathcona shield to the base of the Stratton trophy, but it was only accomplished after one of the hardest fought fights in the history of the League. The West Ends and Straths tied up on the regular schedule, with five wins and one loss each, and the Commissioners won the play-off before a grand crowd. The Keene team was a newcomer in the League ranks, but in spite of that fact they made a good showing, proved themselves fine sports and a good bunch of fellows, and won for themselves the respect of the crowd and the liking of the players they went up against.

The Church League.

St. Andrew's, champions last season of the Church League, repeated the feat this winter, but they had a hard run for their money, the opposition coming from the George Street team. The first time the two clashed the score was a tie, and the second time out George Street won by 6 to 5. The tie game was ordered to be replayed and the Presbyterians won—4 to 2. The other two teams in the league were the Knox and All Saints Church sevens. The games were well fought and always interesting.

The Mercantile League.

The Mercantile League had a good season, noticeable for the number of close games played and for the defeat of last year's champions—the Quaker Oats team. The Canadian General Electric team won the championship by defeating the Auburns, in the final. The Canoe Builders were the fourth team in the League.

Kippen Gets Medal.

Cornwall, Ont., March 19.—At the production of the drama, "Ireland As It Is," by local amateurs, under the auspices of the St. Patrick's Society of Cornwall, Thursday night, the Royal Humane Society's medal, awarded to Hugh Kippen, lacrosse player and pianist, Cornwall, was presented by Dr. Maloney, mayor, and Dr. Munroe, ex-mayor.

Couple Perish In Fire.

Cobalt, March 19.—Wm. Cope, aged 35, and his wife Edith, aged 28, were burned to death in their three-roomed shack about 11.30 o'clock Thursday night. It is surmised that Cope, who had been drinking, upset a lamp in the front room, and that, finding their exit cut off in that direction, Mrs. Cope attempted to drag her husband, who was in a drunken stupor, out by the kitchen door, only to be overcome by the flames.

Mrs. Cope came from Toronto, where her relatives still reside, while Cope hailed from Clarendon, Ont. He was a prospector. They were married about two years ago.

Magistrate as Precedent.

Ottawa, March 18.—An interesting case in the local Polish colony was decided in the Police Court Thursday, when a charge of opening a postal letter addressed to one of the Poles, against a woman of the same nationality was dismissed.

The defence made out that a letter, once it had been delivered by the postman, ceased to be a postal letter. In this opinion they quoted Magistrate Denison of Toronto. The Toronto magistrate wrote his opinion of the point and it was upheld by Mr. Askwith.

Favor Public Abbatoir.

Winnipeg, March 19.—A meeting of stock breeders and live stock shippers was held Thursday to discuss the meat trust in western Canada.

They will urge that a public abbatoir be inaugurated at once either in Winnipeg or St. Boniface, the Provincial Government having voted $180,000 towards the scheme.

Southern Frost Too Severe for Peary.

New York, March 19.—Commander Robert E. Peary has cut short his lecture tour in the south, due to the refusal of Governor Brown of Georgia to introduce him to an Atlanta audience, his reference to the commander in an interview as a "fakir," and the small crowd that attended the lecture.

More Railways For India.

London, March 19.—The House of Commons passed the second reading of the bill under which the Indian Government seeks power to raise $125,000,000 for railway and irrigation development for commercial, not strategical purposes.

Fifty Fishermen Lost.

St. Petersburg, March 19.—Fifty fishermen who went adrift upon an ice floe which broke away from the shore near Peterhof on the south shore of the Gulf of Finland, are believed to have perished, as search for them has been futile.

To Follow West Point.

Kingston, March 18.—Col. Bridges, chief of the General Staff of Military of Australia, and a graduate of the R.M.C. here 30 years ago, has been in the city securing information regarding equipment and curriculum of the Canadian military school. The colonel left yesterday for Halifax. He was Australia's military representative at the Imperial Conference last summer, when it was decided to organize a royal military college in the Commonwealth. Lord Kitchener and the War Office selected Col. Bridges to visit West Point, N.Y., and Kingston for information.

The three-year term of the American college and the restriction of the school to the preparation of army officers will be followed, allowing no students for civil pursuits whatever.

Lord Kitchener, now in Australia and New Zealand, has on his personal staff, Capt. Kirkpatrick, graduate of the R.M.C., son of the late Sir George Kirkpatrick, who won his commission in the Royal Engineers.

Celebration for Hundredth Birthday.

Dunnville, March 18.—Mrs. Margaret Kenney celebrated her 100th birthday yesterday. She was born in Ireland, but has lived in Dunnville for 67 years.

In honor of the occasion, high mass of thanksgiving was sung at St. Michael's Church by Rev. Father Donovan, at which representatives from all classes in the community were present.

In the afternoon the business men of the town, headed by the silver cornet band, marched to the old lady's home, where an address was read to her, and a purse of gold presented.

Among telegrams received was one from Hon. Charles Murphy, Secretary of State, and one from F. R. Lalor, M.P. for Haldimand.

Mrs. Kenney is a remarkable old lady. She threads a needle without glasses, dresses without help, is active and is in excellent health.

To Wed Mohammedan.

Vienna, March 18.—It is reported that the coming visit of King Peter of Servia to Constantinople is for the purpose of arranging a marriage between his younger son, the Crown Prince, and Princess Chadie, fourth daughter of the deposed Sultan Abdul Hamid. If such a marriage should be arranged it would be the first occasion in centuries of a Mohammedan princess marrying a non-Mohammedan.

Cobalt Lake Wins Out.

London, March 19.—The Privy Council has dismissed the appeal of the Florence Mining Co. against the Court of Appeal decision in the famous case of the Florence Mining Co. against the Cobalt Lake Mining Co. The latter, therefore, wins, and the jurisdiction of the Legislature in conferring a clear title to Cobalt Lake is upheld.

Seeding In Saskatchewan.

Regina, Sask., March 19.—The Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Motherwell, stated yesterday that his department had received reports of seeding from such widely separated points as Swift Current, Battleford, Humboldt and Indian Head. The weather is beating all records for mildness.

After Old Masters.

Young Wife—This dish, dearest, is an originl composition of my own. Husband—Well, I should rather, my pet, that you could cook after the old masters.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Will Draw Lots to Fight Duel.

St. Petersburg, March 19.—As an outcome of a scene in the Duma, when Vladimir Purishkovich, vice-president of the Union of True Russians, made coarse accusations against one of the girl members of the student's council of St. Petersburg University, the students' council has decided to challenge Purishovich to a duel and draw lots who shall fight him.

On account of the criticism of his failure to quiet the disorder in the Duma, M. Khomyakoff has resigned the presidency of the Duma.

Matrimony Made Easy.

"Can a fellow marry comfortably on a salary of $500 a year?" asked the young man.

"Sure, he can," replied the sage of Sageville—"that is, provided he has saved his last year's salary and can get his employer to pay the next year's in advance."—Chicago News.

Not Games of Chance.

The Vicar—Is it true, Samuel, that your father allows games of chance to be played at your house? The Boy—There ain't no chance about it, zur—they all cheats!—London Opinion.

Circumstantial Evidence.

Use For Hubby's Old Beaver.

are in reality composed of the innermost shellac bases of old or disused hats. The material after having been cut into strips was worked into shape by means of a hot iron, the ornamentation being arrived at in a similar way. The finished effect is quite stunning.

SONGS

"BE JOLLY MOLLY" A catchy-fascinating March Song. One of the big hits of the year.

"That Italian Rag" A hit over night. The funniest words and most fascinating melody of any "Rag" song on the market.

"Way Down In Cotton Town" A croony moony negro "Love Song." Introduced by Empire City Quartette and other Headline vaudeville acts.

"I Didn't Mean To Make You Cry" Sometimes asked for by the title of "I didn't Mean To Hurt Your Feeling." Just the kind of a Ballad that you'd want to buy when you hear it.

"Peek-A-Boo" One of the cleverest child songs ever published. Introduced and featured by "Those Kids," Felix & Care.

"It's A Lonely World Without You" A most beautiful Ballad, rather different from the usual songs of this character, yet not too high-class.

"Hey There, Sis"! A new "Rube" Song just out. It's by the writers of "Morning Cy" so you may be sure it's good.

"MY CAVALIER" The Latest Spanish Waltz Song success by the writers of the wor d famous "Semore." Published in 3 keys—to suit all voices, also published for Band and Orchestra.

INSTRUMENTAL

"BLAZE OF GLORY" The very latest March and Two-Step by Abe Holzmann, the most popular writer of instrumental music in America to-day. His "Blaze Away," "Uncle Sammy" and "Old Faithful" Marches and "Loveland," and "Love Sparks" Waltzes are famous throughout the entire world. Also published as a Patriotic Song, and for Band and Orchestra.

"Curly" A dainty Intermezzo-Two Step by the writer of "The Gondolier." Also published as a song, and for Band and Orchestra.

"Dreaming" A delightful—soulful—Reverie by J. A. Wallace, composer of the famous "Rose Song" Reverie.

"Rag-A-Tag" Rag A real wiggy-waggy Ragtime, March and Two-Step with a captivating melody.

"Love Sparks" Waltzes By the writer of "Love Land" Waltzes and equally as entrancing.

"The Fighting Hope" March and Two-Step by the composer of "The Great Divide." A splendid march, yet easy to play

"Star of Faith" Reverie One of the most recent compositions of Amanda Kennedy, whose fame as the writer of "Star of the Sea" and "Star of the East," will never die.

"RED HEAD" Rag If you like "Rags" you'll like this one. Founded on themes of Irene Franklin and Burt Green's famous "Red Head Song. Easy to play, yet very effective."

A Real Suffragette Interrupts Legislature

At Close of Ceremony on Saturday a Woman's Voice Was Heard From the Speaker's Gallery Reminding the Government That Votes for Women Were Overlooked.

Toronto, March 21.—"There is one thing you have forgotten. I protest against this Parliament closing without doing justice to women. Women are as much entitled to votes as men. I hope that in your future deliberations you will do justice to the cause of women. This is all I have to say at present. Thank you."

These words, spoken in a low, musical voice from the centre of the Speaker's gallery Saturday afternoon, startled the usual Sabbath day somnolence which distinguishes the ceremony of prorogation of the Legislature from the blaze of brilliance in which it opens.

She proved to be Miss Olivia Smith of London, Eng., a prominent suffrage worker and the heroine of several jail terms.

It came as a bolt from the blue.

The formality of assenting to the bills passed during the session had been gone through with; the Lieutenant-Governor had read his speech, while the clerk of the House stood with folded hands and reverent mein, as if he had been assisting in an ordination of elders; the aide-de-camp had bowed himself backward down the steps of the throne; Hon. I. B. Lucas had declared the Legislature prorogued; the representative of the crown was already half way out of the chamber.

MISS OLIVIA SMITH.

Then the lady arose and launched her protest.

One of the attendants motioned her out, and she left immediately, with two others who were evidently there as her bodyguard, before anyone had a chance to learn her name. She was dressed in a brown suit and wore a fur toque and fur ruff.

Sir James Whitney is alleged to have said, shortly after the occurrence, "The fool, I wish somebody had been there to throw a bucket of water on her."

Allan Studholme, the Labor leader from Hamilton, who has been vainly trying to introduce a women's suffrage bill into the House, stated that he had no notion that it was going to happen. He did not know the lady.

"I have been so accustomed to public speaking of the kind over in England that I acted as I did on impulse, and in the belief that such a course might be more effective than are the present methods here. I wondered afterwards if people here might think what I did was vulgar. I do not wish further publicity."

This was the statement made by Miss Smith, in explanation of her interruption of the ceremonies.

Miss Smith, who is about 30 years of age, has dark brown hair; slightly tinged with grey, and an intelligent and pleasant face. On her breast she wears the suffragette badge, which is of silver and formed to represent prison bars, signifying that she has suffered imprisonment for the cause. Miss Smith is staying with friends at 26 Alice street.

Very few of the members of the House were in their places. The Cabinet was represented by the Premier and Hon. I. B. Lucas. The leader of the Opposition was absent. The Labor party, which numbers one, was there in full force. Mrs. Gibson and the Misses Gibson occupied seats on the floor of the House.

The Lieutenant-Governor, who wore his military uniform, was attended by a staff of officers from the Toronto garrison, Lieut. Young being aide-de-camp. The traveling escort was furnished by the Royal Canadian Dragoons, while the 48th Highlanders, with brass and pipe bands, supplied the guard of honor. The 9th Field Battery fired the accustomed salute of 13 guns.

The speech of the Lieutenant-Governor dismissing the House from its labors called attention to the business-like methods pursued, resulting in an avoidance of unnecessary delays, and epitomized the work of the session. Some of its clauses read:

An evidence of the increased usefulness of the Railway and Municipal Board is found in the enlarged powers that have been confered upon it with reference to the operation of street railways and the supervision of the conditions under which telephone companies created by the provincial authority may carry on their business.

Further legislation to facilitate the work of the Hydro-Electric Commission has been enacted in order to give reasonable protection to life and property.

In view of rapid development in Northern Ontario power has been given to the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Commission providing for the construction of a branch extension of that railway should the same on further experience and investigation be considered necessary in the public interest.

NOT A CASE OF HYDROPHOBIA

Little Boy on Waterford Street Acted Strangely and Parents Thought it Was the Result of a Dog Bite He Had Received.

WAS DELIRIOUS

What was thought at first to have been a case of hydrophobia in this city turned out to be one of pneumonia. Little Vincent Hodge, the five year old son of Mr. Thomas Hodge, 551 Waterford St., was bitten by a dog about a month ago. The boy was sleighriding when a collie dog ran out at him and bit him on the right leg. A nasty wound was made, necessitating the treatment of a doctor. On Thursday last the boy became very ill and in the opinion of the boy's father and mother acted rather strangely and once or twice when his mother gave him a drink he would bite violently at the cup. He also bit at her hand. In view of the recent dog scare all over the Province and the fact that the child had been bitten, the parents were naturally alarmed. They feared hydrophobia and medical assistance was at once called. Three doctors were consulted and the case was diagnosed as pneumonia. The boy was delirious, being in a very high fever, and this accounted for his rather unusual actions.

NO SETTLEMENT

Executive Committee of Carmen's Union Rejects Offer of Transit Company.

Special to The Examiner.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 21.—The Executive committee of the Carmens' Union, after an all night meeting today by a vote of 7 to 12, rejected the proposition of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, looking to a settlement of the trolley strike. The rock on which the Company and the executive committee of the carmen have split is the refusal of the Company hereafter to recognize the men's grievance committee exclusively.

COULD NOT KEEP THIS SECRET

"Six months ago I was cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment," writes Mrs. G. A. Swayze, Copenhagen, Elgin Co., Ont. "I had been afflicted for over thirty years and tried all sorts of treatments in vain, so I was surprised and delighted to be cured. I don't care for publicity but would like to tell every one suffering from piles about Dr. Chase's Ointment."

CANAL TRAFFIC.

Verily the days of canals are not over. It is learned from a statement made by the Minister of Railways and Canals, that the canals of Canada in 1909, carried perhaps the largest volume of traffic in their history. The freight which passed through amounted to 33,720,748 tons, as compared with 17,502,820 in 1908. This was an increase of 16,217,928 tons, or 93 per cent. in one year. To give an idea of the measure of increase in the freight traffic through our canals, it is to be stated that three years ago the total traffic was only 10,523,185 tons, and ten years ago it was only 5,013,693 tons, so that last year it was nearly seven times as much as it was ten years ago. Of the traffic of 1909, 27,976,399 tons was eastbound and 5,744,349 westbound.

GREAT TERMINALS.

Including the appropriation of $600,000 last year and the appropriation of $450,000 this year for the improvement of the harbour of Port Arthur, a million dollars will have been expended in one fiscal year. This shows what important position this port has gained. The object of the large immediate expenditure is to have the harbour ready for the grain trade of the west against the time the Grand Trunk Pacific is ready to handle it. The Grand Trunk Pacific is building elevators at Port Arthur, with a capacity of ten million bushels, which will make the total elevator capacity 30 million bushels. Thus, the terminals at Port Arthur will be without an equal in the world, unless in the case of the Canadian Pacific terminals at Fort William. Certainly with the two combined the head of navigation in Lake Superior has terminals which surpass anything of the kind on the face of the globe.

CONSCIENCE MONEY.

Conscience money is a rare enough coin to be considered a numismatic curiosity. On Friday last the Finance Department, Ottawa, had three additions to its collection. The first came from Windsor, Ontario, in the shape of five dollars, to be placed to the credit of the Receiver-general; and from Montreal, the same day, came two postal notes for five and ten dollars respectively. These several amounts are presumably conscience money. It is interesting to speculate as to the manner in which some persons have got ahead of the government, and what have been the moral influences that have prompted them to disgorge. They may have cheated the customs collector of his dues. In that event conscience must have had a revival to the extent of moral hyperaesthesia, for cheating his Majesty's customs is regarded, even by the most rigid moralists, as a venial offence. If all who have thus deprived his Majesty of his great dues were to make restitution the total would constitute a supplementary revenue sufficient to meet the demands of the supplementary estimates.

PEACE OVERTURES.

One is impelled to credit President Taft of the United States with a desire to avoid the tariff war which has for some time past been impending. He is, in a way, bound to apply the letter of the grossly unfair Payne-Aldrich tariff. This compels him to impose the maximum tariff on Canadian imports under the plea, which is a false plea, that Canada in her French treaty discriminates against the United States. President Taft who is said to be friendly to Canada, no doubt sees the folly and injury to United States trade intervals from the application of the penalizing tariff rate. Some time ago he sent two emissaries to Ottawa, whose mission served to show that Canada stood firmly by her rights and refuses to make concessions without any return. Who knows that President Taft might not have come to Ottawa himself, if he had not been restrained by the absurd law that the president is not permitted to leave his country during his term of office. He has done the next best thing. He has invited Hon. Mr. Fielding, Canada's Finance Minister to meet him in Albany to talk over the situation. What will be the outcome, is only a matter of speculation. Anyway the circumstance shows that the United States is thinking twice before it applies the tariff club to Canada. That country begins to recognize that in the event of a tariff war Canada holds the whip hand. We have not only the 33 1-3 per cent. surtax antidote as against the 25 per cent. maximum of the United States, but we can, if we choose to do so, "rub it in" with a substantial increase of the British preference. But it is to be hoped that there will be no necessity of employing either the surtax or the increased preference. It is to the interest of both countries to sustain towards each other fair and amicable trade relations. The United States are our neighbours and good neighbours, too, except in the matter of tariffs, in which they have persistently shown the seamy side.

OUR CHIEF NEEDS.

Canada's two chief needs are capital and population; these given, our great natural resources will do the rest. We need population to develop our agricultural areas. To this purpose capital cannot be applied. We need capital to develop our mineral and other resources which naturally lend themselves to manufacturing exploitation. And capital is coming in in a very satisfactory and encouraging manner. Last year British capital to the extent of about 150 millions of dollars came into Canada and a statistician has estimated that in the past ten years some 200 millions of United States capital has been invested in Canada in the form of manufacturing industries of varius kinds. This has been attributed to the vagaries of United States tariff manipulation, and these investments stand to be largely increased. If the United States penalizes Canada with the imposition of their maximum tariff on April 1st. Not only will Canada's reply, in the form of a surtax, close our markets to many United States manufactures, and compel the establishment of branches in Canada to get the advantage of the Canadian market, but the extremely, probable prohibition of pulp wood export will lead to the establishment of paper manufactories in this country by United States interests. It is also said to be probable that British capital will, on account of political conditions, seek employment in Canada in still larger volume. It is, therefore, to be seen that as to one of the conditions of Canadian growth—capital—the prospects are not bad. And it is also pretty certain that the other need—population—will continue to come, in increasing volume. The Government has conducted, and is continuing, the enterprise of advertising Canada. This advertising is just beginning to produce results, and the immigration to Canada is likely to be larger in volume than in the past. It is encouraging to note that immigration for the month of February was 10,162, as compared with 4,791 for February of last year, an increase of 112 per cent. The total immigration for the eleven months of this fiscal year was 175,789, as compared with 130,444 for the eleven months of last fiscal year, an increase of 25 per cent. The total immigration from the United States for the eleven months was 86,486, as compared with 50,650, an increase of 71 per cent.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Department of Finance, Ottawa, acknowledges receipt of a postal note for the sum of five dollars in favour of the Receiver General, enclosed with a blank sheet of paper. The amount is probably conscience money. The envelope containing the remittance is postmarked Windsor, Ontario.

Great Britain's Mercantile tonnage, 10,183,000 tons, is nearly five times greater than the combined tonnage of five of the largest maritime powers in the world, and twice as large as that of Germany. Her advantage in fighting naval strength is not quite so great, but there is absolute certainty of proof that in either sense, Britannia rules the waves.

The Montreal Gazette, Conservative, has the following to say in condemnation of Sir James Whitney's looking to Ottawa in the matter of technical education: "In the Ontario Legislature the Dominion Government has been censured because it is taking no steps for the creation of a system of technical education. Perhaps the federal ministers are afraid to move because education is a matter put by the constitution under the control of the provinces. Considering the way in which some advocates of provincial rights explode when it is proposed to give a federal charter to an electric company, there might be worse than fatalities if Parliament should undertake to build and direct a lot of school houses, appoint teachers and give diplomas."

NATURE TELLS YOU

As Many a Peterborough Reader Knows Too Well.

When the kidneys are sick,
Nature tells you all about it.
The urine is nature's calendar.
Infrequent or too frequent action;
Any urinary trouble tells of kidney ills.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure all kidney ills.

Peterborough people testify to this.

Mrs. T. DeRusia, of Mary and Bethune street, Peterborough, Ont., says, "I believe Booth's Kidney Pills a remedy of exceptional merit in quickly relieving backache caused from disordered kidneys. I frequently suffered with a dull, heavy pain in the small of my back. It would extend around my sides and into my shoulders. Headaches were frequent and often accompanied by spells of dizziness. Booth's Kidney Pills were recommended by a friend and I procured a box at Wm. Madill's Pharmacy. I soon found them to relieve me, I have had no trouble since and can credit this only to Booth's Kidney Pills."

Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. The R. T. Booth Co., L'td., Fort Erie Ont., Sole Canadian Agents.

POST CARD COLUMN.

Peterborough, March, 1910.

Dear Sir,—I wish to make a suggestion to the City Council re dog taxes. They fix the license for bitches at five dollars, irrespective of breed. Would it not lessen the number of mongrels if when a dog owner can produce a pedigree showing his dog to be of some value, the license to remain the same as at present, two dollars, and in that way get after the useless curs which abound in the city and which are the most to be feared.

I am, yours, etc.,

DOG LOVER.

Easily Tired Exhausted

DOES THIS DESCRIBE YOUR CASE? — THEN READ THIS LETTER ABOUT

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

The accompanying letter describes so well the condition of a person whose nerves are weak and exhausted that little need be added.

The danger of such a state of health is sometimes overlooked by persons who do not realize that the next step is some form of paralysis which leaves one helpless in mind and body.

Mrs. Edward Schwartz, Ladysmith, Que., writes: "It is a pleasure to let you know how I was benefitted by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was run down and weak, unable to do any housework, was easily tired and exhausted, lacked energy and ambition, was very nervous, easily irritated, could not concentrate the thoughts, hands and feet were cold, I could not sleep, had frequent headaches and dizzy spells and palpitation of the heart.

"Nervous prostration was my trouble, but Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured it all and I cannot find words to express my thankfulness for this wonderful medicine."

The results achieved by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food are often more wonderful than words can tell. In cases such as this patient persistent treatment is necessary, but you are encouraged by steady and natural improvement until the cure is thorough and complete.

There is a satisfaction in knowing that each and every dose is bound to be of at least some benefit in rebuilding the wasted nervous system.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for a free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

WARNING

Since its introduction into Canada the sales of Parisian Sage have been phenomenal. This success has led to many imitations similar in name. Look out for them; they are not the genuine. See that the girl with the Auburn hair is on every package. You can always get the genuine at Wm. Madill's.

Parisian Sage is the quickest acting and most efficient hair tonic in the world.

It is made to conform to Dr. Sangerbond's (of Paris) proven theory that dandruff, falling hair, baldness, and scalp itch are caused by germs.

Parisian Sage kills these dandruff germs and removes all trace of dandruff in two weeks, or money back; it stops falling hair and itching scalp and prevents baldness.

And remember that baldness is caused by dandruff germs, those little hard working, persistent devils that day and night do nothing but dig into the roots of the hair and destroy its vitality.

Parisian Sage is a daintily perfumed hair dressing, not stick or greasy, and any woman who desires luxuriant and bewitching hair can get it in two weeks by using it. 50 cents a large bottle.

NO CHANCE HERE

C. L. S. Team of Lindsay Want Home-and-Home Games With Strathconas,

Secretary Craig of the Stratheonas has received a letter from Mr. Parkins, asking him to arrange home and home games between the Strathconas and Lindsay's C. L. S. team. Mr. Parkins remarks in his letter, "I know it is pretty late, but you no doubt have good ice there yet." The Lindsay magnate is evidently not aware of the fact that there has been no ice skating here for over three weeks.

ANNUAL MEETING

Peterborough Golf and Country Club Elected Officers Saturday.

There was an excellent attendance at the annual meeting of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club in the Bank of Montreal chambers Saturday night.

Mr. H. C. Hill was appointed captain of the gentlemen's club and Mr. Gardiner of the ladies. Mr. Howard Hopwood was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Last year's committees and directors were re-elected.

The club looks forward to a good year as the club is in good standing last year being a most successful one.

W. E. LECH INSTALS THE NEW HAT CONFORMATEUR

By far the best and most practical article invented for the up-to-date hat store, is the new French Conformateur which has just been added to the modern equipments of Mr. W. E. Lech's hat store, 366 George street.

By this ingenious contrivance results are obtained which are quite impossible to the fastidious dresser by any other method. The conformateur is an adjustable instrument by means of which the correct shape of the head is recorded in an instant. The result which is obtained by this invention is that individual customers are fitted perfectly, according to the actual conformation of early individual's head. Thus, a long-shaped head gets a long-shaped hat and round-shaped head gets a round-shaped hat. In this way, too, your hatter always retains a correct record of the shape of his customers' heads.

PHANTOM CHIMES

"The Girl Question" Company Introduces Startling Electric Novelty.

A startling electric novelty, which will be seen in the third act of "The Girl Question," which comes to the Grand Opera House on Good Friday, under the management of H. H. Frazee, is the phantom chimes. They are introduced first in the chorus of the song, "I Hate to Work on Monday," sung by twenty-four pretty girls seated at typewriters, and clicking off an accompaniment to the words of the song. The chimes, by means of electrical attachments, are made to ring all over the house, under the seats, up in the gallery, on the walls, etc., making the most novel effect which has ever been presented.

Lecture by Gen. Booth's Son.—Mr. Herbert Booth will deliver his inspiring lecture, entitled: "The Enchanting Story of the Early Christians," illustrated by 200 life models and 1200 feet of animated pictures, in St. Paul's Church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid, on Wednesday evening, March 23rd. Dropsy—

Given up by Doctor

"I had dropsy, and was told by my family physician that there was no chance for me. My family also gave me up. My limbs and body were swollen one-third larger than natural, water collected around my heart and I had to be propped up in bed to keep from smothering. I took Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy until I was entirely cured. This was in 1902, and I am now able to do any kind of work on my farm. My cure was certainly marvelous."

PALM SUNDAY

The Lost Opportunity

Text, "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! But now they are hid from thine eyes" (Luke xix, 42).

Little did the Jews understand the momentous importance to them of the event which Christians commemorate on Palm Sunday. It will be remembered that the incident occurred at the close of our Lord's ministry—three and a half years after his baptism at Jordan and five days before his crucifixion. The Jewish Sabbath had been spent in rest at Bethany. Lazarus, whom Jesus awakened from the sleep of death, with his sisters Mary and Martha, prepared for Jesus a banquet, and when the Sabbath closed the supper was eaten. It was at that time that Mary brought forth the box of perfume, spikenard very valuable, and therewith anointed our Lord's head and feet. It was the same occasion on which Judas, in a wrong spirit, had murmured against this expression of her loving devotion; that it was a waste; that preferably the money should have been given to the poor. It was then that the Master defended Mary and announced that the anointing was for his burial (which occurred later the same week), and suggested to the disciples, "The poor ye have always with you. And whensoever ye will ye do them good; but me ye have not always."

The next morning, the first day of the week, corresponding to our Sunday Jesus made ready for his triumphal entry into the city of Jerusalem as the Jewish King, according to the custom of the Jewish kings riding upon an ass and hailed and acclaimed by the populace. The incident had been foretold by the Prophet Zechariah in great detail, saying, "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold, thy King cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass" (Zechariah ix, 9).

When the apostles had brought the ass and Jesus sat thereon, the large concourse of people (which had come from Jerusalem to see Jesus because of his awakening of Lazarus) shouted aloud. They were filled with enthusiasm and, after the manner of the time, some broke off palm branches for the ass to step upon; others laid their garments in the way and thus formed, as it were, a carpet in the road leading to Jerusalem near by. The shout of the people was just as the prophet had declared. They hailed Jesus as the promised Son of David, the Messiah long waited for. On previous occasions, when they sought to make Jesus a king, after witnessing his marvelous works, he withdrew himself from them, to wait for their ardor to cool, knowing that the Father's time was not yet due. But now he knew that his hour was come and hence, instead of hindering, he helped on with the enthusiasm by sending for the ass, etc. Prominent sectarian Jews present, although unable to account for the miracle, were unprepared to think of Jesus as the true Messiah, or anything short of an imposter in that role. When these heard the multitude shouting and addressing Jesus as the Messiah they were offended and sent word to Jesus that he should restrain the ignorant people who were thus acclaiming him.

But instead of forbidding the ovation Jesus intimated that it was the proper thing, that because the Prophet Zechariah (ix 9) said, "Shout, O daughter of Jerusalem!" therefore there must be a shout. If the people had not shouted, rather than have the prophecy go unfulfilled, Jesus said the very stones would have cried out.

En route to Jerusalem Jesus halted the ass and the procession at the top of the Mount of Olives and, overlooking the Holy City, wept while he pronounced his sentence upon it—Unworthy! Unappreciative! As the evangelist declares, "Israel knew not the time of her visitation." The time for Israel to receive the King had come and they were not only ignorant of the matter collectively, but they were not in the heart condition to understand or appreciate. Jesus cried, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathered her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!" (Matthew xxiii, 37). For three and a half years he and his faithful apostles had been declaring that the Kingdom of God was at hand; that the people should repent and believe the good message. And even six months in advance of this John the Baptist and his disciples had similarly preached.

After those four years of faithful preaching throughout the length and breadth of Palestine, the nation was apparently as unprepared for Jesus as at the first. Hence our Lord's following words, "Therefore I say unto you, Your house is left unto you desolate! Ye shall see me no more until that day when ye shall say—Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord!" That day has not yet come. Meantime the Jewish nation was there cast off from fellowship with God, as the prophet declares, "Because they knew not the time of their visitation."

Israel has been outcast from national favor for more than eighteen centuries. Thank God the day is near at hand, when, at the second coming of Messiah, his Kingdom shall be turned over to them. And then, as he declares, they will be glad to say, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." The long centuries of persecution and separation from God's favor will have brought that people to a humbler condition of heart, where they will be glad to receive of Divine grace upon Divine terms. To this great event St. Paul refers us in Romans xi, 27-34.

Although God foreknew all that had happened the offer of the Kingdom to Israel was just as bona-fide, just as genuine, as though he had not known it. God always does his part! Whatever failure there is in any matter of contract belongs to humanity.

If thus we have before our minds the origin of Palm Sunday and what it signified as the climax of the test of natural Israel in respect to Messiah, we are prepared to go further and to note that in God's providence there is a similar test for us Christians.

St. John emphasized particularly the fact that the rejection of the Jewish nation, because of their rejection of Messiah, did not apply to all the individuals of that nation. As the Prophet Isaiah had foretold (Romans ix, 27-33) there was a small, faithful section or "remnant." This remnant accepted Christ and were by him accepted and became the nucleus or foundation of Spiritual Israel on the Day of Pentecost. Thus we read, "He came unto his own (nation) and his own received him not (as a nation); but to as many as received him, to them gave he liberty (privilege) to become sons of God, even to them that believed on his name; which were begotten not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God"—at Pentecost (John i, 11-13).

Thus so far as the spiritual part of God's great promise to Abraham is concerned it has passed from the Jewish nation; but there still remains for them a glorious earthly portion, to which they will be introduced at our Lord's second coming. Then their sins will be cancelled, and as a people the Hebrews will return to Divine favor and will inherit the earthly features of the promise made to their fathers. Then, through them, God's blessing will be extended to all nations and peoples under Israel's New Covenant, which will then become operative at the hands of their great Mediator—the Christ, the Messiah in glory. But by that time the election of the saints of this Gospel Age will be complete and the Messiah in glory will include Jesus the Head and the Church his Body—joint-heirs with him in his Kingdom—joint-heirs with him in the spiritual features of the great Abrahamic promise (Galatians iii, 29).

All this is clearly stated by the Apostle in Romans xi, 25-32. But somehow our eyes of understanding as Christians have been holden so that, until of late, we have not seen these heights and depths, of Divine Love and Wisdom and arrangement. The fact that we now see these things is a corroborative evidence that they are nigh at hand. Just so it was at our Lord's first advent. Many things pertaining to that time were completely hidden until the time of their fulfillment came, and then only the "Wise Virgins" were so blessed, so assisted, that they trimmed their lamps effectively and were enabled to see these beauties in the Divine Plan.

Apparently very few of God's people, until recently, have noted the fact that Spiritual Israel has had a parallel history to that of Natural Israel. Few have seen that these are dealt with all through the Scriptures as type and antitype. Few have noticed that from the death of Jacob to the death of Jesus finds its exact parallel of 1,845 1-2 years between the death of Jesus and our day. Few have noticed that in both cases there is a nominal and a real Israel. The nominal Jewish system was tried and all but the "Israelites indeed" failed. Likewise will be the experience of Spiritual Israel. The nominal Christian systems will be tried, and all will fail except the spirit-begotten and faithful. As only a remnant or small number were found in the proper condition at the first advent, so the Scriptures clearly intimate that only a small number will be found sufficiently saintly and zealous and loyal to the Lord and the principles of his Truth in the end of this age, to graduate with first honors.

As there was a special period of testing and trying at the close of the Jewish Age, lasting for forty years, so the Scriptures clearly indicate, there is a special sifting and testing due to come to Christendom during the closing forty years of this Gospel Age before the inauguration of the glorious Millennial blessings. As the trials and tests came upon the Jews in a subtle manner, to test their faith and obedience, so even more subtlety must we expect will be connected with the trials and testings in the harvest time of this Gospel Age. Of this time the Lord through the prophet said, "Who may abide the day of his presence, and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire and like fullers' soap; and he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver; and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord acceptable sacrifices" (Malachi iii, 2, 3).

Natural and Spiritual Israel are contrasted. The Lord through the Prophet foretold that Messiah would be "for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offence to both the houses of Israel"—to Natural Israel and to Spiritual Israel. We have seen how the first house stumbled on that Palm Sunday — celebrated to-day. They stumbled "because they knew not the time of their visitation"—they did not know that the time had come for the establishment of the Kingdom; hence they were not alert to their privileges and failed to be in the proper condition of heart to receive the blessings. Or, we might state the matter reversely and say that those who did not know and did not accept Messiah, were those whose hearts were not in the right condition, else they would not have been left in darkness (I. Thessalonians v, 4).

Many thing indicate to us, now, that we are living in a time corresponding to that Palm Sunday! Many things imply that Christendom is now undergoing its great test and that only the fully consecrated of heart and life will be accepted of the Lord as his "Jewels" and be granted a share with Christ in his Kingdom. Many things imply that we are now in the time when the true people of God are being divided into two classes, as pictured for us by our Lord in the parable of the Wise and the Foolish Virgins. As only the Wise Virgins were prepared to enter into the marriage, so only the consecrated ones, the polished jewels of the Lord, will be accepted as fit for the Kingdom and be granted a share in the glorious resurrection change which will precede the great time of trouble, in which the Foolish Virgin class, although not of the world, will participate with the world.

True, that great time of trouble will usher in the glorious Millennial dispensation, in which the Church in glory with the Great Redeemer will pour out upon all mankind the wonderful restitution blessings which God has promised by the mouth of all the holy prophets (Acts iii, 19-23). True, the Foolish Virgins may subsequently get the oil and subsequently have a glorious future, but they will lose the choice place of Divine favor and blessing. They cannot be of the "Bride" class, but will receive their blessing under the figure of "the virgins her companions that follow her" (Psalm xlv., 14).

It is in order for all of God's people who now get awake from the slumber of worldliness which has long stupefied them, to join hearts and voices in a great shout — the shout that the Kingdom is at hand! The shout of Hosanna to the Son of David! And that the time is at hand for the fulfillment of the passage, "Gather together my saints unto me, saith the Lord! those who have made a covenant with me by sacrifice. They shall be mine, saith the Lord, in that day when I come to make up my jewels" (individually) (Malachi iii, 17).

As the Jewish nation was not ready to receive Jesus as its King, on that first Palm Sunday, neither is Christendom now ready to receive him at his second advent. As it was, only the "Israelites indeed," in whom was no guile, that then knew the voice of the Shepherd, so it will be here an individual matter. The Laodicean period of the Church's history is upon us (Revelation iii, 17). The Nominalism of our day is fully portrayed by our Lord's words. Christendom boasts that she is rich and increased in goods and has need of nothing; and knows not that she is poor and miserable and blind and naked. The Lord now stands at the door and knocks. He offers himself to the "Israelites indeed." Ours is Palm Sunday in the highest sense of all. How are we receiving the great blessings which betoken the parousia of the Master? Do we hear his knock? Have we opened our hearts? Are we searching his Word and listening for his voice, and seeking to know and to do his will in all things? To all such very shortly, we believe, will come the greater and fuller Pentecostal blessing:—the resurrection "change," from the glory of character merely to the glory of person as well, when we shall see our Redeemer as he is, and share his glory. As St. Paul says, "See that ye reject not him that speaketh from heaven!" Greater light, greater privileges, greater blessing everyway are ours than were those enjoyed by the Jews at our Lord's first advent. These privileges and blessings are our tests. Let us be faithful. Let us present our bodies living sacrifices and with renewed zeal seek to glorify our Lord in our bodies and our spirits, which are his (I. Corinthians vi, 20).

Those who have the eyes to see and the ears to appreciate the voice now speaking from heaven should be alert to Hail him Lord of all—to accept him as their Redeemer and King and voluntarily to present themselves to him and his service—not waiting for the time when he shall reveal himself in general. The Lord is now looking for saints, for overcomers, valiant, faithful, persevering, and thoroughly devoted to him, to his Cause of Righteousness, and thoroughly opposed to sin and especially active in overcoming its domination in their own hearts, in their own minds, in their own bodies. Such the Master pictures as his joint-heirs, priestly kings, sitting with himself in his Throne of glory and world dominion.

MEETING POSTPONED

Owing to the fact that they have as yet been unable to secure the meteorite from the Victoria Museum, for which they have been negotiating, the meeting of the Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada, which was called for to-morrow night, has been postponed for a week, until Tuesday, March 29. It is thought that the Society will be able to secure the use of the meteorite they are asking for, although it is very expensive. It will be an interesting sight for the members of the Society.

PARTY OF GIRLS FROM ENGLAND

Arrived at Barnardo Home Here at Noon —A Number of Boys West on to Toronto.

A party of eighty-four girls arrived in the city at noon to-day and were taken to Dr. Barnado's home, known as the Margaret Cox Home for girls. Homes are awaiting these girls in various parts of the Province, and they will be sent to them at once. The steamship "Tunisian" with the above party and 292 boys, arrived at St. John's yesterday morning. Immediately on their arrival they left on a special train for the West. The train passed through here about one o'clock, leaving the girls in this city and taking the boys on to the Home in Toronto. Many of the boys will be sent out to places in Manitoba and the Western Provinces.

HOW THIN FOLKS CAN GET FLESHY

New Accidental Discovery Gives Startling Results—Puts Flesh on Thin People and Rounds Out Imperfect Figures.

Simple Prescription Given.

For women—and men, too, for that matter—who can never appear stylish with anything they wear, because of abnormal thinness and angularity, this remarkable prescription is destined to solve the problem. As a beauty maker for the figure it is simply wonderful while it adds brightness to the eyes, and colour to the cheeks and lips. It requires no particular dieting, but acts as an aid to nature by its peculiar action on the nerves and blood supply. The blood and nerves distribute over the body, all the nourishment or flesh building elements obtained from the food. The trouble with thin people has always been that they do not absorb or retain enough of the fleshy matter to make them gain in weight even to a normal extent; but this new discovery of blending certain harmless drugs is a revelation to science, and hundreds have gained from ten to forty pounds in a few weeks. There is no danger of becoming too fat. When you get the right weight then stop using.

The general health and strength is greatly improved in anyone from the age of sixteen to sixty. Women soon get plump, with well rounded arms and full bust, and men become straight, strong-looking and healthy.

In a half pint bottle get three ounces of essence of pepsin and three ounces syrup of rhubarb. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol, shake and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom). Take a teaspoonful before and after meals, and weigh before beginning.

THE WEATHER

According to the almanac this is the first day of spring. To-day the sun rose exactly in the true east, and will set this evening exactly in the west. The day and night are now of the same length. If there is any truth in the old saw (which we doubt) equinoctial storms are now due. The days, however, are certainly becoming warmer. Each day the thermometer endeavours to climb another notch, and is able to negotiate up to about 55 degrees now with apparent ease. The nights still remain quite sharp. A severe thunder storm on Sunday morning was accompanied with a rainfall of .35 of an inch.—W. P.

Do You Realize What an Important Work the Kidneys Do?

Do you know that every drop of your blood goes to the kidneys hundreds of times every day? Do you know why?

To be filtered and purified from its impurities. That is the great work the kidneys have to do. They filter the blood. Then these impurities go to the bladder and are passed out of the body along with the urine.

Do you think it possible for you to be well, unless the kidneys do this work thoroughly?

It is these impurities—this unfiltered blood—that causes backaches, headaches, rheumatism, diabetes, Bright's disease, etc. They poison and interfere with the whole system.

If you have any kidney trouble let Doan's Kidney Pills do for you what they have done for thousands of others. They cure all forms of kidney trouble, and they cure them to stay cured.

Mrs. Maurice Doiron, Charlottetown P.E.I., writes:—"I was troubled with my kidneys for five years. They were so bad at times that I could not cross the floor for the pain. I went to a doctor, but he did me no good at all. I sent to the druggist and got five boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, and I am glad to say that after taking them I was cured. I have had no trouble for nearly three years now."

SGT.-MAJ. E. G. RUNDLE, FORMERLY OF THIS CITY, PASSES AWAY

Death of Well Known Veteran Yesterday in His Seventy-second Year—Was Drill Instructor of Peterborough Rangers and at the Collegiate for Eleven Years.

FUNERAL IN TORONTO

The news of the death of Sgt.-Major E. G. Rundle, at his home in Toronto, yesterday, was received in this city on Sunday. He was in his 72nd year, and had been ill for some time. The deceased was well known and highly esteemed in this city, where he resided for a number of years. The late Sgt.-Major Rundle was born in the town of Penrhyn, Cornwall, Eng., in September, 1838, and was educated at the national and private schools. On the 15th of July, 1858, he enlisted with a battalion of the 17th Leicestershire Regiment. From that time on the Sergt.-Major had a long and varied military career, having seen active service on more than one occasion. In his book n "A Soldier's Life" the late Sgt.-Major has told very interestingly the story of his life in the British Army. He was a member of a regiment taking part in the Trent affair and Fenian raids, following the close of the American civil war. He was also a member of the Red River expedition, which helped very much to open up and develop the Western Empire. In 1887 he was appointed gymnastic and drill instructor of the local Collegiate Institute, and for eleven years he held that position. He was a great favourite among the teachers and pupils of those days and many of them who still reside here will learn with deep regret of his death. He was, too, for a number of years Sgt.-Major of the Peterborough Rangers. Previous to coming to Peterborough he had been instructor and lecturer at the Military School, Toronto. In 1902 he returned to Toronto, where he resided until his death. Two sons, Messrs. George Rundle, of Toronto, and William, of this city, are left to mourn his loss. Interment is taking place in Toronto.

BARN STRUCK BY LIGHTNING AND IS TOTALLY DESTROYED

Councillor J. E. Richardson of Lakefield is Heavy Loser as Result of Early Morning Fire Yesterday.

INSURANCE SMALL

Special to The Examiner.

Lakefield, March 21.—During the violent electrical storm, which swept over this village early yesterday morning the barn on the property of Councillor John E. Richardson was struck by lightning and totally destroyed with its contents. The loss will be heavy as the insurance, $100, will not come within a fifth of the total damage. Four head of cattle, a horse, and a number of hens were destroyed in the blaze, as well as carriages, farm implements, etc. Mr. Richardson, whose house closely adjoins the barn, was awakened at 3 o'clock by the lurid light from the blaze shining in his window, and upon arriving he found the building was a mass of flames. The fire had made too much progress to leave any hope of saving the live stock, or other contents, and although the Lakefield fire brigade was called out and responded quickly with the apparatus, it was too late to give any opportunity of extinguishing the flames. The men devoted their attention to preserving the surrounding buildings in which aim they were successful. The barn itself was burned to the ground.

THE HISTORY OF ST. PATRICK IRELAND'S PATRON SAINT

Ancient Order of Hibernians Listen to Eloquent Address by Rev. Father Keeley of Lindsay.

LARGE ATTENDANCE

The Ancient Order of Hibernians assembled last evening at St. Peter's Cathedral to hear a lecture on their patron saint, given by Rev. Father Keeley, of Lindsay.

Father Keeley told the Hibernians that they had assembled there for the purpose of studying and making themselves familiar with the part St. Patrick played in history.

It is the custom of all nations to venerate the heroes of the past and hold them as models, so that they may practise their virtues and live a meritorious life like them.

St. Patrick was born in 337 of Christian parents, and enjoyed all the liberties of young life for sixteen years. He spent many sad years in the northern part of Ireland, as a shepherd, being treated cruelly and often going without his meals. After seven years of bondage he escaped to his home, but Ireland was still in his mind. He prayed and prayed, and Almighty God's grace soon filled his heart and after due deliberation, he prepared for his divine calling by putting on the armour of prayer. After thirty years of studying, he was ordained priest and then bishop.

Fierce tribes of people came down from the northern countries and tried to throw the people into corruption, but the Irish people were steadfast.

At this time there was a rule existing in Ireland which forbade any person to light a fire after a certain hour. St. Patrick broke this rule and was summoned to appear at Tara's Hall. Next morning St. Patrick set out for Tara's Hall. As he approached he saw a large crowd of warriors and he marched before them staunch and brave. What a feeling must have upheld St. Patrick, but he feared no man, as the grace of God was still in his heart. All eyes were turned towards him. St. Patrick told them with a clear voice that he had come to preach to them of the true God, who had a place in heaven for each and every one of them, if they would only submit. He spoke to them of their redemption, the purity, the beauty and the sweetness of the One who had saved their souls by dying an ignominious death on the Cross. Of all those Celtic souls assembled in Tara's Hall each one in turn melted like wax and was willing to submit to the true faith and cried aloud for baptism. In spite of famine, persecution, they remained steadfast to their faith. They also realized that the priest had a divine power from God and for that reason they held the priests of God in high esteem.

"We all have a love for our country, but the love displayed by the Irish people surpassed the love of other countries, for during the persecution the Irish people didn't waver, but remained staunch to their religion," he remarked. Ireland erected monasteries and students from all parts of the world came for their knowledge. The Danes harassed the shores of Ireland until the Irish soldiers were compelled to drive them back. The Irish soldiers stand among the best soldiers in the world, and they fought with a vim that goes to show that the grace of God was with them.

Irish literature also stood among the best in the world.

Father Keeley concluded his sermon by impressing upon his hearers that they were members of this great race of people and should be proud of it, and try to imitate the work of their forefathers.

3000 MILES OF THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY NOW UNDER CONSTRUCTION

FIRS SOD IN 1905

Since the turning of the first sod in the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway at Fort William, Ontario, September 11, 1905, by the Premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the construction work has proceeded steadily to the extent that at the present time, covering a period of four years and a half, since the building of this Transcontinental Railway was commenced, of the entire main line from Moncton to Prince Rupert, a distance of 3,550 miles, a total of 3,000 miles has been placed under construction, on which there has been laid 1,795 miles of track, which, in some cases, is made up of disconnected sections, and is, therefore, not all continuous. That portion of the line, however, from Winnipeg to Edmonton, 793 miles, has been constructed, and in partial operation by the Construction Department for the past 18 months, and within the past 90 days the track has been completed continuously from Edmonton westerly to Wolf Creek, 122 miles, thus completing the track laying on that portion of the line, designated as the Prairie Section, Winnipeg to Wolf Creek, 915 miles. The track laying was also recently completed from Winnipeg to Fort William, 445 miles, thus making a continuous line from Fort William, via Winnipeg and Edmonton, to Wolf Creek, 1,360 miles, which, however, cannot be completed for practical operation for some months, as considerable work is required to be done on the easterly and westerly ends of the line, to put it in a suitable condition for the movement of regular trains. The other portions of the main line on which the rails have been laid, are situated at different points east and west of the City of Quebec. During the past year contracts have been let for the construction work from Wolf Creek, Alberta, westerly to Tete Jaune Cache in the Rocky Mountains, 179 miles, and there are at present engaged in this section on the line, 1,000 teams and a large army of men. Similar forces are also engaged on the construction of the main line from Prince Rupert, the terminus of the Pacific Coast, easterly to Aldermere, B.C., 240 miles.

In addition to the mileage referred to above the Provincial Governments of Saskatchewan and Alberta passed acts at the Sessions of their Legislatures in 1909, authorizing guarantees for the construction of branch lines from the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway at Yorkton, Regina, Battleford, Calgary, Lethbridge, MacLeod, and Coutts, the construction of which are at present under way. At the Session of the Saskatchewan Legislature in December, 1909, an Act was passed authorizing the guarantee of the construction of additional branch lines by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in that Province, to the extent of 475 miles, comprising lines from Regina, southeasterly to the United States boundary line, from the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway to Prince Albert, and from Regina westerly to Moose Jaw, Calgary, etc., etc. the construction of which will be undertaken during the present year. From the foregoing it will be observed that out of a total mileage of main line and branches of approximately 7,900 miles, there have been completed and under construction at the present time, approximately 7,800 miles, or sixty per cent. of the entire mileage authorized in the Company's charters.

WARNING!

Since the discovery in England and the introduction into Canada of SALVIA, the Great Hair Grower, and on account of the phenomenal sale it has had, others have tried to imitate SALVIA. Beware and make certain you get the original. Every bottle bears the name "SALVIA."

The results obtained from using SALVIA are remarkable. Falling hair is at once fastened to the scalp; new life springs up from the roots; and the growth of the hair is amazing. Dead hairs are restored to their natural colour. The Dandruff germ is destroyed. Every bottle has a written guarantee. McDermid and Jury always keep a stock of SALVIA on hand. Try a bottle and watch your hair grow. SALVIA is the only preparation, as far as we know, that is sold with a guarantee. A large bottle for 50c.

GOOD SEED

From now to the end of seeding the trade in seed will be active, and it behooves every farmer to take stock of what he has on hand to sow or what he has to buy.

In many places dealers say that the seed which is now coming in quite freely from the farmers is more polluted with noxious weed seeds than it has been for several seasons. As a consequence there is heavy loss in cleaning, and high class No. 1 seed will be expensive. In view of these conditions it is likely that there will be a smaller proportion than usual of No. 1 seed placed on the market, and considerable of the second-rate seed will probably be pretty close to the prohibitive line. It is therefore especially important this year that farmers who have to buy seed should use every precaution to see that they do not get a supply of weed seeds. If you want high-class, pure seed, and are willing to pay the price, place your order early for guaranteed No. 1 seed, and to see that the seed delivered is up to standard, send a sample to the Seed Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and you will be sent a report giving the grading and the kinds and number of weed seeds present, if any. The standard for No. 1 seed is not more than one noxious seed per 1,500 of good seed, while in the second quality five weed seeds as per 1,000 are allowed, or 7 1-2 times as many. Farmers who have seed for sale, or even if they have only enough for their own use, should also have it tested for purity before selling or sowing. If this is not done there is danger of selling seed in violation of the Seed Control Act, and farmers are quite as liable to prosecution for selling low grade clover seed as seed dealers.

PILES CURED IN 6 TO 14 DAYS
PAZO OINTMENT is guaranteed to cure any case of Itching, Blind, Bleeding, or Protruding Piles in 6 to 14 days or money refuded. 50c.

Counties To Seek Aid From The Government

The Warden of the county of Victoria, the reeve of the township of Emily, and the county clerk of Lindsay, were in Peterborough on Saturday meeting with the Warden of the county of Peterborough and others in connection with the new bridge to be built by the united counties at Bobcaygeon. To-day the same deputation have gone to Ottawa with a view to soliciting aid from the Government. The claim is made upon the Government on the ground that the raising of the water has necessitated the construction of a bridge of greater width than would have been necessary had the water not been raised. The intention of the counties is to fill in a considerable proportion of the present bridge with earth and shorten the construction of the spans so that when the work is done it will be of a permanent character.

GOOD PRIZES OFFERED AT THE P. B. C. ALLEYS

Under new management things are beginning to boom at the Peterborough Bowling Alleys and the attendance is larger these nights than it has been for many months. Prizes have been hung up for big scores and the cracks are all trying to smash alley records and other things, with the result that there is always something doing. Mr. Ray Perry has been secured to take charge of the alleys and as he is popular with the bowlers should prove most successful in his new position. For this week the Class A. bowlers will have a chance to compete for a new spring hat valued at $3.00, and there is likely to be keen competition between Messrs. McIlroy, Martin, Gutterson, Cairns, Saunders and N. Perry, who are selected as being in this class. The second prize will be a pair of moccasins. For Class B. bowlers which comprise all the rollers in the city, except the above named galaxy of alley stars, an umbrella valued at $2.50 is offered for competition, while there is also a second prize of a pair of moccasins.

The Materials used in the D. & L. Emulsion are the finest the market affords, regardless of expense. In cases of wasting diseases, loss of weight, or loss of appetite, it is taken with great benefit.

ROCK ISLAND WRECK

Special to The Examiner.

Reinbeck, Iowa, March 21.—Many persons are reported killed as the result of the wrecking of Rock Island train here which was detouring over the Chicago and Western tracks on account of another wreck on the former road. Early reports say the death list may reach twenty-five. The train was a double header and went into the ditch. Both engines turned completely over and all the enginemen are believed to have been killed.

TARIFF QUESTION

Special to The Examiner:

Albany, N.Y., March 21.—Most of President Taft's time in Albany was devoted to the Canadian tariff situation. A conference between the President and W. S. Fielding, Canadian Minister of Finance, that lasted far into last night, was without definite result, and tariff sharps to-day are convinced that a tariff war between the two countries cannot be avoided. Canada will not yield a single step from the position she has taken, and the President has no option. Under the rigid provisions of the Payne tariff law, a special act of Congress to grant certain tariff schedules to Canada has been suggested, but as that would open up the entire tariff matter again it is hardly possible it will be attempted.

ATTEND CONGRESS

His Grace, the Archbishop of Westminster, head of the Roman Catholic Church in Great Britain, and suite, have signified their intention of attending the Eucharistic Congress that will be held in Montreal next September. It is probable that His Grace will be accompanied by the Duke of Norfolk, the leading lay head of the Roman Catholic Church in England. While in Canada this distinguished party will visit Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, Niagara Falls and other important places. His Grace has accepted the invitation extended by President Chas. M. Hayes, for himself and suite, to be the guests of the Grand Trunk on their Canadian tour.

FORESTERS TO MEET

The members of St. Peter's Court, No. 225, Catholic Order of Foresters are notified that there will be a meeting this evening to make arrangements for the funeral of late Bro. Fred Guerin.

For sale at all first class drug stores, 25c. a box, or five for one dollar.

SPREES COSTLY

Two Men Who Fell From Grace Were Fined $5 Each This Morning.

As the result of a "spree" Mert. Hickey pleaded guilty to being drunk on Sunday last. After paying a fine of five dollars "Mert" left for home.

Charles Holland pleaded not guilty to a similar charge, but the evidence given by P. C. Newhall, helped to relieve Charles of five dollars.

Judgment was reserved in Roland Butcher's case until to-morrow's session.

At seven o'clock to-night evidence will be taken in the case against Larry Kelly who was charged with stealing lockets and watches from a traveller in the Oriental hotel.

PROVING A SUCCESS

Messrs. Duffy and Wesley are Being Well Patronized at "My Valet."

Messrs. J. Duffy and Chas. Wesley have been meeting with great success since they took up the "My Valet" cleaning and pressing business on Charlotte street from Mr. W. B. Rickey. Both gentlemen are well and favourably known in Peterborough, and are certain to meet with a large share of patronage. Mr. Duffy is well-known from his connection with the A. W. Cressman establishment, while Mr. Wesley has had experience with the "My Valet" establishment before the present.

ALL WANTED HIM

Ottawa Man Receives Twenty-one Offers of Marriage in One Day.

Special to The Examiner.

Ottawa, March 20. — Twenty-one proposals of marriage in one day is the unparalleled record of Hugh Doyle, an employee of Booth's Mills. It is Mr. Doyle's duty, as a stenciller, to stamp the name of the consignee on all goods. A couple of months ago he wrote on the end of paper: "If any pretty young lady wishing to marry, sees this, kindly communicate with Mr. Hugh Doyle, Booth's Mills, Ottawa, Canada."

The paper was finally received in a large newspaper office in England and the notice written by Mr. Doyle was printed in the paper. As a result Mr. Doyle received 21 offers of marriage on Thursday last.

GOT THE WRONG REMEDY!

A report recently acquainted us of a case where very serious injury resulted from using an imitation of Zam-Buk. Not all Zam-Buk's imitations are dangerous or harmful, but why run the risk? Why take an imitation at all? The best that can be said of the imitations, the "just as good and cheaper" lines, is that they are certainly cheap. When you are ailing, the "cheap" thing is the very thing you should shun! Don't juggle with your health for five cents! The genuine Zam-Buk is protected by Jaw, and bears the name plainly on each packet.

SEIZED WITH PARALYSIS

While dressing this morning, Chief Roszel was seized with a paralytic stroke, and his condition is such as to alarm his friends.

PREVENTION IS WORTH WHILE.

When you consider the risk to life, the expense, the anxiety which is involved in an attack of appendicitis and a surgical operation, it is certainly worth while to avoid it by keeping the liver and bowels regular by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver opinion that appendicitis comes from a neglect to keep the liver and bowels in a Pills. Doctors are now unanimously of the healthful condition.

UNCLE JOE HAS FALLEN

Veteran Autocrat of the United States Lower House Tries to Prevent the Passing of a Resolution, But Is Beaten by Combined Votes of Democrats and Mutinous Republicans In Washington.

Washington, D.C., March 21.—Joseph Guerny Cannon of Danville, Ill., is still Speaker of the House of Representatives. But he lost Saturday the ancient prestige and weapon of that office when the allied Republican insurgents and Democrats took from him, not only the chairmanship of, but even membership of the all-powerful committee on rules, the chief asset in his stock of power.

Amid scenes of the wildest disorder, for the like of which one must go back to the exciting days prior to the civil war—perhaps those times might not duplicate it—the veteran Speaker, almost 74 years of age; stood erect and defiant, his head "bloodied but unbowed." And at the end, when a big Texan Democrat accepted the Speaker's daring challenge and introduced a resolution to fling him out of the speakership, the Republicans, regular and insurgents, with few exceptions, rallied with almost unbroken party front and gave him a vote which almost offset the "repudiation of Cannonism."

This is what happened: By a vote of 191 to 155, the Republican insurgents voting solidly with the Democrats, the House adopted the resolution of Representative Norris, Republican of Nebraska, requiring a reorganization of the rules committee, increasing its membership from five to ten and declaring the Speaker ineligible to membership thereof.

By the curiously identical vote of 191 to 155, but with a decidedly different personnel of alignment, the House defeated a resolution of Representative Burleson of Texas, declaring the Speakership vacant and ordering an immediate election of a successor to Mr. Cannon.

Champ Clark, minority leader in the House, said, "The Republicans are on the toboggan slide and if Democrats outside of Congress will get together, as the Democrats in the House have gotten together, our victories this year and in 1912 will be as sweeping as those of 1890 and 1892."

There were moments when it looked as though the preponderantly Republican House might even elect Champ Clark Speaker. In fact was this not only actually proposed in a motion by Mr. Clark of Florida, but Speaker Cannon himself, in his "deft" to the House, declared that his enemies should be consistent and proceed to the election of a Democratic Speaker. Indeed, it was this challenge to the House, daring as it was, which, instantly provoking the Burleson resolution for his dethronement, turned the tide again in his favor, which rallied the Republican regulars and insurgents, together, with few exceptions to the point of what may well be termed a vote of confidence.

Through it all, the aged Speaker, invariably calm, stoical, consistent to the end, stood in his place, his gavel, with steady thumps upon his desk, punctuating the riotous confusion.

The most insignificant sort of a resolution was responsible for the great three-day battle which ended yesterday. This resolution, less than fifty words, introduced by Representative Sabath, (Democrat, Illinois), provided that in the coming census, enumerators should ascertain the mother tongue of the persons enumerated.

Representative Crumpacker (Republican, Indiana), chairman of the census committee, presented this resolution on Wednesday, and the Speaker refused to consider it. That meant only that it would have to wait a while, but Mr. Crumpacker believed the resolution in order under the rules, making Wednesday "calendar day." He brought it up again on Thursday.

Speaker Cannon ruled that, the resolution was privileged and an appeal was taken from his decision. There was a majority against sustaining the Speaker. Immediately Representative Norris, the insurgent, was on his feet. The time for which he had been waiting had come; the Reapublican whip could not hold his men in line. Smiling, not foreseeing the impending cataclysm, the Speaker recognized "the gentleman from Nebraska."

The insurgent leader drew from his pocket a worn, creased resolution—he had been carrying it for weeks—and declared that under the Speaker's ruling his resolution also was privileged. There was no escape, and after deferring a ruling on the matter for two days and a night, the Speaker, knowing well that he was helpless, made his ruling and was overthrown.

NO MORE DISTRESS FROM THE STOMACH

No Dyspepsia, Gas, Heartburn or Indigestion Five Minutes Later.

Every family here ought to keep some Diapepsin in the house, as any one of you may have an attack of Indigestion or Stomach trouble at any time, day or night.

This harmless preparation will digest anything you eat and overcome a distressed, out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fulness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odour.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is at any drug store, waiting for you.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to cure almost any chronic case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other Stomach trouble.

THE OUTLOOK IS BETTER

President Gets a Shower of Messages Asking Him to Avoid a Tariff War With Canada—Dr. J. A. Macdonald Is Personally Thanked by Taft for Bringing About the Confab at Albany, N. Y.

Albany, N.Y., March 21.—"President Taft and Hon. W. S. Fielding, Canadian Finance Minister, was in conference in regard to the tariff for several hours yesterday, but no conclusion was reached," said Charles H. Pepper, the tariff expert of the Department of Commerce and Labor, yesterday afternoon, speaking of the conference called by the President in the hope of averting a tariff war between the United States and Canada. "The situation is now one of friendly negotiation," concluded Mr. Pepper.

President Taft merely reiterated Mr. Pepper's statement as to the status quo of the negotiations since the conference, but added that he had sought advice in anticipation of the tariff going into effect automatically on March 31, and there being a subsequent change favorable to the United States. With regard to this, Secretary of State Knox, previous to the President's leaving Washington, had given his opinion, although not committing himself definitely, that such changes might warrant the President rescinding by proclamation the maximum tariff, which would be imposed against Canada as a power unduly discriminating against the United States.

Although the Payne-Aldrich tariff is arbitrary as to its application against those countries which are unduly discriminatory against the United States, President Taft has judicial power to determine what constitutes "undue" discrimination. It has been the opinion of the President's tariff advisors, however, that unless concessions are granted by Canada, and the United States Government placed with France, and the thirteen other countries enjoying preferential rates that Canada would suffer the 25 per cent. increase of maximum American rates.

While the situation up till to-day had been regarded as a most threatening one, it is believed that the conference between President Taft and Mr. Fielding was resultant of more good than was announced, and the view regarding the possibilities of a happy solution of the problem has become more optimistic. Perhaps this optimism is due to a large extent to the very friendly relations that have existed between President Taft and Governor-General Grey since the two met in this city Saturday afternoon.

The two met frequently yesterday and at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon enjoyed the hospitality of Governor Hughes at luncheon at the executive mansion. Later in the afternoon President Taft and Earl Grey and a party of friends partook of tea at the home of Dr. Ward.

At 10 o'clock last evening President Taft, with Earl Grey as his personal guest, made preparations for the journey to New York. They sat aboard the President's private train, conversing in a most friendly manner, until a late hour in the evening, when they retired to start for New York at three o'clock this morning. President Taft has challenged Earl Greye to an international golf match at Beverly next summer and the Earl has accepted.

While Earl Grey did not participate in the conference, the very cordial relations of the executive heads of the United States and the Dominion Government has been regarded as significant. Other significant features developing yesterday were the fact that Earl Grey or Hon. Mr. Fielding are expected in Washington about the date that the Payne-Aldrich tariff would automatically become effective, and that President Taft called to him after the conference, J. A. Macdonald of Toronto, and thanked him for the service he had performed in being instrumental in bringing about the conference and making possible the continuance of "friendly negotiations."

The President was fairly inundated with telegrams again yesterday from various interests expressing the hope that an amicable agreement with Canada might be reached. Only within the last seventy-two hours, it was said, has the seriousness of the situation been appreciated in the United States and in the Dominion.

AD TAFT [kuhmeT rc2.-eMfF73

President Taft, Earl Grey and Governor Hughes of New York met here yesterday and formed a notable trio of guests at the banquet of the University Club of this city on Saturday night. On the President's arrival in the city from Rochester he was escorted at once to the governor's mansion, and from there was driven soon afterward to the Tuberculosis Congress, which has been in session in this city since Saturday, and where both he and Governor Hughes made addresses. Earl Grey arrived in the city about an hour after the President reached here. He was met at the station by the local militia and escorted to his hotel. The crowds on the streets were as demonstrative in their greeting to the Canadian official as to the President.

Earl Grey sat on the President's right at the dinner. Both took for their topics the friendly relations between Canada and the United States, and expressed the hope that these relations always might be maintained.

Windsor's Postal Boom.

Windsor, March 21.—A decided increase in the business of the Windsor postoffice for the past two years is, according to the belief of Postmaster Wigle, due to the fact that so many new firms have located in the city during the last few years. The business has almost doubled since 1907, when the revenue was $37,039, and for 1909 it is $68,000.

Indianapolis Metal Trades Ultimatum.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 21.—Two thousand machinists and members of the metal trades alliance in this city will strike on April 15 unless local factories grant an increase of 7 1-2 cents an hour. The increase demanded is 1-2 cents.

LITTLE DIGESTERS

positively CURE Indigestion. Stomach Troubles and distress of all sorts disappear like magic. Depression and brain fag, lassitude and that tired feeling all come from the stomach. LITTLE DIGESTERS make every day your good day. Read what others say:

EVERY MEAL BROUGHT AGONY

But Since Taking "Little Digesters" He Can Eat Heartily

From Osgoode Station, Ont., comes a story of five years of suffering from Indigestion and Dyspepsia—five years of doctoring in vain—then "Little Digesters" and a complete cure. Mr. R. H. Ralph tells the story—his own story—thus:

"I have been a sufferer from Indigestion and Stomach Trouble for five years. I had treatment from several doctors. I did not find a cure until I began using "Little Digesters."

"I can hardly describe how much I suffered at times. Every meal brought with it more or less agony and I seemed to have a complete distaste for food. I had almost begun to think my case incurable when I came across an advertisement in the papers about "Little Digesters." I decided to give them a trial. I am very thankful that I did so for I had not been taking them long when I found them helping me. I can now eat heartily and no longer feel pain and discomfort after eating."

"I Was in Bad Shape"

But Little Digesters "Have Done Wonders for Me"

Here is an experience with the first part of which you may be all too familiar. Mr. Josh Smith, of North Seneca, Ont., writes about "Little Digesters."

"Having been troubled with Indigestion for a number of years, I have tried nearly all kinds of pills and tablets for Indigestion only to be disappointed.

"Seeing your tablets advertised I thought I would give them a trial, and must say I am glad I did. Before taking them I was in bad shape. Bad taste in my mouth mornings and so dizzy that I hardly knew how I would put in the day. Everything I would eat would seem to sour and ferment, but after taking "Digesters" I can say they have done wonders for me."

If you know what the first part of this story means why not learn the relief and delight which comes from the use of "Little Digesters?"

HE FEARED TO EAT

Till "Little Digesters" Cured His Indigestion

Like many another sufferer from Indigestion, Mr. E. Thody looked forward to mealtime with dread instead of pleasure. Writing from his home at 141 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, on June 12th last, he says:

"For two years I suffered with Indigestion and obtained no relief from anything I took, including several prescriptions from prominent physicians. Every meal was followed with acute pain until I feared to eat, consequently became run down for lack of nourishment.

"'Little Digesters' were recommended to me by a friend and I tried them with remarkable results, two boxes completely curing me. It is three months since I took any and have not suffered a pain no matter how heartily I eat. I would certainly recommend them to anyone suffering with Indigestion."

King, Ont., Nov. 12, 1909.

THE COLEMAN MEDICINE Co.

Gentlemen,—

Having suffered for three years with Indigestion, nothing could relieve me, having seen your advertisements in the paper for "Little Digesters," took three, was entirely cured. I feel convinced that any one suffering with same will not fail to try "Little Digesters." PHILIP PAYN, Junior.

"Find Them Marvellous"

Here is a short but very convincing letter which we received recently:

THE COLEMAN MEDICINE Co.,

I have been using "Little Digesters" for some time. I still use them and find them marvellous. I recommend them sincerely.

MRS. CHAS. BROOKS.

Low, Wright Co., Que.

Here is another letter, dated Nov. 9th, 1909, almost equally brief and to the point:

COLEMAN MEDICINE Co.

Would say that the box of "Little Digesters" has done me a lot of good. I think they are all right for any Stomach Trouble.

ANTHONY FISHER.

Send Me Another Box of "Little Digesters"

That's what Mr. E. S. Glassco, of Toronto, wrote us last May, after he had tried and proved "Little Digesters" for Indigestion. He said:

"I wish you would send me another box of your "Little Digesters." All the members of my family have been using them and have obtained the most satisfactory results.

"I congratulate you on your success in putting up a tablet for the cure of Indigestion. I suffered for years and tried everything that was recommended to me. Nothing gave me relief until I was persuaded to try "Little Digesters." Now I never suffer from Indigestion. I enjoy my meals and am not afraid to eat, because I know a "Little Digester" after each meal will digest my food.

"I recommend them to all my friends who suffer from Indigestion and would further say that you may publish the above if you wish. I know there are thousands of people suffering from Indigestion who will be glad to know there is a safe and sure cure for them."

Cured at Seventy-four

Little Digesters are a Great Help to Mr. John F. Becker

The weight of years very often brings with it a still heavier burden, that of Indigestion or some form of Stomach Trouble.

Then "Little Digesters" come to the rescue—if you give them a chance, as did Mr. Becker. Here is his letter telling what they did for him:

New Dundee, Nov. 10, 1909.

TO THE COLEMAN MEDICINE Co.

Dear Sirs,—

I was for a long time troubled with bloating after meals, and my tongue was always coated. Seeing the "Little Digesters" advertised I bought a box, and they took all that trouble away, but I thought one box would not be enough, so I sent to you for more. They are a great help to my body. Yours truly,

JOHN F. BECKER.

Excuse my writing with pencil, being an old man of 74.

Letters like these are the best possible proof that "Little Digesters" do exactly what we claim—relieve and cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all forms of Stomach Troubles and distress. They aid the feeble stomach to digest food perfectly so that you can enjoy your meals and get the strength out of what you eat.

To Be DYSPEPTIC Is To Be MISERABLE.

Dyspepsia is the prevailing malady of civilized life. It is largely due to gross errors in diet, over-eating, too free indulgence in stimulants and over-taxing the stomach with indigestible food, eating too rapidly without chewing the food sufficiently, indulging in hot biscuits, pastry, pickles, confectionery, etc.

Burdock Blood Bitters has an established reputation, extending over thirty-four years, as a positive cure for dyspepsia in all its forms, and from all diseases arising from it.

Can Eat Anything Now.

Mrs. Herman Dickenson, Benton, N.B., writes: "I have used Burdock Blood Bitters and find that few medicines can give such relief in dyspepsia and stomach troubles. I was troubled for a number of years with dyspepsia and could get no relief until I tried Burdock Blood Bitters. I took three bottles and became cured and I can now eat anything without it hurting me. I will highly recommend it to all who are troubled with stomach trouble."

Head Office: 46 King Street, West TORONTO

The Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Imperial Guarantee & Accident Insurance Company of Canada, was held at the Head Office, 46 King Street West, Toronto, on the 10th inst.

Mr. E. W. Cox, President of the Company, in reviewing the business of the year, made reference to the growing popularity of Accident Insurance, and its effect on the success of the business of the Company during the year. The amount of Insurance written was over $26,270,000.00, an increase of $1,240,000.00 over the business taken out in 1908. This is considered exceptionally satisfactory in view of the fact that the business of the Company is confined to Personal Accident and Guarantee Insurance.

The Gross Income for 1909 amounted to $319,741.76.

That being an increase over the year 1908 of $4,817.84.

The Assets now total $206,274.00, and, after allowing for Reserve for unearned premium calculated on the full Government standard, and all other liabilities, the surplus for the protection of policyholders has increased to $313,447.19.

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when that record applies to the treatment of more than half-a-million women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first of specialists in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as without fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

Rickard and Gleason are Planning to Accommodate no Less Than 35,000 People.

RANGES FROM $10 TO $100

San Francisco, Cal., March 19.—Figuring their expenses at $175,000 Rickard and Gleason are making plans for the Jeffries-Johnson fight that will assure a gate of not less than $300,000.

Both promoters say they will not be contented with any lesser sum and in some of the calculations they even carry their dreams as high as $500,000.

Seats, unless plans are changed, will range in price from $10 to $100, and the places at the lower figure will be so far away from the ring that it will take a telescope to bring the holder within reaching distance.

One hundred dollars a seat!

For those who know Johnson there is something to give pause in the thought of the negro fighting before sportsmen paying such prices.

In this city, when the fortunes were low, it is an actual fact that the negro took for his price in fights less than one seat will bring in the fight for the world's championship.

He was no spring chicken even then and that was only some three years ago.

All Over the Country.

He has been bumping all over the country, has done some creditable work, including his victories over men like Gardner, McVey and Ferguson, when he came to this city.

There were a good many fight clubs. He expected to do pretty well here.

Johnson at that time had no exalted idea of his value as a drawing card. His first fight was at the old Coliseum, with "Sandy" Ferguson, and then he was billed as a big feature but the negro had to eat and after a while he reached the point when he would cheerfully work at the Broadway, content with the very moderate purses that Bailey must naturally "put" at a house where prices govern.

At one stage of the game Johnson was virtually down and out. He had no money; he could get no work. White men wouldn't meet him, because they had a respect for the prowess of the big Texan, and there is a strong prejudice among white men against being knocked out by a negro.

It was nothing uncommon for Johnson to "make a dutch" for a couple of dollars.

That he got out of the whole and flashed to the summit where he is going to fight for money such as was never heard of before is due largely to the determination and liberality of his manager, "Sam" Fitzpatrick, who chased Burns around the world to force the match that enabled the negro to win the championship.

Perhaps in his wildest dreams Johnson at that time figured on the bare possibility of his being one of the contestants before a crowd that would pay not less than a quarter of a million dollars to see the bout.

Estimated Crowd.

It is now estimated that 35,000 persons will see the big battle. It is planned to leave 15,000 seats of $10, 10,000 seats of $25, reserved chairs at $50 and box seats at $100 a throw.

This is dizzy money, but the public interest in the first big battle of two evenly matched heavyweights in a decade is so big the inclosure will be crowded, no matter what the price.

Considering that it is impossible for the men to meet in Chicago or New York, San Francisco, despite the distance from the East, is the next best place.

It has been the city of big fights, there is a big sporting population near by, and the city can take care of the big crowds in comfort.

RENFREW DEFEAT THE WANDERERS

New York, March 20.—The great all-star hockey seven from Renfrew, Canada, defeated the Wanderers of Montreal, last night, at the St. Nicholas Rink by nine goals to 4 in a contest for $1,000 purse. It was a wonderful exhibition of hockey that the teams put up, and the play in the second half fairly scintillated with brilliant performances. It was neck-and neck all the way in this period, both sides fighting like demons, the Wanderers making heroic efforts to overcome the great lead of seven goals to 1 gained by their opponents in the first half.

The play was strenuous and fierce in the last part of the struggle, and the penalties were handed out right and left, there being a constant procession to the timers' bench.

The feature of the game was the great work of the two coverpoints. Taylor and Johnston, generally conceded to be the greatest men who ever donned skates. Their work was simply marvellous. It would be hard to choose between them, as they play such different and at the same time such effective games that a comparison is hard to make.

Taylor is undoubtedly the most spectacular of the two, and his end-to-end rushes last night fairly swept the crowd in to enthusiasm. His cyclonic rushes, his sudden stops, his brilliant checking and great rushes demoralized the opposing seven.

On the other hand, Johnston was in every play, all over the ice, first at one goal, then the other, down on his back flat on the ice and up again in a second, always in possession of the puck, and his long reach and poke at the puck broke up play after play in the most bewildering fashion. He was almost the whole team in himself.

ST. MICHAELS REFUSE TO LET GO THE ALLAN CUP

Defeated the Sherbrooke Challengers Saturday Night by 8 Goals to 3 in an Interesting Game in Toronto.

AHEAD 4-1 AT HALF

Toronto, March 21.—The first attempt to wrest the Sir Montagu Allan Cup from St. Michael's College champions resulted in a signal failure, the challenging Sherbrooke, Que., team, champions of the St. Lawrence Valley League, and one of the fastest sevens in the East, being beaten by 8 to 3 at the Mutual St. rink on Saturday night. St. Michael's were always in the lead and were not threatened with the loss of the trophy at any stage of the contest.

The ice was hard and fast, even though covered with water in places. The puck slid easily and made combination quite possible. The fact that the challengers had beaten Montreal Victorias and other well known Quebec teams was not generally known, the chief recommendation of the Sherbrooke seven being that they had won the championship of their league, of which little is known west of Montreal. The absence of "dope" on the Easterners resulted in the smaller attendance than would perhaps have been the case had they been better known. The rink was more than comfortably filled, but the crowd was not as large as at some of the recent St. Michael's games.

St. Michael's are unquestionably the better team. Very few shots were made on the champions goal, the play being considerably confined to the Sherbrooke end of the ice in both halves, particularly in the opening period. In fairness to the challengers it should be explained that they were minus the services of the brothers Wiggett, point and centre players who have been referred to all season as the stars of the team. They preferred not to play on account of the death of their father a week ago. The Sherbrooke men all wore tube skates and were very fast. They all used the fast and usually effective wrist shot which is peculiar to the East and West and which was used almost exclusively here this season by Billy Currie of the T. A. A. C. team, a Brandon man. Another respect in which Sherbrooke in common with most Eastern teams differed from St. Michaels' College was their slowness in getting started. They circle a good deal with the puck until they find a way to break with their forward line, but on the small rink and against the determined checking of the champions, they were quite unable to get going. They showed not more than a half dozen flashes of combination throughout the game. Individually they were strong in all positions and all departments of the game, but St. Mike's kept on top of them, smothering attempts at combination and shooting much the same as in the Queen's game at Kingston. Like the Interprovincial teams who have all been beaten here, Sherbrooke looked as though they would be a hard nut to crack on a big rink, such as that at Sherbrooke, with fast ice.

It was clearly demonstrated that St. Michael's are not a one or two man team. They played smooth, well-balanced hockey with the concerted effort which has been responsible for the brilliant record the collegians have made this season. Frank Kavanagh, of Montreal and B. Noble Steacy, of Kingston, handled the game well and had little to do other than to impose occasional penalties for tripping and offside loafing. The first half was played under O. H. A. rules and the second under the Eastern code.

Toronto's Ball Team Goes To South Next Week

The Toronto players will report at Washington a week from to-morrow and go to Charlottesville, Va., for two weeks' hard training. The jump from Charlottesville camp to Norfolk, Va. where the Washington Americans will train, is en route to the New England League, and Manager Kelley is endeavouring to arrange a game with the Washington team at Norfolk before jumping to New England for exhibition games.

March 27—Report at Washington.
March 28—Go to Charlottesville, Va., for two weeks' training.
April 10—At Roanoke, Va.
April 12—At Lynchburg, Va.
April 13—At Wilmington, Del.
April 14—At Worcester, Mass.
April 15—At New Bedford, Mass.
April 16—At Lynn, Mass.
April 18—At Brockton, Mass.
April 19—At Fall River, Mass.

Manager Kelley has a number of new men to try out on the trip. They are Catcher Tonneman of Nashville, secured from the Boston Americans. Pitcher Stuart Gurney, of Detroit. Pitcher Thompson, a New York semi-pro.; Pitcher Wm. C. Corey, another right-hander, of promise; Pitcher Sammy Smith, the star of the Montreal team last season; Outfielder Joe Delahanty, First baseman Deal, and Second Baseman Fitzpatrick. Delahanty was secured from St. Louis. He is a left-fielder, and, like his famous brother, is a good man with the club. He can also play second base.

Johnny Deal and Wm. Fitzpatrick were bought from the champion Lancaster team of the Tri-State League. Deal is a tall, rangy fellow, and clouted the ball to a .305 tune last year. He has a world of speed, and has been in the big waggon playing for Ned Hanlon, when the Baltimore man was manager of Cincinnati. Fitzpatrick was highly recommended by Gene McCann, Arthur Irwin, and several other baseball scouts.

Deal will be at first base, Jimmy Mullen or Fitzpatrick at second, Vaughn or Frick at shortstop, and McDonald at third base. Delehanty, Grimshaw, and either Kelley or a new man will be the outfielders. Rudolph, Doc. Newton, Sammy Smith and McGinley, all twirlers, who have shown their class, and Lee, Corey, Gurney, and Thompson are the box men in line.

Pitchers—Rudolph, Newton, McGinley, Lee, Thompson, Corey, Gurney and Sam Smith.

Catchers—Vandergrift, Tonneman.
First base—Deal.
Second base—Mullen or Fitzpatrick.
Shortstop—Frick or Vaughn.
Third base—McDonald.
Outfielder — Grimshaw, Delahanty and Kelley.

JACK TAIT TRIMMED BONHAG ONCE MORE

Buffalo, March 20—Unable to match a terrific sprint set by Jack Tait, the middle-distance runner of the West End Y. M. C. A. of Toronto, George Bonhag of the Irish-American Athletic Club of New York city, was vanquished by the fleet-footed one from "over 'ome" in the two-mile handicap, which proved one of the feature events of the card run off at the 74th Regiment armoury last night.

It was sweet revenge for the Canadian champion, who, at previous race meets at the Connecticut Street armoury this season was twice humbled by the New Yorker in two-mile and three-mile match races. The Canadian crack had the better of the race in the early stages, performing in a manner that far surpassed his previous efforts here. He covered the distance in .16 3-5, which is 2 1-5 seconds within the record established by Bonhag when he took Jack's measure here recently.

At the crack of the pistol Tait forged to the front at a pretty clip. With half a lap of the first mile remaining Bonhag drew up on his opponent and stepped to the front, but his lead was short lived, as Tait assumed the pace at the lap. The Canadian champion on the thirteenth lap again took the lead. He let out a lively spurt, which the boy from the Metropolis was unable to match. Tommie Simpson of the 74th, who had a handicap of 80 yards, finished a good third. Bonhag had offered Tait a handicap of fifteen yards, but the Canadian was satisfied to toe the scratch mark with Bonhag. The time for the first mile was given at 4.33.

In the 100-yard dash for the international championship Robert Cloughen, a sprinter of remarkable physique from the I.A.A.C., New York, beated Bobby Kerr, of Hamilton in two heats. He was three yards ahead in the first dash, but in the second had the better of the Canadian by only 1½ feet. The time was ten seconds in each.

G. H. Goulding of Toronto, was the star in the mile walk, winning over a large field, which contained men with handicaps of 300 yards. His time was 6.29 3-5, which was 2-5 of a second behind the world's record set by him at a recent meet here.

Goulding delighted his thousands of Buffalo admirers by his exhibition in the mile walk. The Canadian started out as usual, mowing down his nearest competitors, Joe Goldbach and J. F. Schneider, both of whom had big handicaps, died hard. It was not until the last turn of the last lap that George caught Schneider. Goldbach gave the speedy Canadian a good tussle, but finished five yards behind.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON.
Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

"Oh, by the way, Mr. Armitage, there's the girl I have chosen for you to marry. I suppose it would be just as well for you to meet her now, though that dark little foreigner seems to be monopolizing her."

"I am wholly agreeable," laughed Armitage. "The sooner the better and be done with it."

"Don't be so frivolous. There, you can look safely now. She's stopped to speak to that bald and pink justice of the supreme court—the girl with the brown eyes and hair. Have a care!"

Shirley and Chauvenet left the venerable justice, and Mrs. Sanderson intercepted them at once.

"To think of all these beautiful things in our own America!" exclaimed Shirley. "And you, Mr. Armitage"—

"Among the other curios, Miss Claiborne," laughed John, taking her hand.

"But I haven't introduced you yet," began Mrs. Sanderson, puzzled.

"No; the King Edward did that. We crossed together. Oh, M. Chauvenet, let me present Mr. Armitage," said Shirley, seeing that the men had not spoken.

The situation amused Armitage, and he smiled rather more broadly than was necessary in expressing his pleasure at meeting M. Chauvenet. They regarded each other with the swift intentness of men who are used to the sharp exercise of their eyes, and when Armitage turned toward Shirley and Mrs. Sanderson he was aware that Chauvenet continued to regard him with fixed gaze.

"Miss Claiborne is a wonderful sailor. The Atlantic is a little tumultuous at times in the spring, but she reported to the captain every day."

"Miss Claiborne is nothing if not extraordinary," reclared Mrs. Sanderson with frank admiration.

"The word seems to have been coined for her," said Chauvenet, his white teeth showing under his thin black mustache.

"And still leaves the language distinguished chiefly for its poverty," added Armitage, and the men bowed to Shirley and then to Mrs. Sanderson and again to each other. It was like a rehearsal of some trifle in a comedy.

"How charming!" laughed Mrs. Sanderson. "And this lovely room is just the place for it."

They were still talking together as Franzel, with whom Armitage had spoken below, entered hurriedly. He held a crumpled note, whose contents it seemed had shaken him out of his habitual melancholy composure.

"Is Baron von Marhof in the room?" he asked of Armitage, fumbling nervously at his monocle.

The Austrian ambassador, with several ladies and led by Senator Sanderson, was approaching.

The attache hurried to his chief and addressed him in a low tone. The ambassador stopped, grew very white and stared at the messenger for a moment in blank unbelief.

The young man now repeated in English, in a tone that could be heard in all parts of the hushed room:

"His majesty the Emperor Johann Wilhelm died suddenly tonight in Vienna," he said and gave his arm to his chief.

It was a strange place for the delivery of such a message, and the strangeness of it was intensified to Shirley by the curious glance that passed between John Armitage and Jules Chauvenet. Shirley remembered afterward that as the attache's words rang out in the room Armitage started, clinched his hands and caught his breath in a manner very uncommon in men unless they are greatly moved. The ambassador walked directly from the room with bowed head, and every one waited in silent sympathy until he had gone.

The word passed swiftly through the great house, and through the open windows the servants were heard crying loudly for Baron von Marhof's carriage in the court below.

"The king is dead. Long live the king!" murmured Shirley.

"Long live the king!" repeated Chauvenet and Mrs. Sanderson in unison. And then Armitage, as though mastering a phrase they were teaching him, raised his head and said, with an unction that surprised them: "Long live the emperor and king! God save Austria!"

Then he turned to Shirley with a smile.

"It is very pleasant to see you on your own ground. I hope your family are well."

"Thank you; yes. My father and mother are here somewhere."

"And Captain Claiborne?"

"He's probably sitting up all night to defend Fort Myer from the crafts and assaults of the enemy. I hope you will come to see us, Mr. Armitage."

"Thank you. You are very kind," he said gravely. "I shall certainly give myself the pleasure very soon."

As Shirley passed on with Chauvenet Mrs. Sanderson launched upon the girl's praises, but she found him suddenly preoccupied.

"The girl has gone to your head. Why didn't you tell me you knew the Claibornes?"

"I don't remember that you gave me a chance, but I'll say now that I intend to know them better."

She bade him take her to the drawing room. As they went down through the house they found that the announcement of the Emperor Johann Wilhelm's death had cast a pall upon the company. All the members of the diplomatic corps had withdrawn at once as a mark of respect and sympathy for Baron von Marhof, and at midnight the ballroom held all of the company that remained. Armitage had not sought Shirley again. He found a room

PETERBORO BOWLING CLUB UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT

Purchased by Local Company Who Will Introduce New Methods.

The Peterborough Bowling Club, situated in the old Opera House, George St., has changed hands, having been acquired by two enterprising local gentlemen, whose names are an assurance of satisfactory management in future. These gentlemen have purchased the entire splendid outfit from Mr. Lester, of Toronto, with the distinct intention of improving bowling alley methods in this city, so that the game may attract a class of patrons who will appreciate the healthy exercise and recreation which it is calculated to promote. The Peterborough Bowling Alley is said to be the best between Toronto and Montreal, and its equipment the most perfect and up-to-date. The chute has been found scientifically constructive and every feature of the alleys adapted for good scoring. The regulation balls have been pronounced by experts to have the desired characteristic in perfect balance and weight. With good management and a rigid system of rules, the new proprietors expect to work up a new enthusiasm for the game.

OBITUARY

RICHARD ROY DEYELL.

The death occurred yesterday afternoon of Richard Roy Deyell, son of Mr. John Deyell, 375 Aylmer street, Peterborough. The late Mr. Deyell was twenty-three years of age and lived the greater part of his life in Cavan. He has always followed the occupation of farming. His father and mother are left to mourn his loss.

The service will take place to-morrow at 2.30, and the funeral from the above address at 3 o'clock, to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

FREDERICK GUERIN.

The death occurred this morning at his residence in North Monaghan, just outside the city limits, of Frederick Guerin, aged forty-two years. He was a native of Peterborough and had lived in North Monaghan for the past two years. He had also resided in Otonabee. Mr. Guerin is survived by his wife and six children, his mother, Mrs. Mary Guerin, Perry street, and five brothers and one sister also survive. Two brothers are Louis, of Toronto; Nowell, Archie and Henry, of Peterborough, and Villa, of Blairmore, Alta. The sister is Mrs. Young of Fort William. Deceased was a member of St. Peter's Court, Catholic Order of Foresters, and the funeral will be under the auspices of the order. It will take place on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, to the Church of the Sacred Heart, and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

MRS. DAVID D. GALLETLEY.

The many friends of Mrs. David D. Galletley will learn with regret of her sudden death at Banff, Alta., on Sunday morning, March 20. The deceased was a former resident of Peterborough and was well and most favourably known in this city. In company with Mr. Galletley she had left Banff about November 10th, last year, for the old country, where they visited friends for a short time, returning to Canada in February. Mr and Mrs. Galletley visited Peterborough about the middle of February, and while here Mr. Galletley sang a solo in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, of which he was at one time choir leader. The late Mrs. Galletley was seventy-two years of age, and was the grandmother of Mr. Hammond Lee, of this city. She is survived by one daughter, Miss Ethel, residing at home, and by her sorrowing husband. Mr. Galletley will have the deepest sympathy of his many friends in Peterborough. Mrs. Galletley only arrived home in Banff on the 10th inst., and her demise on the 20th was entirely unlooked for. She contrasted a cold in the Old Country, which eventually caused death.

MR SAMUEL ANGLESEY.

One of the oldest and most widely known residents of Peterborough passed away yesterday morning at nine o'clock in the person of Mr. S. Anglesey.

The deceased was a member of the C. M. B. A. and had lived in Peterborough all his life.

The funeral will take place at nine o'clock Tuesday, from the family residence, Murray St., to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery for interment.

MR. WM. HUMPHREY.

Mr. William Humphrey, who came to St. Joseph's Hospital last Tuesday for treatment, passed away yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock

The deceased was sixty-four years of age and lived the greater part of his life in Norwood.

The remains were sent to Norwood on the midnight train, Sunday, where interment will take place on Tuesday.

REV. J. A. G. STIRLING.

Rev. Jas. A. G Stirling for the past two years pastor of the Presbterian church in Havelock, passed away at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Nicholls Hospital from an attack of cancer. The deceased was taken seriously ill some weeks ago and was removed to the Toronto General Hospital, afterwards being brought to the local hospital where, in spite of the best of care, his death occurred this afternoon.

The late Mr. Stirling was a native of Scotland and spent some years in mission work among the bush men of Australia before coming to Canada. He had been engaged in the work of the Presbyterian church in Canada for the past ten years. For a short time before accepting the call to Havelock he was a resident of Peterborough and formed many friends here who will regret to learn of his death. He is survived by one sister residing in the Canadian west.

The funeral will take place in Peterborough, but arrangements have not yet been completed.

MRS. WILLIAM BATES.

The death occurred yesterday of Mrs. William Bates, of Fleetwood.

The deceased was seventy-four years of age, and is survived by four sons and five daughters. The sons are Fred W., of this city; Walter, of Lakefield; Stanley, of Hamilton, and Thomas, of Spokane; while the daughters are Mrs. Chas. Stewart, of Toronto; Mrs. H. Waldon, of Gores' Landing; Mrs. W. Graham, of Mimico; Mrs Robert Finley, of Parry Sound, and Mrs. McWilliams, of Fleetwood.

The remains will arrive on the 8.30 train and will be taken to her son's residence, 654 Stewart St.

The funeral will take place Wednesday from the above address to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

Forty-five People Were Killed In Iowa Wreck

Train is Derailed in Narrow Cutting and Cars Telescope Each Other---Wreckage Was Soaked With Blood and Many Bodies Taken Out Too Mutilated to be Identified

MarshalTown, Ia., March 22.—Forty-five persons were killed and forty were injured, many of them fatally, in a wreck four and a half miles north of Green Mountain, Iowa, yesterday on a Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific passenger train.

Many passengers were apparently killed outright, but the suffering among the injured was terrible. Arms and legs were cut off. The wreckage was almost crimson with blood. A few of the passengers were found still living with a rod or a splinter impaling them in the wreck.

Among the dead is John Bambridge of Hartford, Norfolk County, Ont.

Other identified dead are: Milton Parish, Cedarvile, Mo.; Jacob Nauholz, conductor; A. Ross, fireman; Ross Charter, brakeman; Archie Price, colored porter; R. A. Robinson, engineer; L. A. Parris, Cedar Falls, professor Iowa State Teachers' College; Mrs. Lewis, Valley Junction, Ia.; M. W. Eggers, Waterloo, Ia.; F. D. Lyman, Waterloo; N. C. Heacock, West Liberty, Ia.; Anthony P. Phillips, Waterloo; Walter P. Bunt, Waterloo; Fred L. Colon, Washington, Ia.; H. L. Ponnington, Galesburg, Ill.; T. B. Beets, Cedar Rapids; C. G. Evans, West Branch, Ia.; Mrs. Walter Davis, Waterloo; F. F. Fisher, West Branch, Ia.; Wm. Fleck, Vinton, Ia.; Ingebret L. Tangun, Northwood, Ia.; Earl T. Main, banker, Williamsfield, Ill.; Caesar C. O. Hoff, Minneapolis; Andrew J. White, Vinton; Lauren Allschweger, Ogden.

Unidentified: Ten women, two men and two girls.

A little freight wreck on the Rock Island Sunday night at Shellsburg was the indirect cause of the disaster. The Rock Island line was blocked and it became necessary to detour over the Great Western tracks. Two trains sent from Cedar Rapids to Marshalltown, were coupled together and the two locomotives placed in front of them. Both locomotives were running backwards.

The combined train consisted of 13 cars. A Pullman was next to the locomotives. Then came a smoking car and a day coach. In the latter were many women and children.

The doubled train was going about 25 miles an hour when it reached a cut five miles from Green Mountain, at the top of a hill. In this cut the tender of the front locomotive jumped the track. This threw the head locomotive into the sides of the narrow cut. The sides were soft and the engines went into it and stopped almost instantly.

The sudden stoppage ditched the second locomotive, and the momentum of the heavy train crushed the day coach and the smoking car against the heavy Pullman. The smoking car and day coach were telescoped and hardly an occupant of either car escaped death or injury.

While the last ten cars remained on the track, the shock threw the passengers from their seats.

Uninjured passengers began removing the dead and injured. The dead were taken to an adjoining pasture and laid on the grass. A relief train from Marshalltown, carrying surgeons and Coroner Jay, arrived two hours after the crash. The dead were crushed and mutilated in many cases beyond recognition. Heads were severed from bodies, arms and legs were cut off. Here lay a bleeding trunk; there a head with the agony of death still on the countenance. Several bodies are so mutilated that they may never be identified.

ATTEMPT TO WRECK CHURCH IN BRANTFORD

Special to The Examiner.

Brantford, March 22.—What is believed to have been a deliberate attempt to wreck Grace church (Anglican) by an explosion of natural gas, was discovered this morning. Caretaker Burnham yesterday found an unknown man hiding behind the furnace and immediately ejected him. Today when the edifice was discovered completely filled with gas, an examination showed that a pipe had been wrenched apart at a point where it enters the cellar, allowing a full flow to enter the building. Luckily the church was not in use that night.

Sherman Case In Court The City Is Involved

His Worship Mayor Morrow stated at last night's meeting of the committee of the whole, that he had been interviewed by the wardens of Victoria and Peterborough counties, and was given to understand that the Sherman matter would be taken to court, in which case the City of Peterborough would be made a party to the action. Mr. Sherman sustained the loss of one horse and injury to another by reason of the Pigeon Creek bridge having been partially carried away by a heavy storm during the past winter. It was contended that the city was responsible for a share of the maintenance of Pigeon Creek bridge. The City Solicitor, however, asserted that this city was not liable in any way for the accident in question.

The wardens of both Peterborough and Victoria counties suggested that their municipalities and the city give $50 each toward a settlement of this claim.

The Council were of the opinion that settling the foregoing claim would be establishing a precedent that would not be advantageous to this municipality, and on motion of Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Graham, no action was taken.

Great Interest In The Earl Grey Competition

Toronto, March 22.—The main topic of discussion here, and indeed in other cities and towns of Canada, wherever amateur singers or actors gather, is the forthcoming festival of amateur events for the Earl Grey competition trophies. Toronto is to be the centre of this all-Canadian contest this year, and the various entrants will appear on the boards of the Royal Alexandra theatre during the week of April 4th. His Excellency will be present with his suite, and the social as well as artistic prominence of the event has already drawn to it a big share of active interest.

In almost every class the entries far surpass the lists of last year. Though Toronto is heavily represented in the dramatic companies, yet Montreal, Ottawa, Peterborough and London are out for the trophies with strong musical and dramatic societies, which promise to give this city a tussle for championships.

In the absence of Sir John Hare, the distinguished English actor, who was to have presided as dramatic judge, a board of three Canadians has been appointed: Bernard K. Sandwell, of Montreal, Hector Charlesworth, of Toronto, and Ernest Beaufort, of Winnipeg. The musical judges will be: Vocal, Dr. Vogt and Dr. Albert Ham; piano and quartettes, Messrs. Frank Welsman, and W. O. Forsyth, all of Toronto. The eminent composer, Mr. Howard Brockway, presides as judge of the musical compositions. The interest in the contests is shown by applications from Quebec and Winnipeg. No less than 74 soloists have entered for the individual medals.

PURITANISM IN POLITICS.

Mr. Houghton Lennox, of South Simcoe, the sound of whose voice must be familiar to himself by this time, is the mentor of the House on every subject, being described by Mr. Ruttan, of Prince Albert as the "watch dog of the Commons." Heretofore, Mr. Lennox has confined his activities to secular matters, but yesterday (Monday) he scented a breach of the Blue Laws. He read a two column despatch from Albany relating to the tariff negotiations, between Hon. Mr. Fielding and President Taft and sternly inquired whether there was a conference between the President of the United States and our Finance Minister in Albany yesterday, (Sunday); and if it was the invitation of the President which was accepted for a Sunday conference? Hon. Mr. Fielding replied that at the invitation of the President of the United States, "I visited Albany and had the honour and pleasure of meeting that gentleman on both Saturday and Sunday. We discussed matters which I trust will work for the peace order and good government of these two nations. There could be no better Sunday work." The applause which greeted the expression of this sentiment, from the government side of the house was conspicuously joined in by Dr. Christopher and Hon. John Haggart, of the Opposition, showing that Mr. Lennox's narrow gauge attempt to make capital for his party, was not sympathized with by his fellow Conservatives. His action was only a type of tactics which distinguish the Opposition. Failing legitimate ground of attack of the government policy small matters are exploited to the fullest value and lack of value.

CHANGED RELATIONS.

Without, at all desiring to speak unkindly or to insinuate that, in the tariff tension of the past few days, the United States has shown a disposition to "back down," it may be suggested that President Taft has taken on an attitude becoming the ruler of a great nation, and has put an end to the attitude of indifference, not to say contempt of Canada, which has too long been characteristic of the United States powers that be. Times have greatly changed within the past dozen or so years. It was not long ago that Canada in her simplicity, and modesty was making pilgrimages to Washington. Her overtures for better trade relations were treated with such cavalier hostility or indifference, that her self respect rebelled. She followed the spirit of the scriptural injunction, "Ephraim is joined to his idols, leave him alone." And Canada let the United States alone. Some ten years ago Sir Wilfrid Laurier took the stand, that if there were to be any more negotiations in regard to improvement or adjustment of trade relations between the two countries, the initiative must come from the United States. That attitude which was not assumed with any offensive intention or in any spirit of bravado, has been maintained. A new situation was created when a few days ago the United States sent two ambassadors to Ottawa, who carried back the report, that Canada would not consent to concession, unattended with an equivalent, to escape the application of the maximum tariff; would consent to no impairment of her fiscal independence. Canada did not shrink from the menace of the brandished "big stick." Canada maintained a position of dignified reserve. The next step in reversal of the old order was the invitation of President Taft, to Hon. Mr. iFelding, Canada's Finance Minister, to meet him at Albany to discuss the situation. The situation was talked over and though we do not know what progress was made, we have the assurance that, though no conclusion was arrived at, the situation remains one of "friendly negotiations." That much is a decided gain. Besides the conjunction of Earl Grey, President Taft and Mr. Fielding at Albany, and the cordial exchange of amenities have done much to increase international amity and to improve the prospect that during the ten days between now and March 31st, "friendly negotiations" may do much and that "peace with honour" may be the end of the threatened tariff war. Both Earl Grey as representing Canada, and President Taft as representing the United States, have committed themselves to a policy of peace and international amity that canont hereafter, be gracefully ignored.

The mesage which President Taft sent to Canadians, through Mr. J. A. Macdonald, editor of The Globe, who was also at Albany on Saturday and Sunday and to whom the rapprochement between Mr. Taft and Mr. Fielding is credited, has a spirit of largeness in keeping with his generous physical proportions. He said:

"Say to the people of Canada that my most sincere desire is that not only this present unforeseen difficulty arising out of our new tariff law, but all other difficulties between these two nations, shall be settled with justice to both countries and in the spirit of friendship and generosity.

"Assure them that if it were only a matter of business and not of interpreting a statute, I would have had no trouble in at once proclaiming Canada as having a right to our minimum tariff. I have seen too much of the Canadian people, I have too high an appreciation of Canada's worth, and I am too profoundly in sympathy with Canada's aspirations as a part of the British Empire for me to haggle over mere advantages or disadvantages of international trade.

"My whole difficulty has been with the interpretation of a statute of Congress, which never before was interpreted. After my conference with Hon. Mr. Fielding I am hopeful of finding a solution which will have regard for my judicial responsibilities as President of the United States, and I will also serve the trade interests of both countries.

"And please assure the people of Canada that it is my deliberate purpose to promote in such ways as are open to me better trade relations between the United States and Canada than at present exist. I am profoundly convinced that these two countries touching each other for more than three thousand miles, have common interests in trade and require special arrangements in legislation and administration which are not involved in the relations of the United States with countries beoynd the seas. We may not always have recognized that in the past, but that must be our viewpoint in the future. Say that for me to the people of Canada with all the earnestness and sincerity of my heart."

What President Taft says places the attitude and relations of Canada and the United States in a new light. The social and diplomatic amenities exchanged promise much for trade peace and the promise is not weakened, when the two potentates agree to employ the arbitrament of the golf links to the strengthening of the ties of the banquet board and the toast list.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Irresponsible government—autocratic rich is vanishing in Germany. The German Reichstag has decided that the Imperial Chancellor is to be responsible to the elective chamber for his official acts. The chancellor is the scapegoat of the Emperor, responsible for his acts. The new decision means that the Emperor is to be held responsible to the elective chamber. This seems to be the beginning of responsible government and the Germans are, in a way, to become a free people.

King Edward's condition of health is a matter of solicitude, not only to his millions of subjects, but to Europe and the world at large. His work as the arch pacificator of the century, has been too important to permit of regarding with indifference the withdrawal of his influences. "Send him victorious long to reign o'er us; God Save the King." King Edward VII. will go down in history, not as the monarch who has gained most battles, but the monarch who has balked most battles.

THE HOME PHYSICIAN

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cure Most of the Family's Ills.

The Little Boy is Mother's Stand-by.

Perhaps if the children, and the "grown-ups" too, always ate exactly the right quantities of exactly the right things, at just the proper times, and in every other way obeyed the rules of health, there would be no sickness in the family, and no need of medicine.

But they never have and probably never will, so in every family there are sure to be more or less frequent attacks of sick headache, biliousness, indigestion, constipation, and kidney and liver troubles, and occasionally some one is "sick in bed".

It is worth a good deal to the mother, then, to have on hand that perfectly safe and reliable remedy for these ills —

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

They invigorate those organs which cleanse the body of waste and impurities, regulating the bowels, stimulating the kidneys and opening the pores of the skin.

Thus Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure the common ailments and keep the family healthy. This they have been doing for over half a century in every part of the world.

TARIFF, CAUSES AND EFFECTS.

The New York Herald has the following paragraphic summary of the effects of the imposition of the maximum tariff by the United States:

Application of Canadian surtax to American imports will cause:

British goods to enter Canada at two-thirds less duty than American.

German goods to enter at one-third less than American.

From $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 of trade now held by Americans to be sacrificed to English and Germans.

Canada to turn to British reform.

Prohibition of Canadian exports will:

Deprive American paper mills of Canadian pulpwood supply.

Deprive American iron and steel industry of Canadian nickel ore.

Application of American maximum to Canadian imports will:

Halt $42,000,000 of Canadian dutiable imports.

Increase the price of lumber in the United States.

Ruin or embarrass many American lumber firms who have bought timber on account in Canada.

Throw lumber trade of United States now held by Canada to Russia, Norway and others.

TAFT ON CANADA.

President Taft said, in part: "I said this meeting had grown, it has grown, and grown in importance to me, because I was able, by reason of coming here, to invite the Minister of Finance and Sir Wilfrid Laurier to meet us here in order that we might, with all the authorities of Canada, discuss the question that is now on, to see if we could not reach some way by which we should not create a tariff war between the two countries. It has been my good fortune for upwards of sixteen years each summer to go to Canada to breath in the champagne-like atmosphere of the Lower St. Lawrence, at Murray Bay, and I have become acquainted in a more or less intimate way with that great country and that great people that lie to the north of us. We have been looking to the larger countries and have not been paying attention to the smaller countries, which are making wonderful strides, and it is time we realized what the potentiality of the Dominion of Canada and her people is. With three thousand miles of border between us, we must study to avoid conflict in trade or otherwise, and we must be as close friends as possible for the mutual benefit of both countries. Now, I do not say this just because I am entering into negotiation, though I hope it will help. I appeal to Governor Hughes if I did not say it when we were making that all-star combination tour of Lake Champlain. With Canada growing rapidly, they are most prosperous, and it is to our great advantage to be just to them as it is to their great advantage to be just to us."

PURITANS AND RECREATION.

The St. John (N.B.) Sun says:

Lord Macaulay said that the Puritans hated bear-baiting not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectators. Whether this correctly states the reason for their opposition or not, there is no doubt but they vigorously persecuted and condemned all amusements as sins against the soul. Here and there to-day we hear echoes of their ancient quarrel. In the announced subjects and extracts from the addresses delivered by some evangelists it is evident that they have not reached a sane and defensible method of dealing with the subject. As yet the church has nothing consistent to say to youth. Its appeals are in the main uncritical and without authority; and these appeals become grotesque when based upon the authority of some ancient Hebrew who faced remote and different problems.

While nothing but an emasculated persecution of popular amusements need be expected to-day from any quarter, yet it is evident that religious reformers have not worked their way through to clear thought and just discriminations on the subject. They see the vice of the theatre and the possibility of evil in cards. They dread the stage, and the green room, but it is clear that church rules and social standards are in a state of confusion, full of contradictions and weakness. Prof. McGill, who knows more about such social and religious problems than any other man in Canada, perhaps, said in a city a day or two ago: "You can't preach Puritanism to-day, it is sheer tommyrot to attempt to do so. Amusements are necessary and had been felt to be so from the first. The man who works hard all day requires to spend his evenings in recreation, and if he can't find his amusement clean he will take it dirty." What is true for the toiler is still more true for the women in the homes and the men in office and store.

To say that recreation is a necessary part of our activities is but to realize that the influence of religion does not issue in asceticism but in abundant life. Piety does not remove the desire for recreation of for pictures or for song. Prayer is not a substitute for out door exercise or for afternoon bridge. Healthy religion flows into all the interests of existence and sanctifies them. Among the means towards a higher civilization the cultivation of wise amusements is a principal one. The evils in our life are great and increasing, but they do not lie altogether in the multiplication of pleasures. There is no doubt but a great many men and women who grossly mismanage their pleasures, and the amount of amusement expected by all classes has greatly increased in our generation. But the man who realizes the pathos of human life and the variety of tastes and temptations, and characters, will hesitate much before attempting to abridge the sum of human enjoyment; and will look with indulgent eye upon pleasures which are neither cultivated nor refined, provided they are not vicious. How not to be bored is the object of all our civilization. What is really to be deplored is not play and pleasure, but the ever-increasing expenditure on things which add nothing to human enjoyment. Extravagance and barbarous ostentation when placed in contrast with the misery which is near it are preparing great catastrophes for the future, and are full of menace to religion and to any human joy. Denunciation without discrimination overshoots the mark. More harangues about "amusements" react upon the speaker and rob him of moral influence. Is it not time to attempt some positive constructive work in place of casting out demons? We excuse the things we are inclined to by damning those we have no mind to. The first duty in the premises is not to condemn or to praise, but to try to understand things, but we will not let them bully us. Lamb preached better sermons asking 'What are trumps?' as he played cards with his father than Coleridge asking: "What is truth." If we assume merely a negative attitude and are repressive and prohibitive in our methods, we shall appear to many to be the enemies to joy and health. No doubt a lot of interest will be taken out of the life of the evangelist and reformer when the last drunkard has signed the pledge and the last sinner is converted, but then the constructive work of religion is merely beginning. Deep below the conscious and reflective thought there seethe and ferment the dim aspirations, the unspoken cravings of the growing soul of man. The common and uncommon people will hear gladly the leader who will put into speech the meanings of these longings. They will not follow until leaders grow human as well as pious, and until they realize that the world is large and round and see all its play of force and folly.

WANTS HER LETTER PUBLISHED

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Ills

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me. I grew stronger, and within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOHN G. MOLDAN, 2115 Second St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 20 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate—write at once.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON,
Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

mat had been set apart for smokers, threw himself into a chair, lighted a cigar and stared at a picture that had no interest for him whatever. He put down his cigar after a few whiffs, and his hand went to the pocket in which he had usually carried his cigarette case.

"Ah, Mr. Armitage, may I offer you a cigarette?"

He turned to find Chauvenet close at his side. He had not heard the man enter, but Chauvenet had been in his thoughts, and he started slightly at finding him so near. Chauvenet held in his white gloved hand a gold cigarette case, which he opened with a deliberate care that displayed its embellished side. The smooth golden surface gleamed in the light, the helmet in blue and the white falcon flashed in Armitage's eyes. The meeting was cleverly by intention, and a slight smile played about Chauvenet's lips in his enjoyment of the situation. Armitage smiled up at him in suitable acknowledgment of his courtesy and rose.

"You are very considerate, monsieur. I was just at the moment regretting our distinguished host's oversight in providing cigars alone. Allow me!"

He bent forward, took the outstretched open case into his own hands, removed a cigarette, snapped the case shut and thrust it into his trousers pocket—all, as it seemed, at a single stroke.

"My dear sir," began Chauvenet, white with rage.

"My dear M. Chauvenet," said Armitage, striking a match, "I am indebted to you for returning a trinket that I value highly."

The flame crept half the length of the stick while they regarded each other. Then Armitage raised it to the tip if his cigarette, lifted his head and blew a cloud of smoke.

"Are you able to prove your property, Mr. Armitage?" demanded Chauvenet furiously.

"My dear sir, they have a saying in this country that possession is nine points of the law. You had it—now I have it—wherefore it must be mine!"

"Between gentlemen—so small a matter!"

"To be sure, the merest trifle," laughed Armitage with entire good humor.

"And where a gentleman has the predatory habits of a burglar and housebreaker"—

"Then lesser affairs, such as picking up trinkets"—

"Come naturally; quite so!" And Chauvenet twisted his mustache with an air of immense satisfaction.

"But the genial art of assassination—there's a business that requires a calculating hand, my dear M. Chauvenet."

Chauvenet's hand went again to his lip.

"To be sure!" he ejaculated, with zest.

"But alone—alone one can do little. For larger operations one requires, I should say, courageous associates. Now, in my affairs, would you believe me, I am obliged to manage quite alone."

"How melancholy!" exclaimed Chauvenet.

"It is, indeed, very sad!" and Armitage sighed, tossed his cigarette into the smoldering grate and bade Chauvenet a ceremonious good night.

"Ah, we shall meet again, I dare say!"

"The thought does credit to a generous nature," responded Armitage and passed out into the house.

Chapter IX

"THIS IS AMERICA, MR. ARMITAGE."

SPRING, planting green and gold banners on old Virginia battlefields, crossed the Potomac and occupied Washington.

Shirley Claiborne called for her horse and rode forth to greet the conqueror. The afternoon was keen and sunny, and she had turned impatiently from a tea to which she was committed to seek the open. The call of the outdoor gods sang in her blood. Daffodils and crocuses lifted yellow flames and ruddy torches from every dooryard. She had pinned a spray of arbutus to the lapel of her tan riding coat. It spoke to her of the blue horizons of the Virginia hills. The young buds in the maples hovered like a mist in the treetops. Towering over all, the incomparable gray obelisk climbed to the blue arch and brought it nearer earth. Washington, the center of man's hope, is also in spring the capital of the land of heart's desire.

With a groom trailing after her, Shirley rode toward Rock creek—that rippling, murmuring, singing trifle of water that laughs day and night at the margin of the beautiful city, as though politics and statesmanship were the hugest joke in the world. The flag on the Austro-Hungarian embassy hung at half mast and symbols of mourning fluttered from the entire front of the house. Shirley lifted her eyes gravely as she passed. Her thoughts flew at once to the scene at the house of the secretary of state a week before, when Baron von Marhof had learned of the death of his sovereign, and by association she thought, too, of Armitage and of his look and voice as he said:

"Long live the emperor and king! God save Austria!"

Emperors and kings! They were as impossible today as a snowstorm. The grave ambassadors as they appeared at great Washington functions, wearing their decorations, always struck her as being particularly distinguished. It just now occurred to her that they were all linked to the crown and scepter, but she dismissed the whole matter and bowed to two dark ladies in a passing victoria with the quick little nod and bright smile that were the same for these titled members of the Spanish ambassador's household as for the young daughters of a western senator, who democratically waved their hands to her from a doorstep.

Armitage came again to her mind. He had called at the Claiborne house twice since the secretary's ball, and she had been surprised to find how fully she accepted him as an American now that he was on her own soil. He derived, too, a certain stability from the fact that the Sandersons knew him; he was, indeed, an entirely different person since the Montana senator definitely connected him with an American landscape. She had kept her own counsel touching the scene on the dark deck of the King Edward, but it was not a thing lightly to be forgotten. She was half angry with herself this mellow afternoon to find how persistently Armitage came into her thoughts and how the knife thrust on the steamer deck kept recurring in her mind and quickening her sympathy for a man of whom she knew so little, and she touched her horse impatiently with the crop and rode into the park at a gait that roused the groom to attention.

At a bend of the road Chauvenet and Franzel, the attache, swung into view, mounted, and as they met Chauvenet turned his horse and rode beside her.

"Ah, these American airs! This spring! Is it not good to be alive, Miss Claiborne?"

"It is all of that!" she replied. It seemed to her that the day had not needed Chauvenet's praise.

"I had hoped to see you later at the Wallingford tea," he continued.

"No teas for me on a day like this! The thought of being indoors is tragic."

She wished that he would leave her, for she had ridden out into the spring sunshine to be alone. He somehow did not appear to advantage in his riding coat—his belongings were too perfect. She had really enjoyed his talk when they had met here and there abroad, but she was in no mood for him now, and she wondered what he had lost by the transfer to America. He ran on airily in French, speaking of the rush of great and small social affairs that marked the end of the season.

"Poor Franzel is indeed triste. He is taking the death of Johann Wilhelm quite hard. But here in America the death of an emperor seems less important. A king or a peasant, what does it matter?"

"Better ask the robin in yonder budding chestnut tree, monsieur. This is not an hour for hard questions!"

"Ah, you are very cruel! You drive me back to poor, melancholy Franzel, who is indeed a funeral in himself."

"That is very sad, monsieur," and she smiled at him with mischief in her eyes. "My heart goes out to any one who is left to mourn—alone."

He gathered his reins and drew up his horse, lifting his hat with a perfect [illegible] "There are sadder blows than losing one's sovereign, mademoiselle!" and he shook his bared head mournfully and rode back to find his friend.

She sought now her favorite bridle paths, and her heart was light with the sweetness and peace of the spring as she heard the rush and splash of the creek, saw the flash of wings and felt the mystery of awakened life throbbing about her. The heart of a girl in spring is the home of dreams, and Shirley's heart overflowed with them until her pulse thrilled and sang in quickening cadences.

Any person in Ontario may choose any ONE of the experiments for 1910 and apply for the same. The material will be furnished in the order in which the applications are received while the supply lasts. It might be well for each applicant to make a second choice, for fear the first could not be granted. All material will be furnished entirely free of charge to each applicant, and the produce will, of course, become the property of the person who conducts the experiment.

Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, March, 1910.

MANY POSITIONS BUT FEW APPLICANTS

Immigration Officer Mr. G. H. Howson could furnish one hundred and fifty men and fifty women with positions, if the right kind of men and women were available. He received word on Saturday, that a party of thirty, including nine young women, were sailing from Liverpool, around about the twentieth of this month. Every Saturday numerous applications are made to Mr. Howson for farm labourers. Mr. Howson, in his letters to the booking agencies, has pointed out that only those who are willing to work on farms need come to Canada. Farming furnishes the best openings for young men and unless they are willing to work hard and accustom themselves to conditions it is useless for them to come. A number of the young men and women in England, whose applications have been received by Mr. Howson, have sent their photographs along, too. They are bright and intelligent looking people, and ought to make good in this country.

RING WORM AND DANDRUFF.

They are Each Caused by a Pestiferous Germ.

Ring worm and dandruff are somewhat similar in their origin; each is caused by a parasite. The germ that causes dandruff digs to the root of the hair, and, finally baldness. Without dandruff there would never be baldness, and to cure dandruff it is necessary to kill the germ. There has been no hair preparation that would do this until the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide, which positively kills the dandruff germ, always itching instantly and makes hair glossy and soft as silk. Take no substitutes. There is nothing "just as good." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

GARRISON ATHLETIC HELD A MEETING

A meeting of the Garrison Athletic Association was held at the armouries on Saturday night, when a spring schedule for indoor baseball was drawn up. A schedule for the Officers' Bowling League was also drawn and garrison athletics were enthusiastically discussed. Indoor baseball teams intending entering the league are asked to leave their names with Lieut. Higgins before Thursday, when the schedule will be arranged.

LITERARY EVENING

Knox Young People's Society Had an Enjoyable Programme.

The literary evening of Knox church Young People's Guild, took place last night, Mr. Roy Laing being in the chair. A lectude on Alfred Tennyson and his work and characteristics was given by Mrs. H. J. Keith.

Tennyson was a deeply religious man, some criters even compared him to Milton Arthur Hallam, who was a dear friend of Tennyson's, also Vandike, a personal friend. Mrs. Keith read the poem "Crossing the Bar." Idylls to the King was mostly touched upon, when snatches were read here and there to show the beauty and splendour of the poet's words. To read the "Princess," this was touched by nature, in a beautiful manner by this modern poet.

The chairman thanked Mrs. Keith, on behalf of the committee, for the excellent address. Next Monday, March 28th, Mrs. W. A. Porter attends to a social night.

DEPUTATION WAITS ON COUNCIL IN REGARD TO NEW HOME FOR POOR

Committee From the Council Appointed to Confer With the Protestant Home Board—New Home for Protestant Poor is Required.

STEPS SUGGESTED

A special committee was appointed by the Council, at a meeting of the committee of the whole last evening, to confer with the Protestant Home Board, with regard to the building of a suitable House of Refuge for the care of the Protestant poor of this city. Every member of the council was present, with Mayor Morrow in the chair. A deputation, consisting of Rev. Father McColl, Rev. H. J. Keith, Rev. Canon Davidson, and Mr. J. B. McWilliams addressed the council in regard to the matter, pointing out what in their minds seemed to be the best plan to pursue.

Rev. Mr. Keith, in his remarks, stated that at a previous meeting the request had been made to submit a by-law to the people, as to the building of a House of Refuge. He believed the city should either take the responsibility of building a home and tax the Protestant people for it, allowing the Roman Catholic community to have their House of Providence free of taxes, or as an alternative let the Protestants get together, as the Catholics have done and build a home of their own and then share equally with the Catholics the grant from the city.

Mr. J. B. McWilliams was the next speaker. He said there were two courses, either one of which could be followed to advantage. One was for the city to build a House of Refuge for both Protestant and Catholics. Dr. Bruce Smith had informed him that such an institution, accommodating from fifty to sixty people could be built for about $18,000. The Government would give seven cents per day for each inmate. The course was to have the House of Providence and the Protestant Home separately, and have the tax rate on the same basis as the schools. Government legislation, of course, would be necessary for this last step.

Rev. Father McColl stated that he was opposed to the building of a House of Refuge and taxing the whole city. Speaking for the church he represented he said that his people had gone to a great deal of expense in the erection of a home for their poor. He thought the system of dividing the taxes similar to schools was a fair and equitable one. He was sure the government would give the legislation. Father McColl instanced several places where cities gave grants to their houses for the poor. He believed that the difficulty could be solved most satisfactorily to everyone by following the second course outlined by Mr. McWilliams. In any event the poor of the Catholic faith would go to the House of Providence.

Canon Davidson pointed out that no great sum of money would be required to build a home. The present Protestant Home would do for the aged women and a new one would be for the men, of whom there were not many.

After a little discussion by the Council, it was moved by Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Turner, that Ald. Bradburn, Hicks, Buller and the Mayor be a committee to meet the Protestant Home Board to discuss the matter.

FROM PRESIDENT

Enterprise of the Publishers of the Jewish Daily News is Appreciated.

A number of local citizens of Jewish extraction have received a copy of the Silver Jubilee number of the "Yidisches Tageblatt," of the Jewish Daily News, published in New York, and the number is full of interesting things. There are no less than 112 pages, the edition being a most ambitious one and a credit to the publishers. Not the least interesting feature of its contents is the following very complimentary letter from President Taft of the United States:

White House, March 2, 1910.

Gentlemen,—I congratulate you on celebrating your silver anniversary. Your constituency is an intelligent, hard-working, patriotic body of men, who appreciate the opportunities of free government, education at public expense, and equal opportunity. In general they are excellent citizens and justify our policy of hospitality to desirable immigrants.

Sincerely yours,
WILLIAM H. TAFT.

MAKE THE BLOOD RICH AND RED

Miss Cynthia Hutchinson, Hanceville, B. C., writes: "My system was so completely run down that my friends as well as myself thought I could never get better. All medicines failed to help me. A trial of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food benefitted me and at the end of a month people scarcely knew me I had improved so much. The blood was enriched, colour improved, new flesh was added, and I got strong and well."

NEW CLERK FOR MARKET

Only Two Men Tendered for the Market Tolls for the Next Year —Mr. Walter Fisher's Tender of $855 Accepted—Property Committee Met.

BAND WANT HALL

The tender of Mr. Walter Fisher, 493 Water street, of $855 for the market scales for the year 1910-11, was accepted, at a special meeting of the Property Committee yesterday afternoon. There were present Ald. Duncan, (chairman), Bradburn, Batten, Morgan, and Mayor Morrow. Only two persons tendered for the scales, the other gentleman being Daniel McMillan, 569 Bolivar street. The amount of his tender was $650. Mr. George Ball, the present market clerk, did not put in a tender.

The chairman pointed out that last year the market receipts had been $1,315.65, and the cost had amounted to $860.81. The city, he said, was saving considerably by accepting Mr. Fisher's offer. It was moved by Ald. Morgan, and seconded by Ald. Bradburn, that the tender of Mr. Fisher be accepted.

The motion carried.

A Band Deputation.

Messrs. Harper and Mein, of the local band, waited on the committee, and asked that the old hall with the adjoining rooms be given back to the band, since it had been necessary for them to vacate their quarters in the armouries. Mr. Harper explained that owing to a disagreement between the officers of the regiment and the band as to the possession of the instruments, the band had left, taking everything with them. They wanted to get their old hall back, and they would not return to the armouries, no matter what arrangement was reached with the regiment.

It was moved by Ald. Morgan and seconded by Ald. Batten that the city trust commission be asked to approve of the request of the band.

CATARRH CURED

To get an antiseptic strong enough to kill catarrh germs and not destroy the tissues of the membrane at the same time, has been a problem which was never solved until the discovery of Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me).

Hyomei is prepared from eucalyptus, the most powerful yet healing antiseptic known. Breathe it through the inhaler over the inflamed and germ-ridden membrane four or five times a day, and in a few days the germs will disappear.

The inflamed condition will go, too, and the snuffing, hawking and offensive breath, and the discharge of mucous and crusts in the nose will cease.

Then why should any catarrh sufferer hesitate, when Wm. Madill has such faith in Hyomei that he offers to return your money if if after a fair trial Hyomei does not cure catarrh.

A complete Hyomei outfit, including the inhaler, costs $1.00, and extra bottles, if afterwards needed, cost but 50 cents. Hyomei also cures asthma, croup, sore throat, coughs, colds or grip.

MI-O-NA Cures Dyspepsia.

Your money back if it don't. Gives immediate relief from heartburn, sour stomach, stomach distress and sick headache. 50 cents a large box at —Wm. Madill's.

HAVE SECURED THE LOAN OF VALUABLE METEORITE

The Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society, has been fortunate in securing from the Victoria Museum in Toronto the loan of the famous meteorite, known as the "Victoria Meteorite," which will be on exhibition at the next meeting of the centre to be held a week from to-night in the Collegiate Institute. The meteorite weighs no less than 253 pounds, and is valued at $5,000. It is ninety per cent. iron and will be well worth seeing. The meteorite has an interesting history. Just when it fell is a matter of conjecture, but it is known that it was in possession of the Indians of the Northwest for a long period and was worshipped by them as something supernatural. Rev. Mr. McDougall, Northwest missionary, came across the iron stone during his work in the West, and through his efforts it was sent to the Museum in Toronto, although the Indians were very reluctant to give it up. There will be no meeting of the Society to-night, the gathering called for this evening having been postponed owing to the negotiations for the use of the meteorite.

BARN STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

On Sunday night, during the electrical storm that visited some parts of the county, the barn of Mr. Dennis McMahon, in Douro, was struck by lightning, but was not destroyed by fire. The lightning struck the southeast corner of the building, and ran to the ground, knocking out the gable end, but otherwise doing no great damage. The amount of loss is not heavy.

SETTLEMENT IS REACHED

City to Pay Mr. Henry Best $700 for Cutting Through His Property When Making the Extension of Aylmer Street.

WILL ACCEPT IT

It was decided at last night's meeting of the Council to pay Mr. Henry Best the sum of $700 as settlement of his claim against the city for cutting through his property at the time the extension of Aylmer street was made. Mr. Best claimed $800, but Ald. Buller stated that he understood that he would now accept $700. It was therefore moved by Ald. Buller, and seconded by Ald. Duncan that the above amount be paid to Mr. Best. Ald. Buller was instructed to make the settlement.

WILL BE READY FOR LAUNCHING

Stoney Lake Navigation Company's New Steamer Will be Finished in a Few Weeks.

The new passenger steamer being built at Young's Point by the Stoney Lake Navigation Co. will be ready for launching in the course of three or four weeks. Messrs. George and Fred. Hickey, Ashburnham, are carrying out the work. It will be a modern and up-to-date steamer, and will accommodate comfortably two hundred people. The popularity of the Stony Lake summer resorts has become so great within the last few years that additional transportation facilities had to be supplied to handle the ever-increasing traffic. The company has not yet decided on a name for the new steamer.

The Chauffeur's Moral Code.

(1) I will not overload or overspeed my vehicle, because this will be harmful to the mechanism and tires. I realize that a good tire has a certain amount of "life," and if persistently overworked it cannot recover.

(2) I will always keep the brakes working evenly, and the axles and wheels "trued up." I can thereby save rack and wear on my vehicle, and prevent unnecessary strain on any one of the tires.

(3) I will not allow oil or grease to accumulate on any of my rubber tires, as this will eventually cause decay.

(4) I will never expose my tires to burning heat, as the wear-resisting properties of the rubber would be thus destroyed.

(5) I will always remember to start my vehicle in a straight line before turning the steering wheel, because by turning front wheels when the vehicle is standing still, a heavy and unnecessary strain would be placed upon the tires.

(6) As merely resetting or repairing a tire will in many cases double its life, I will have my tires attended to promptly when damaged, in order to secure the greatest amount of service from them.—Motoring.

LOOK OUT FOR PNEUMONIA

Your system is in a run-down condition. You catch cold. You think it will soon pass off. It doesn't. You neglect taking any special care of yourself. Bronchitis develops and then comes pneumonia and a fight for life. A fight which is too often unsuccessful. Why not take every cold seriously and cure it promptly by using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

SLIDES ARE SOLD

Those Used by Impersonator Made in Munich, Germany, 250 Years Ago.

The large audience that witnessed Mons. Jean Beaugere's clever impersonation acts at the Princess last night little suspected the antiquity of the glass in the slides giving the colour effects in his skirt dance. Some years ago when Mons. Beaugere was in Ghent, Belgium, he noticed an ancient church being torn down. The glass in the windows naturally attracted this artist's attention, and he purchased one of the windows. The glass in this, of which his colour effect slides are made was made in Munich, Germany, 250 years ago. The science of making this kind of coloured glass is now one of the lost arts. The colour effects attained by this antique glass would be impossible with glass of modern manufacture.

LEAVING Y. M. C. A.

Mr. F. A. Hassard is to Become Advertising Manager of Farm and Dairy.

Mr. F. G. Hassard, who has for some time been general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of this city, has severed his connection with that institution to become advertising manager of Farm and Dairy, succeeding Mr. Myers, who has accepted a position on the staff of the Toronto Saturday Night. Through the kindness of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Hassard is enjoying a couple of weeks of rest before assuming his new position. He will be greatly missed not only by the directors but by the members of the Y. M. C. A. as well.

GOING TO WEST

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Sawle Leave Peterborough To-morrow for Prince Rupert.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Sawle leave Peterborough on the C. P. R. train to-morrow morning for their new home in Prince Rupert, British Columbia. They will spend the next ten days in Toronto and Welland, leaving on April 4th for Prince Rupert, where Mr. Sawle will assume the editorship of the Prince Rupert Optimist, which is published by the Prince Rupert Publishing Company, Limited, of which Mr. Sawle and his brother, Mr. G. R. T. Sawle, have the controlling interest. Mr. G. R. T. Sawle went out to Prince Rupert at the time of the sale of lots in May last year, and established the Optimist in July as a weekly. When Mr. C. H. Sawle arrives the paper will be converted into a daily and has excellent prospects. Both Mr. and Mrs. Sawle will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends in Peterborough, who will commingle with regret at their departure fervent wishes for their success in their far western home. Mrs. Sawle has been a resident of Peterborough for many years and is widely known in the city, while Mr. Sawle through his newspaper connection as city editor of the Review, and afterwards of the Morning Times, has made many friends for himself. His new enterprise should prove in every way successful as he has the energy and the ability to carry it through.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The boys of the Y.M.C.A. are vigorously pushing their membership campaign, having brought in some 25 members up to Saturday night. This week the Employed boys are working to equal the number secured by the School boys so as to be equally represented at the banquet on Easter Monday, at which the new members and those who introduced them will be the guests. A further big gain is expected this week.

Swimming lessons for non-swimmers and also advanced swimming will be taught in the Y. M. C. A. according to the following schedule:

Monday—Senior class 9-9.30 p.m.

Tuesday—Junior School class, 5-5.30 p.m. Employed boys 9-9.30 p.m.

Wednesday—Senior School class 5-5.30 p.m.

Thursday—Senior class, 9-9.30 p.m.

Friday—Junior School class, 7-8 p.m., Employed boys 8-9 p.m.

Saturday—Senior School, 11.30-12 a.m.

All members who wish to take advantage of these lessons should see the Physical Director at once.

Arrangements are being made to have the Toronto Central junior basketball team play a game in the Y. M.C.A. gymnasium on the evening of Easter Monday. The local basketball players are practising hard in preparation for the game, and feel that they will have a strong team to represent the local association.

Wednesday night of this week the first of a series of three games will be played between the Senior Employed boys and Senior School boys, to decide the Intermediate championship. The remaining games will be played during next week.

Don't fail to hear Herbert Booth' entrancing lecture on "The Early Christians" in St. Paul's Church on Wednesday evening it will be pictorially illutsrated by 200 life-model and 1,200 feet of animated pictures from dramatic Tableaux by 600 living models. Tickets 25c. Ladies are requested to remove their hats.

INTO NEW PREMISES

The Novel-Ti Company will shortly move into new and more convenient premises. The residence on Water street, opposite the Bank of Montreal, formerly occupied by the late Henry Owens, is being made into the manufactory and offices of the company.

The premises will have an attractive plate glass front, and the offices and wareroom and shipping room will be on the ground floor, and the manufactory on the second floor.

It is expected that the company will occupy its new building about the first of next month.

FRESH FRUIT AND FISH AT HARRY BRADSHAW'S

The best you ever tasted for Easter and every other day—the nicest you ever saw. Nothing more seasonable for the springtime table. As usual, Harry Bradshaw's fruit and fish store, is crammed full of the most toothsome and healthsome foods and relishes for early spring, that helps to give zest to fickle appetites. Such good things to eat as fresh fish of various kinds in splendid condition. Order carp for Thursday and Good Friday. Also, carefully selected foreign fruits, juicy seedless oranges, the finest from the favourite orange groves; pineapples, bananas, grape fruit, lemons, nuts, figs, dates, as well as lettuce, celery, onions, rhubarb, etc. Both phones, 271. COMMITTED FOR TRIAL ON CHARGE OF THEFT

Preliminary Examination of Larry Kelly, Accused of Stealing Lockets and Watches From the J. A. Knox Company of Toronto, Was Taken Before Police Magistrate Dumble Last Night.

Larry Kelly, who a few days ago was charged with having stolen 126 gold filled lockets and fourteen gold and silver watches, was committed for trial by Magistrate Dumble, last evening. The evidence of P. C. Newhall was the first taken, he testifying as follows:

"On March 2nd it was reported to me by the chief that lockets and watches were stolen from a traveller in the Oriental Hotel. I went into the Grand Hotel in company with P. C. Meagher about 1 o'clock in the morning on March 3rd. There I found the prisoner in bed in room 25. I questioned him about the affair at the Oriental Hotel. The prisoner replied, 'Couldn't be me. I was in Lakefield with other travellers and didn't get back till six o'clock. I thought I was late for supper, so I ran down here (Grand Hotel) and never went near the Oriental until 8 o'clock. I am a hard working man and had nothing to do with that at all."

P. C. Newhall stated that P. C. Meagher searched his room and he searched prisoner. P. C. Newhall said, "I searched his clothes but found no jewellery. The following Monday, March 7th, information from a pawn broker was received concerning a gold watch. The pawn broker gave the name of the man that he received it from, as Mr. James, of Lindsay. The description given to me by the pawn broker corresponded to that of the prisoner.

The following Saturday night I arrested the prisoner on George St. and brought him to the police station. The pawn broker was sent for and when he saw the prisoner he called by name saying, "How are you Mr. James of Lindsay." The prisoner replied, "You have made a mistake, I never saw you before? Prisoner stoutly denied ever pawning a watch. I put him back into the cell. On Wednesday last I went to Indian River, where I saw Geo. VanNorman, a companion of the prisoner. There I obtained a gold watch which the prisoner had given the boy. The watch obtained corresponded to the watch on the list, which was furnished by the traveller. I brought VanNorman back on the 4.38 train and from the C.P.R. station I went to Jackson Park with him. At Jackson Park we found the salt bag filled with 115 gold lockets and ten gold and silver watches. I put these articles in the custody of a certain person until this morning. This morning after the prisoner went down to his cell, I said to him, "I got your property in Jackson Park." Prisoner said, "I am not going to tell a lie in court. I am going to plead guilty, but not to stealing, for George gave me the key to get in with. I said to him how about that pawning business." This time he admitted that he pawned a watch but he was forced to do it.

Mr. Gordon cross-examined witness. "Was any one else present Mr. Newhall, when this man made the confession this morning?"

"No."

"Who was present when you went to Jackson Park?"

"George VanNorman."

"Did you go to Jackson Park the same day as you went to Indian River?"

"Yes."

"How long did you search, Mr. Newhall?"

"Possibly half an hour."

"Who found the goods first?"

"We both found them at the same time."

"Did the articles remain in your custody over night?"

"Yes."

Next witness, was the traveller, Mr. Michaelson, whose story was as follows:

"I put my trunks in sample room No. 1 of the Oriental Hotel. On Wednesday I had an engagement with Mr. Wasson. He kept me at the sample room till 6 o'clock. When he left I began to pack my gold trunk. At 6.30 I went to supper and on returning I found the door to the sample room open and the lockets and watches missing. I immediately telephoned Mr. Walker, the junior member of the firm, to come down from Toronto and bring his stock book. I notified the police and the chief constable came to the Oriental. I can identify the goods only by the marks on the tags.

Mr. Gordon asked witness several questions.

"When did you first see the prisoner?"

"I saw him on Sunday."

"Did you speak with the prisoner three or four times?"

"Yes, I did."

Arthur Walker, junior partner of the firm of J. A. Knox & Co., was the next witness examined.

The evidence given by Mr. Walker concerning the watches was similar to that of Mr. Michaelson.

Mr. Gordon asked witness could he swear that the watch pawned was one of the watches missing.

Witness said, "I cannot."

The pawn broker was the next witness and gave the same evidence concerning Mr. James as Constable Newhall said he did.

George VanNorman was the last witness examined. "I know the prisoner and have known him for at least two years. The prisoner told me that he was going to get some jewellery from a traveller. I met him near Head's hotel and gave him a key so that he might open the door. After prisoner obtained jewellery we put it in a salt bag and hid it near the G. T.R. railway track. I never saw it again until we took it from under a cedar tree in Jackson Park. Prisoner gave me a watch and told me he would divide the profits on the other goods, but I said I didn't wish for any of it. At Jackson Park I showed Mr. Newhall where the goods were.

Mr. Gordon cross examined the witness, asking the following questions.

"How many keys had you, VanNorman?"

"I had two, the one I gave him and another."

"Did you wait for him that night?"

"No."

"Did you keep the jewellery in your possession?"

"No, sir."

This concluded the evidence for the prosecution.

Mr. Gordon, lawyer for the defendant, asked for a few days, as he wished to consult the prisoner.

CURES BAD KIDNEYS AND ENDS BACKACHE

A Few Doses Will Clean and Regulate the Kidneys and Make You Feel Fine.

A real surprise awaits every sufferer from kidney or bladder trouble who takes several doses of Pape's Diuretic. Misery in the back, sides or loins, sick headache, nervousness, rheumatism, pains, heart palpitations, dizziness, sleeplessness, inflamed or swollen eyelids, lack of energy, and all symptoms of out-of-order kidneys simply vanish.

Uncontrollable urination (especially at night), smarting, offensive and discoloured water and other bladder misery ends.

The moment you suspect kidney or urinary disorder, or feel any rheumatism, begin taking this harmless medicine, with the knowledge that there is no other remedy, at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure as a fifty-cent treatment of Pape's Diuretic, which any druggist can supply.

It is needless to feel miserable and worried, because this unusual preparation goes at once to the out-of-order kidneys and urinary system, distributing its cleansing, healing and strengthening influence directly upon the organs and glands effected, and completes the cure before you realize it.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker, or any mercantile agency will tell you that Pape, Thompson & Pape, of Cincinnati, is a large and responsible medicine concern, thoroughly worthy of your confidence.

ARRESTED HERE

Sam Fredericks is Wanted by Campbellford Authorities.

Sam Fredericks was arrested yesterday by P. C. Newhall on suspicion that he was the man wanted in Campbellford to answer two charges, one of theft and the other contempt of court.

Chief Constable Lynn came to the city yesterday and brought Fredericks back with him to answer the charges.

Another man was arrested this morning on a charge of being involved in the stealing of the jewellery from the Oriental sample room.

He pleaded guilty and was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

THE OUTLOOK IS GOOD

Hon. Mr. Fielding, Home From His Conference With President Taft, Will Make No Statement Yet, But Tone of His Remarks Leaves It to Be Understood That Agreement Will Be Reached.

Ottawa, March 22.—Hon. Mr. Fielding brought back with him from Albany yesterday no announcement as to the details of his conference with President Taft on the tariff question beyond a repetition of the statement that the whole question is still one of "friendly negotiations." It is learned, however, from sources in close touch with the situation, that behind the passing clouds of threatening tariff war there is already visible a clear sky, promising better trade relations between Canada and the United States than have obtained for over a quarter of a century past. Instead of mutually disastrous tariff reprisals there are now growing indications of a coming reciprocity in trade between the two neighboring countries in which there may be a mutual lowering of the tariff barriers to the exchange of the products which each country needs, and which will convert a situation ominous with injury to mutual trade interests and to neighborly good feeling into a situation from which each country will derive profit, and which will insure harmony for years to come.

Hon. Mr. Fielding stated to-day that by agreement with President Taft, pending some definite conclusion of the negotiations now under way, all the details as to the proposed solution of the difficulty must be regarded as confidential, and that an announcement could not be expected for some days yet.

While the danger of a tariff war after March 31st is not yet avoided, it can be stated definitely that the outlook in Government circles here is now regarded as distinctly hopeful.

President Taft's message to the Canadian people, in which he makes the statement that he will endeavor to promote "in such ways as are open to me better trade relations between the United States and Canada than at present exist," is held to be tantamount to a promise that he will urge upon Congress a special law giving Canada freer access in the American markets for her natural products, such as farm and dairy exports, cattle, lumber, etc., for which this country unsuccessfully contended in the reciprocity negotiations of 1874, 1888 and 1897. His message was the most conciliatory and friendly official statement from Washington in the matter of trade relations which has been received for many years, and practically marks a turning point in the relations which for years past have been decidedly strained.

A reciprocal trade arrangement between the two countries cannot, of course, be made offhand. It will probably take weeks or perhaps months of negotiations. But the way has been paved. The discussion of the past few weeks on both sides of the line as to the evils which would result from a tariff war has served to emphasize some of the anomalies of the present situation in regard to the restriction of the natural courses of trade between the countries. The handicap of education has had a good effect.

Two references in regard to the tariff negotiations between Hon. W. S. Fielding and President Taft at Albany, N.Y., were made in the Commons yesterday afternoon.

One of those references was the voice of a Sunday observer, for Hamilton Lennox (South Simcoe) asked the Finance Minister if the invitations of President Taft, which was accepted by the Government, was for a Sunday conference at Albany.

Said Mr. Fielding: At the invitation of the President of the United States, I visited Albany, and had the honor and the pleasure of meeting that gentleman on both Saturday and Sunday. We discussed matters which, I trust, will work for the peace, order and good government of these two nations. There could be no better Sunday work.

Dr. Sproule (East Grey) enquired if Mr. Fielding had any information to give as to the negotiations with Mr Taft over tariff matters.

Mr. Fielding: I can only say to my hon. friends that I do not think that the good purpose that he has in view, and that we all must have in view, would be advanced by making any statement at the present time.

"The matters in dispute remain as matters for friendly negotiation, and beyond that it would not be expedient to make a statement at this moment.

"At an early date I hope to give the House fuller and better information."

A strong impression prevails amongst the members of Parliament here that matters are shaping themselves towards a reciprocity treaty between Canada and the United States.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured His Lumbago and Sciatica.

That was Three Years Ago and He is Still Cured—Why You Should Try Dodd's Kidney Pills First.

Elliston, Trinity Bay, Nfld., March 21.—(Special) — That Dodd's Kidney Pills not only relieve Sciatica and Lumbago, but cure it once and for all, is the experience of Mr. Alfred Crew, postmaster here.

"Yes," the postmaster says in telling his story, "it is three years since I was cured of Lumbago and Sciatica. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it, and I am happy to say the cure was permanent.

"I had pains in my back, cramps in my muscles, shooting pains across my loins, and I often found it hard to get any rest at night, and when I did my sleep was unrefreshing. I was medically attended, but without getting any benefit, and at last I was persuaded to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I used six boxes altogether and they took the pains away and quite cured me."

Nearly every cure by Dodd's Kidney Pills tells of trying something else first. If you use Dodd's Kidney Pills first you will never need to try "something else." They always cure all diseases of the Kidneys, and all diseases that are caused by sick Kidneys.

GALT FOLKS FLOODED.

River Grand Rises Seven Feet and Does Big Damage.

Galt, March 22.—The River Grand went on a rampage yesterday, rapidly and unexpectedly rising seven feet, washing over the retaining wall of the Knox and Central Church manses. The high water is causing much damage and discomfort. It is the highest for years, and only that the ice went with the first flood averts a most disastrous freshet. The cellars of the Turnbull Co., Cowan & Co., and the axe factory are flooded, and the factories shut down. The postoffice, Merchants' Bank, Sloan's grocery and the Imperial Hotel are also suffering seriously, and the Imperial bowling green is covered. Residents on the east side south of Water street, below Main, are seriously inconvenienced, the water extinguishing the furnaces. Around Blair many acres of farm lands are inundated.

Three Dramatic Critics.

Montreal, March 22.—Announcement is made of the formation of a committee of three Canadian dramatic critics to judge the work of composers in the Earl Grey dramatic competition, being Hector Charlesworth, Saturday Night, Toronto; Ernest Beaufort, Winnipeg Free Press, and B. Woman Received Blow Before Death.

Cobalt, March 22.—Dr. Hair gave medical testimony in the inquest into the death of W. M. Cope and his wife on Thursday night by fire. He said Mrs. Cope had received a severe blow on the face with a blunt instrument, but that death in both cases was caused by burns and suffocation.

Minister of Railways Says Applicants For Railway Charters In the West Will Soon Be Given Only One Route and Not a Choice of Several — Pork Commission's Report Will Soon Be Out.

Ottawa, March 22.—During a discussion on several western route maps before the Minister of Railways yesterday, representatives of the western provinces objected vigorously to a route map being approved without any work being done.

They stated that if the farmers' wheat could be carried on "projected" lines, the west would have more transportation facilities than are required.

Hon. George P. Graham, in discussing the point raised, pointed out to the representatives of the railway companies present that the day would shortly come when blanket charters would not be granted and companies would not be allowed a choice of several routes. They would be allowed to choose one route, and they could either use it or abandon it, before they would be given another location.

He thought the railway committee, and especially the people, were getting tired of proposals to build, followed by delays from two to twenty-five years.

Before James Conmee's bill to incorporate the Rainy River Radial Railway Co. passed through committee, it was given its third reading.

Hon. Mr. Graham said he was against giving to railway companies the right to expropriate water powers. A predominant feature of all these railway bills was the endeavor to acquire water powers and the right to expropriate. It was time to call a halt.

J. G. Turriff (Assiniboia) supported this.

Mr. Turcotte's bill to incorporate the Northern Quebec Colonization Railway Co., and Mr. Gerard's bill to incorporate the James Bay and Eastern Railway Co. were allowed to stand.

Four bills which came from the Senate, to incorporate the Ottawa, Montreal and Eastern Railway Co., respecting the Canadian Northern; to incorporate the Pine Pass Railway, and respecting the Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Co., were sent back to the standing committee, as the amendments made are important.

During question time in the House Mr. Lennox was informed that the amount of the account of L. F. Clarry of Peterboro, outstanding for payment, is $597, of which $249 is for eight claims respecting flooded lands.

Major Sharpe, North Ontario, learned that the pork commission's report on the industry in Europe would be made public shortly.

Married Twenty-Four Women.

New York, March 22.—Arthur Zimmerman, brought back from Hamilton, Ont., on bigamy charges, and convicted of perjury in his application for marriage licenses, was yesterday sentenced to Sing Sing for not less than four and one-half years.

Zimmerman married 24 women in Germany and America. They bore him 19 children, including three pair of twins.

Zimmerman declared he married only from love, but he accepted their money and left them when his ardor cooled. He married 11 women in one year.

Suspect Released.

Windsor, March 22.—No clues have been obtained as to the dynamiting of Comber postoffice safe early Sunday morning. C. E. Murphy, arrested near Staples as a suspect, proved to be a farm laborer and has been released Provincial Detectives Mahoney and Campeau will take to the trail.

Big Demand for Exchequer Bonds.

London, March 22.—The applications for the $105,000,000 five-year Exchequer bonds were so good that the lists were closed yesterday morning instead of Wednesday. The bonds were quoted at a fractional premium on the Stock Exchange.

Best Leaves Comber.

Windsor, March 22.—Nothing further has been learned of Arthur Best of Comber. The young man has left the village as the result of being censured by his friends and relatives regarding the Detroit River drowning and the part he played in it. There were intimations that as soon as the body of the woman was found that the Detroit police would again take Best into custody to question him.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Steady—Hogs Easier on U. S. Exchanges.

LONDON, March 21.—Liverpool and London cables quote live cattle (American) steady, at 13c to 14c, dressed weight; refrigerator beef, steady, at 10½c to 10¾c per lb.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, March 21.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 84 carloads, consisting of 1782 cattle, 46 hogs, 221 sheep and lambs, 66 calves.

Exporters.

George Campbell bought for Morris & Co., of Chicago 850 cattle, all for export, as follows: Steers, at $5 to $6.75; heifers, $5.75 to $6.25; bulls, $5 to $5.75.

A. McIntosh bought 63 exporters, at $5.40 to $5.75.

Butchers.

Choice Easter cattle sold from $5.50 to $6, but only one brought the latter price; loads of good, $5 to $5.25; medium, $5.50 to $5.80; common, $5 to $5.40; cows, $2.50 to $5.25 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

Veal Calves.

The general run of calves sold at $8 to $8 per cwt., but a few Easter calves brought $9 to $10 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Prices were higher all round; sheep, ewes, $5 to $5.50 per cwt.; rams, $5 to $4 per cwt.; yearling lambs, $8.50 to $9.25 per cwt.; spring lambs, $7 each. Well-fed lambs would bring more money.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered at the market, $10, and $9.75, f.o.b., cars, at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 21.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, receipts last week were 2235 cattle, 554 sheep and lambs, 3675 hogs and 385 calves. While offerings this morning were 1000 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs and 500 calves. The weather was fine and the Easter trade one of the most satisfactory ever held here. The quality of the cattle was all that could be desired, the bulk consisting of choice Ontario stall-fed steers and heifers, and, considering the supply, the prices demanded were not out of the way, when the state of trade for the past two months is considered, and the fact that American buyers have been thru the best sections of the country bidding 6½c to 7c per lb., for export stock in the barns. Prices show an advance of ½c to ¾c per lb.

The attendance of local buyers was large and there were also several good butchers from Quebec and Ottawa. Choice steers and heifers sold at 6¾c to 7c; good at 6¼c to 6½c; fairly good, 5¾c to 6c; fair, at 5¼c to 5½c; medium, at 4¾c to 5c, and common at 4c to 4½c per lb.

There was some demand from exporters for cattle and a few head were picked up to complete shipments at from 5c to 6¾c per lb.

Hog prices show a further advance of 40c to 50c per cwt., due to continued small supplies. According to what drovers say it is now difficult to secure hogs in some sections of the country, and the indications are that they will go to the $10 mark. Sales of selected lots were made to-day at $10.75, weighed off the cars.

The market for small meats was strong and prices are steadily working higher. A feature was the good demand for calves, at 8c to 9c per lb., and lower grades at from 4c to 7c. There were a few very choice spring lambs offered, which met with ready sale at from $12 to $15 each, and smaller ones at $8 to $10. A few small lots of sheep were sold at 6¼c to 6¾ per lb.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

Plain Talks to Women:
INJURIES & SKIN SORES—QUICK CURE.
A little child ran crying to her mother the other day with a nasty flesh wound and asked for Zam-Buk.
There lies a more powerful argument for Zam-Buk than even the scientists can bring. The child had had Zam-Buk before, and knew it eased pain and healed.
Zam-Buk works in two directions. Prevents worse results from a skin injury or skin disease (such as festering and blood poisoning) while it repairs the damage already done. Zam-Buk is entirely herbal, is pure, contains no trace of animal fat or mineral coloring. Surest and quickest known healer.

FATHER AND SON BENEFIT FROM USE OF THIS BALM.
Mr. Walter Adams, 177 Railway Ave., Stratford, says:—"My son, William, while playing barefooted about the backyard, cut his little toe on the sharp edge of a piece of tin. The toe was cut at the first joint, and almost severed from the foot. My wife hurriedly bathed it with warm water, afterwards applying some lint thickly spread with Zam-Buk. The healing balm quickly checked the flow of blood, eased and soothed the pain, and prevented inflammation and more serious results. In a few weeks Zam-Buk healed the wound so nicely that my son was able once more to go about, and also to wear his shoes without the slightest inconvenience. Not only is Zam-Buk valuable for wounds and cuts, but, used as an embrocation, I have also found it effective for rheumatic pains."
Zam-Buk cures cuts, burns, eczema, ringworm, ulcers, cold cracks, and all skin diseases. Druggists and stores, 50c box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

Head Office: 46 King Street, West TORONTO
The Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Imperial Guarantee & Accident Insurance Company of Canada, was held at the Head Office, 46 King Street West, Toronto, on the 19th inst.
Mr. E. W. Cox, President of the Company, in reviewing the business of the year, made reference to the growing popularity of Accident Insurance, and its effect on the success of the business of the Company during the year. The amount of Insurance written was over $25,270,000.00, an increase of $1,940,000.00 over the business taken out in 1908. This is considered exceptionally satisfactory in view of the fact that the business of the Company is confined to Personal Accident and Guarantee Insurance.
The Gross Income for 1909 amounted to $319,741.76.
That being an increase over the year 1908 of $44,817.24.
The Assets now total $306,974.00, and, after allowing for Reserve for unearned premium calculated on the full Government standard, and all other liabilities, the surplus for the protection of policyholders has increased to $213,437.12.

The Prospects For Senior Baseball League Bright

It is about time that the annual meeting of the Senior City Baseball League was called. There is nothing like getting a good start and if the league is to be placed on a sound business-like basis, as is the City Hockey League, it is likely that several meetings will have to be held to revise the constitution. With a set of rules that are adhered to, and thereby mean something there is no reason why there should not be a most successful season this year. Last year, in spite of several bungles, sudden changes in the places where the games were to be played, protests and other things, the League had a good season. This year an effort should be be made to draw up a constitution that will be followed throughout and to decide at the first of the season where the games are to be played. Last year the public hardly knew where to go to see the games.

SOCCER MEETINC

Annual Meeting of the Midland Football League Will be Held in the Y.M.C.A. on Friday.

The annual meeting of the Midland Association Football League will be held in the parlours of the Y. M. C. A. on Good Friday afternoon, when all teams that intend to take part in the game this year are asked to have representatives present. The election of officers for the season will take place at this meeting and the reports of last season will be presented. In addition there is most important business to be taken up in the consideration of the new constitution in which some important changes have been incorporated. The prospects before the league this season are of the brightest.

JUNIOR BALL LEAGUE IS ADVOCATED

Among a number of the baseball enthusiasts of the city the prospects for a juvenile city league are being discussed, and it is likely that steps will be taken in the near future to organize such a league in the city. Those who are behind the project point out with a good deal of truth that it is only by encouraging the young material that you can hope to turn out men of senior calibre. and say that in the last few years very little has been done for the youngsters. It is true that the "kids" have had plenty of baseball, but there has been no competition and no notice taken of their efforts. An organized league with four to eight junior teams would start the baseball bee buzzing in grand shape, and there is no reason why such a league could not be formed in this city. Grounds upon which to play there are plenty. The Oval alone offers opportunity for the kids to play as much as they like and there are other places available. The Y. M. C. A. has opened the campaign by organizing a junior team and it is said that a classy bunch of players will wear the triangle of the Association this season. Other junior teams should get in line and send in the names to the Y. M. C. A. or to the sporting editors of the local papers so that something can be done towards organizing the league.

JEFFS' CONDITION

By Walt. Mason.

Monday's Bulletin: There is no doubt that Jeffries will eat that Johnsing raw; his lungs are simply perfect; such brawn you never saw.

Tuesday's Bulletin: We have received a message that gives us grave concern: Jeff's legs are weak and wobbly, his heart not worth a dern.

Wednesday's Bulletin: A doctor called upon him and took him all apart, and says his spinal column had curled around his heart.

Thursday's Bulletin: Another doctor viewed him, and says he's out of sight; if Johnsin ever sees him there won't be any fight.

Friday's Bulletin: Put all your dough on Jeffries! He'll win, as sure as fate. This paper interviewed him, and so the news is straight.

Barrie exchange: Lacrosse has been dead in Barrie for years—is dead in a majority of Ontario towns, where a few years aog the same was universally popular. The reason and cause is not hard to locate. In the olden days the boys all played the game, took their sticks to school, playing catch by the way, and having a fine practice at recess. Now it is baseball. The reason very frequently given, in discussing this subject is the cost of the boys' sticks compared with years ago. There was a time when a boy could buy his stick from 75c. to $1.25. That day has passed. The cheapest stick now costs at least $1.50. A movement is on foot in Toronto to form an organization to take particular interest in developing the game in the schools of Toronto, and arranging for cheaper sticks for boys' use. It is to be hoped the movement will spread to include the Province till once again lacrosse is the popular game.

O'ROURKE CALLS JEFF TO WIN

New York, March 21.—In bar rooms, clubs, cigar stores and on the streets where pugilistic enthusiasts gather there is little to be heard about the Jeffries-Johnson fight, except predictions as to the length of the contest.

There is quite a diversity of opinion, some going so far as to say that if Johnson gets within three feet of Jeffries in the first minute of the fighting there will be a gloomy negro on the mat. Others believe that the fussing will last at least 20 rounds, as Jeff is not a hasty marksman, and some have said that it will be long and tedious, as Johnson will try to wear Jeffries down by keeping away from him without administering any punishment. In other words he will wear him out by chasing from him as Corbett did Sullivan in their memorable fight in New Orleans.

In Union there is Strength

A Battalion of men have more force than a single sharpshooter.

Your investments of small amounts single-handed do not have a fraction of the chance of winning that they do when combined with the capital of others in amounts formible enough to give ample protection.

This is the Basic Idea of our syndicate Union and Strength

These Combinations of capital in blocks of $2500 each will trade in only 100 shares at a time, thus allowing for a 25 point margin either way.

With the combined money power of many of these syndicates under the guidance of Mr. Patriarche, a market specialist with twenty years' experience behind him and success with him—your opportunities of earning big amounts with moderate capital are assured.

We know you can make 50 per cent. at least per year on your money, and actual statistics show you can earn a great deal more.

Let Us Make Money for You

The Syndicate System

These Investment Syndicates are for $2500 each, and each known by a separate number

Each syndicate will trade in only 100 shares at a time, thus having on each transaction a protection of 25 points, which, based on the trend of the market for many years, is considered ample.

Syndicate members will receive each week statements of the transactions of the syndicate they are interested in.

Syndicate members have the privilege of investigating the books of their syndicate and checking up the records to verify our accounts.

Syndicate members may withdraw all or any part of their credit balances at any time by giving three days' notice.

Profits will be paid at the end of each month and 6 per cent. interest will be paid if money is lying dormant.

Charges for operating the syndicates are a regular commission of ½ each way, or $12.50 for each 100 shares handled.

Did You Watch Saturday's Market?

From one to two points could have been taken in profits by dealing in such stocks as New York Central, Union Pacific, Reading and several others —all stocks of the highest standing. This means that a $2500 Syndicate, by trading in 100 shares of any of these would have made $100 to $200 in a single day!

Remember this:

REMEMBER THIS:—We actually buy and sell the stocks we deal in. Your money with us has all these advantages: Benefit of 20 years' experience, safety of principal, big, earning capacity and privilege of withdrawal of all or any part of your credit at any time on three days' notice. Our syndicates offer the only opportunity for the man who has $50 or $100 to invest to operate in New York stocks and get big returns, with safety.

Just now there is splendid trading market.

Why Delay? Act Now

You have worked hard for your money--- make your money work hard for you

Specialist guidance and ample protection to market operations are the two essential points to guarantee success. We are market specialists and the syndicate system guarantees protection.

It is almost impossible to guess how long such a fight will last, the idea being prevalent in spite of all that the pictures will occupy the minds of the men for at least eight or ten rounds. If pictures have any influence one can expect very little work before the 10th round, unless one of them should decide to double-cross the other if opportunity should present itself and temptation be too strong to dodge.

Few men know more about fighting a man for a prize ring battle than Tom O'Rourke. For many years he handled the best men in almost every class of fighters, including such champions as George Dixon and Joe Walcott. As an expert in such matters he must be classed with the best. His opinion on the Jeffries-Johnson fight is worthy of consideration.

O'Rourke is very decided in his claim that Jeff will win if he is sent into the ring in the condition he believes can be attained by proper and intelligent training.

"I shall have to put many provisions in my opinion regarding Jeffries," he said "I think he will win and would have no doubt of it, providing he has some good man training him like Bill Delaney. At the present time he has a fighter and a wrestler with him who know less than he does about himself, about putting a man in shape for a long battle, which this is likely to be. Should he go stale in his training Johnson will beat him sure.

"If Jeffries gets a good man with him—one of the Delaney experience—who can tell his condition any hour and who will keep him from running off in his work, I have no doubt Jeffries wil win. I think it will be a long fight and may go the limit. I feel sure that Jeffries can get in condition if properly handled. He is in the prime of life and has never dissipated to any extent.

"Johnson is a very clever man, and has the principle of fighting down to a science. He fights as a man is taught and should fight. He will be a hard man to knock out. He lacks in aggressiveness, which is not a fault. As to his gameness, I can say nothing, never having seen an example of it. If he is game he will be hard to beat."

To get somewhat of a line on the probable gate receipts of the Jeffries-Johnson fight O'Rourke was asked the amount of the largest gate of any fight of which he heard. He took a note book from his pocket and opening it pointed to a page on which was written, "Jeffries-Sharkey, Nov. 3, 1900, $67,764."

BASEBALL BREVITIES

It is expected, if the Midland League is placed on the map again, Lindsay will be represented this season. "Bill" Cinnamon, the old Redskin captain, says the material is plentiful if it is decided to put a team in.

Lindsay should stand a good show this summer with a senior team picked from the local material.

There will also be organized a town baseball league, and a meeting with this end in view should be called at an early date.

Larry Schafly has been chosen captain of the Newark team.

Ralph Savidge has signed his Rochester contract, but Kid Speer has not done as much for Buffalo.

Baltimore and Buffalo are both after Joe Jackson, an outfielder, who is now training with Connie Mack's Athletics in the South. Billy Smith of the Bisons claims that Mack promised Jackson to him, while Dunn claims that he had first call.

Manager Duffy of the White Sox listened to the call of the siren at Fresno last week and got back into the game, playing for the first time since the close of the 1908 season. He made one hit, had one put out, and one assist at centrefield.

Russell Blackburn is cutting a wide swath with the White Sox on the coast trip. His work is most favourably commented on by players and spectators alike, and he promises to be the sensation of many seasons in the major league.

"When Toronto won the Eastern League pennant," said Iron Man McGinnity, "Jack Thoney was generally given the credit for doing the most to bring the flag to the Maple Leafs' camp, but Manager Joe Kelley took told me that Larry Schafly, the Newark second-sacker, was the player who plugged up a hole in the infield and did much to win the pennant. Last fall Kelley offered me a big price to return Schafly to his club, and he would buy him back to-morrow if I were willing to dispose of him."

Jack Dunn when at Southern Pines, S.C., the other day, had a good look at Andy Speary, the shortstop, who is training with the Phillies. It is common talk in the camp that if Andy keeps up his good work he may find a place with the Orioles this year.

Josh Devore is in the lead for the position of left field at the New York Polo Grounds. But Kommers and Zacher have not yet been sidetracked. McGraw gives Devore preferences because he has had some major league experience.

John T. Bush is reported seriously ill at San Antonio. He had to be carried from the train to his room, and two of the best physicians in the West are in attendance. Mr. Brush is a victim of locomotor ataxia, and it is probably the long railroad journey that has set him back.

New York Globe. Fred Mitchell no doubt will make good as catcher in the big league. He has shown good form here, and is just the right build for a catcher and appears to be one of those brainy receivers. Mitchell, Kleinow, Sweeney and Criger make the Yankees' catching end look better than it has for some time. In speaking of Mitchell, the latter is stuck on Jim Vaughn and Russell Ford as pitchers, and sees no reason why they should not be of the big league variety. Mitchell has been handling their assortment, and both of these twirlers are in mid-season form. He is of the opinion that they will win twenty games each for the Highlanders.

There are Many Cough Mixtures, but only one Allen's Lung Balsam; try it.

BOWLING

There will be a meeting of the bowlers of the city at the Peterborough Bowling Club's alleys on Good Friday morning at 10 o'clock for the purpose of organizing a short league. All those interested are asked to be on hand as it is desired to perfect the organization at that meeting.

Was Weak and Nervous

Heart Would Stop Beating.

Mr. Paul Pont Cascapedia, Que writes:—"About five years ago I gave up all hope of getting better of heart trouble. would nearly choke, and then my heart would stop beating. I could not lie on my left side, and became so nervous and weak I could not work. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and before the first box was taken I was almost well, and the second box completed the cure. I have advised many others to try them, and they have all been cured of the same trouble. I have offered to pay for a box for anybody they do not cure."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are a specific for all diseases or disorders arising from the heart or nerve system. They make the weak heart strong and the shaky nerves firm by imparting a strengthening and restorative influence to every organ and tissue of the body and curing palpitation of the heart, dizziness, sleeplessness, anaemia, twitching of the muscles, sensation of "pins and needles," general debility, lack of vitality, etc.

Price, 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OBITUARY

MRS. WILLIAM BATES.

The remains of the late Mrs. Wm. Bates, who died in Fleetwood yesterday, arrived on the 8.30 train this morning. They were taken from the G. T. R. station to her son's residence, 654 Stewart street.

The funeral service will take place at 2 o'clock, and the funeral will leave the above address at 2.30 for the interment at the Little Lake cemetery.

PETER FREDERICK BOLAND.

The many friends of Peter Frederick Boland will be sorry to learn of his untimely death at the early age of twenty-eight years, which took place at St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday afternoon at 5.30 o'clock.

The deceased was the youngest son of the late John Boland, of Asphodel, where he lived until six years ago, when he came to this city to reside. He was employed by the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company as a traveller. The deceased was married five years ago to Miss Laura Lynch, also of Asphodel, and she and two little children are left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and kind father. Two brothers and three sisters also survive him. The brothers are James and John, of Asphodel, and the sisters are Mrs. Jas. McArthur, of Rochester, N.Y., Mrs. Michael Hew, of Asphodel, and Mrs. John Dwyer, Aylmer street, city.

The funeral will leave the family residence, 588 Charlotte street, to-morrow (Wednesday) morning, at nine o'clock, for St. Peter's Cathedral, where solemn requiem mass will be sung, after which the remains will be interred in the family plot, in St. Peter's cemetery.

RICHARD ROY DEVELL.

In connection with the obituary notice of the death of Mr. Richard Roy Devell, in the Examiner last evening several mistakes were made. The late Mr. Devell was the son of the late John Devell, and had lived all his life in Otonabee, not in Cavan, as stated. He is survived by four brothers and four sisters, Ernest and Herbert, of Otonabee, John of Frobisher, Sask., Edward, of the Battleford district, Mrs. Geo. Trotter and Mrs. Harry Trotter, of Frobisher, Mrs. Thorne, of Otonabee, and Miss Emily, a nurse-in-training at the Belleville Hospital.

The funeral takes place this afternoon from the River Road, Otonabee, to Little Lake cemetery.

Billious Headache

COMES FROM LIVER DERANGEMENTS WHICH ARE THOROUGHLY OVERCOME BY

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Headache is said to be the most useful pain in the world. It is a sort of fire alarm that warns you of something wrong with some organ of the body.

Most frequently the trouble is indigestion and torpid liver and the pain arises from the poisoned blood passing through the arteries of the brain and head.

There is no cure for bilious headache, torpid liver and indigestion that can be compared to Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills for prompt and certain results. This has been proven by so many thousands of letters published from time to time that everybody should know it by this time.

Mr. Fred Hinz, Bradhagen, Perth Co., Ont., writes: "I don't like to have my name in the papers, but feel out of justice to suffering humanity I should tell others of the good I obtained from Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills and Ointment.

"For years I was troubled a great deal with sick headaches and was often so bad that I could not work. Being advised to try Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills I did so and can say they have brought about a complete cure. From the first I found that one pill cured my headache quickly every time. I was also a victim of itching piles and found Dr. Chase's Ointment the most satisfactory treatment I ever used. It brought relief almost instantly."

You won't be satisfied with mere temporary relief when you know your headache can be completely cured by using Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Thursday, "Maundy Thursday" — 10 a.m., Holy Communion; 5 p.m., Evening service; 8 p.m., Choir practice.

Good Friday—11 a.m., Matins and sermon; 3 p.m., Children's service; 8 p.m., Solemn performance of "Stainer's Crucifixion," by the choir.

Saturday—9 a.m., Boys' practice; 10 a.m., flowers gladly received for Easter decorations.

Easter Sunday, Holy Communion 7, 8, 12.15, Matins 11, Choral evensong 7.

The special children's Easter service, when the Sunday school scholars present their Lenten mite box is on Easter Sunday at 3 p.m.. A special invitation to parents.

The choral selections by the choir will be from Handel's 'Messiah,' concluding the evensong on Easter Day with the "Hallelujah" chorus.

The special preacher for Easter Sunday will be the Ven. Archdeacon Warren, of Toronto.

The Palm Sunday services were well rendered. At evensong the Rev. Canon Davidson preached on the subject of the Holy Communion, earnestly exhorting all Anglican churchmen to a regular attendance at that great service. The choir gave a splendid rendering of the services, especially the hymns, and Mr. H. Morphet sang, "The Palms" and "Jerusalem" in good voice and with great expression.

Mr. Comber, B.A., of Bobcaygeon, read the lessons in the morning and Mr. R. Sutcliffe at night.

ST. PAUL'S NOTICES.

An important meeting of the Board of Managers will be held on Tuesday evening at 7.30 o'clock, in the Dominion Bank Chambers.

On Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, in St. Paul's church, Mr. Herbert Booth will deliver his remarkable bioscopic lecture entitled "The Entrancing Story of the Early Christians." Opinions from all parts of the Empire pronounce this lecture one of profound interest, in its portrayal of the struggles and triumphs of the early followers of the faith.

ST. LUKE'S MEETINGS.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the infant class room.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To prevent starch from sticking to the iron and streaking, drop a small piece of alum into it when it is done and stir over the fire until it is dissolved. Then remove from the fire and add a teaspoonful of kerosene.

To heat a smoothing iron on the coals without smutting it, take a cap from the kitchen stove and lay it on the coals. Place the iron on top of this, and both will soon be heated through.

To hard boil eggs so that the yolks will not be discoloured, they should be put into boiling water on the stove, never into cold, and after boiling half an hour should be plunged into cold.

If there is a bit of cauliflower left over from a meal ,try dipping it first into crumbs, then into eggs and again into crumbs. If not enough to serve separately, then fry in deep fat and use as a garnish to any meat or luncheon dish.

Cold cooked beef, whether boiled, broiled or roasted, chopped fine, mixed with cooked potatoes, also chopped fine, and moistened with gravy and milk, makes a most acceptable dish. Put into a pudding dish, cover the top with grated cheese, and bake.

A safe and sane skin lotion that will prevent premature wrinkles is made by boiling twelve teaspoonfuls of barley in a quart of water until gluten is obtained. Strain through a fine linen and add to the liquid a teaspoonful of tincture of benzoin.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN KICK.

Doctor Says at Bradley's Trial That It Was In Delicate Spot.

St. Catharines, March 23.—The trial of William Bradley for the murder of George Bulman at Merritton, on New Year's afternoon, began before Chief Justice Falconbridge yesterday morning. The County Court house was crowded. Col. Gwyn, Dundas, assisted by Crown Attorney Brennan, is conducting the prosecution, while A. C. Kingstone of this city is defending Bradley. No verdict can be reached until some time to-day.

Bradley and Bulman, who was somewhat intoxicated, got into an altercation while riding on the back platform of a crowded radial car. Bulman having lurched against Bradley, who told him to keep to himself. Both soon began talking fight and Bradley pulled off his coat and started for Bulman, but the conductor interfered.

George Gass, a small boy of Thorold, swore he had looked out the car window, in response to a call by a woman that men were fighting. Near lock eight he saw Bulman with his hand against the back of the car. Bradley was facing him within about an arm's length. Bradley was then in his shirt sleeves. When the car stopped at lock nine Bradley got off and, as he was opposite the car step, hit Bulman with his fist somewhere in the face. Bulman fell backward, having been getting off the car when hit. As Bulman fell Bradley went over and leaned down and punched him in the face, then stood up and kicked him on the left side of the head. He died in a few minutes.

Mrs. Betsy Ethridge saw Bulman fall, and was standing about three feet from Bradley when she saw him kick Bulman in the head.

Dr. S. H. McCoy swore that the blow was in such a delicate spot that it would cause almost instant death.

Mrs. Wills, who had been with Mrs. Ethridge, fainted while on the stand.

Thomas Hastings twice saw Bradley take hold of Bulman by the throat. When someone broke the prisoner's hold, he stepped down to a lower step and caught hold of Bulman's coat and endeavored to pull him from the car. He saw nothing of the Gass boy, and admitted that it would be hard for him to see the boy if the latter were there.

Bryan Cain also saw Bradley catch Bulman by the throat, but heard him say, "Now, you see, I could lick you if I wanted to."

Thomas Hogan claimed that Bradley had struck Bulman while he was lying on the platform of the car. Deceased then slid off and was kicked by the prisoner.

Sweetheart Sheltered Deserter.

London, Ont., March 23.—The arrest of Cuthbert Shaw by detectives here yesterday revealed a romance. Shaw deserted from Wolsley Barracks three weeks ago, and since has been sheltered by a young woman named Merrill, whom he met in Hamilton about two years ago. She came to London some weeks ago.

The couple were planning to go to Toronto, and get married, as soon as she got the money.

Promoters In Court.

Toronto, March 23.—A. G. Robertson, N. W. De L'Horbe, and J. W. Gurofsky appeared in the Police Court yesterday, charged with conspiring to defraud by the formation of a company advertised as the Canadian Eatables Co. They pleaded not guilty, and elected to be tried by jury. Bail was refused by Magistrate Kingsford, but Judge Winchester granted bail in $5,000 for Gurofsky.

FEW POINTS WERE MADE

A. H. Clarke Protests Against Ontario Government's Action—Lumsden Inquiry Debate on March 31—Immigration Act Amendments Are Put Through the Committee With Little Criticism.

Ottawa, March 23.—The soundness of the Government's immigration policy was attested in the House of Commons yesterday by the fact that Hon. Frank Oliver's bill containing eighty-two clauses, many of them of great importance in their probable effect upon the exclusion of undesirables, was put through committee and given third reading in the face of comparatively little adverse criticism.

Haughton Lennox moved that the whole question of the Lumsden inquiry be taken upon March 31. This was agreed to.

A. H. Clarke (South Essex), stated that the Ontario Government had leased to a Detroit concern the right to take sand from the St. Clair River for a period of five years. People who had been accustomed to take sand from the river were indignant that they should have to pay a royalty to this concern.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley said that if the soil rights belonged to the province, the Public Works Department could not take any action unless operations interfered with navigation, which was likely.

In committee on Hon. Mr. Oliver's bill to amend the immigration act, Clarence Jameson (Digby) suggested that tuberculosis be added to the list of disease debarring entry.

Mr. Oliver said, that while recognizing the necessity of excluding patients, it had been thought best not to mention the disease by name.

Dr. Paquet suggested that immigrants should be examined as to their moral fitness and Mr. Oliver said that while it might be possible in European countries, where the records of all individuals are kept, it would not be possible in Great Britain, without unnecessarily hampering the emigration of desirable people.

Uriah Wilson (Lennox and Addington) having expressed the opinion that Canada was getting little good from the system of paying a bonus for agricultural classes, the Minister said that the homestead entries show a large increase of British birth.

Mr. Oliver said that in the west the British born were more inclined to stay on the farm than were Canadians.

Mr. Oliver did not hold out any hope that the Government would consent to go in for a policy of assisted immigration.

Robert Bickerdike (Montreal) described some of the pathetic scenes which occur when families are separated on the docks on this side by immigration officers. It would be much better, he thought, for undesirable members of a family to be picked out before departure from the other side.

Mr. Oliver said that everything possible was being done to minimize this difficulty. It would be quite impracticable to place inspectors abroad.

Mr. Jameson took exception to the clause of the bill, which provides that tourists should have a certain amount of money in their possession. If tourists were in danger of being held up, it would decrease the traffic.

Mr. Oliver argued that it was fair to expect a tourist to have as much money on him as an immigrant. He pointed to the lack of complaints on the Canadian border as an evidence that Canada did her business in a better way than the U. S. inspectors.

According to present probabilities, Canada will, in order to secure the continuance of the present U. S. tariff until such time as a reciprocal tariff can be negotiated, be asked to remove the duties on such articles as watch springs, cotton seed oil, cement, silks, and certain fruits, extending to them the intermediate tariff.

The Washington authorities hold out the hope that, this done, Canadian cattle, lumber and farm dairy produce will later be admitted free.

Canadian Land Speculators.

London, March 23.—The Canadian Associated Press understands, with reference to the sale of 200,000 acres in Alberta by the Western Canada Land Co., that the area was purchased by two Canadians, with the object of retailing to settlers. The price paid equals that wherewith the company purchased its 500,000 acres a few years back.

British-American land profits for 1909 were £25,449.

Child Ate Pills and Died.

Windsor, March 23.—Edith, the five year-old daughter of James Scholes, of this city, discovered a box of pills on the cupboard shelf yesterday morning and the child devoured half the contents of the box. She was immediately seized with convulsions, death resulting in half an hour.

Daring Hold-Up In Cobalt.

Cobalt, Ont., March 23.—In close proximity to a crowd on Cobalt square, hold-up men seized a Chinaman, named Lee Sung, hurried him into a back lane, gagged him and took $105 and a gold watch and chain from him. Then they left him in a stable and got clear away.

Navigation Insurance Delayed.

Detroit, Mich., March 23.—According to the terms of the insurance policies in force this season, vessels cannot start before April 15. This is about ten days later than in previous years.

THE SCHEME IS ADOPTED

Upper House Accepts Resolutions With Only 17 Members Dissenting—Premier's Proposals Are For a Complete Abolition of the Veto on Money Bills and a Limitation on Others by Lords.

London, March 23.—The House of Lords yesterday by a vote of 175 to 17, passed the third and last of the resolutions introduced by Lord Rosebery, in furtherance of his program for the reformation of the Upper Chamber. The resolution declared that a necessary preliminary to the reform and reconstruction of the chamber, as provided in the first and second resolutions already agreed to, was the acceptance of the principle that the possession of a peerage in itself should no longer afford the right to sit and vote in the House of Lords.

Following are the three Rosebery resolutions:—

(1) That a strong and efficient second chamber is not merely an integral part of the British constitution, but is necessary to the well-being of the state and the balance of Parliament.

(2) That a second chamber can best be obtained by reforming and reconstituting the House of Lords.

(3) That a necessary preliminary to such reform and reconstitution is the acceptance of the principle that possession of a peerage shall no longer in itself give the right to sit and vote in the House of Lords.

Premier Asquith has given notice in the House of Commons of three resolutions bearing on the veto power of the House of Lords.

The first declares that it is expedient that the House of Lords be disabled by law from rejecting or amending a money bill, but that any such limitation shall not be taken to diminish or qualify the existing rights of the House of Commons.

The second declares that it is expedient that the powers of the House of Lords over bills other than money bills be restricted by law so that any such bill which has passed the House of Commons in three successive sessions, and has been rejected by the House of Lords in each of these sessions, shall become a law without consent of the House of Lords on royal assent being declared, provided that at least two years have elapsed between the date of the first introduction of the bill in the Commons, and the date it passes the Commons for the third time.

The third proposes to limit the duration of each Parliament to five years.

Asquith's resolutions, which make no provision for conferences of the two Houses in the event of a deadlock, are supposed to meet with Redmond's approval, and as it is quite certain that they will be rejected by the House of Lords, a general election may be expected in May. It is believed that in the meantime the Government will endeavor to pass a short bill to hold all the elections on the same day.

Says Ministers Libelled Him.

Butler, Pa., March 23.—Warrants were issued yesterday upon informations made by Rev. Claudius Freeman, pastor of the Lutheran Church, for the arrest of six local ministers of several denominations, charging them with criminal libel.

It is alleged the defendants are members of the Ministerial Association, and at a meeting in February, passed a resolution charging that "a candidate for school director shipped to Mars, Pa., the date before election, a barrel of beer for the purpose of influencing votes." Freeman in his information declare he was the candidate referred to in the resolution, and charges the ministers with libel in passing the resolution, and causing it to be printed.

Deported Strike Leader.

Lewiston, Me., March 23. "We were deported out of town by a mob of men representing the business manufacturing interests," was the version of President John Malin, of the International Papermakers, of his unexpected departure from Wimford Falls early yesterday.

President Malin declared that he and George Scheneider, vice-president of the union, were taken into a room in their hotel by 15 men, and were not allowed to communicate with their friends, the officials or the clergy."

Disaffection on British Warship.

London, March 23.—The battleship Irresistible has been isolated at Portland Roads since March 12, owing to disaffection among the crew.

The sights of the big guns were thrown overboard on the night of March 12, and the most rigid investigation has failed to reveal those responsible.

Meet After 55 Years.

Galt, Ont., March 23.—After a separation of 56 years, two boyhood friends, Hon. Justice Idington of the Supreme Court, Ottawa, and Elijah Bowman of Grand Rapids, Mich., met here. The former was here visiting friends and the latter on his way to Alberta. They went to school together at Preston.

Farmer Broke His Neck.

Belleville, March 23.—William Galloway, of Madoc Township, was driving in a sleigh, and accidentally fell out, breaking his neck. He was a farmer, and a man highly esteemed.

Navy Building on Lakes.

Washington, D.C., March 23.—The Navy Department has reported to the House that it knows no reason why all types of vessels cannot be built on the great lakes. The report is in the nature of a reply to a resolution asking for the navy view on that point, and Secretary Meyers' opinion is based on the assumption that the only "obstacles"—a term used in the resolution—are physical ones, and that a sufficiently deep waterway from the seaboard can eventually be constructed.

The limitations of the Bush-Bagot treaty are ignored.

LOST APPETITE.

CAN'T EAT! STOMACH OUT OF ORDER

You are losing strength and vitality. That listless, languid feeling is due to the weak condition of the system. These are sure signs of a breakdown. Check the breakdown quickly and effectively by using PSYCHINE the Greatest of All Tonics. If you feel worn out, and run down, it is time for a tonic. Use PSYCHINE early, do not wait till you are worse. It will tone up your system and restore you to your old-time vigor and health. Keep your stomach in order, increase your appetite, restore your system to a healthy condition by taking PSYCHINE to-day. Mrs. J. T. Miller, of 63 Notre Dame Street, Winnipeg, proved this, for she says: "I am thankful for what PSYCHINE has done for me. I was laid up with weakness. Oh, how I suffered! My appetite was very poor and my stomach was greatly disordered. To-day I am strong and well, for PSYCHINE has brought me permanent relief. I feel like a new woman now to what I did before taking PSYCHINE. I feel the vigor of girlhood in my veins once more."

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON,
Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

The groom marveled at the sudden changes of gait, the gallops that fell abruptly to a walk with the alternations of mood in the girl's heart, the pauses that marked a moment of meditation as she watched some green curving bank or a plunge of the mad little creek that sent a glory of spray whitely into the sunlight. It grew late, and the shadows of waning afternoon crept through the park. The crowd had hurried home to escape the chill of the spring dusk, but she lingered on, reluctant to leave, and presently left her horse with the groom that she might walk alone beside the creek in a place that was beautifully wild. About her lay a narrow strip of young maples, and beyond this the wide park road wound at the foot of a steep wooded cliff. The place was perfectly quiet save for the splash and babble of the creek.

Several minutes passed. Once she heard her groom speak to the horses, though she could not see him, but the charm of the place held her. She raised her eyes from the tumbling water before her and looked off through the maple tangle. Then she drew back quickly and clasped her riding crop tightly. Some one had paused at the farther edge of the maple brake and dismounted, as she had, for a more intimate enjoyment of the place. It was John Armitage, tapping his riding boot idly with his crop as he leaned against a tree and viewed the miniature valley.

He was a little below her, so that she saw him quite distinctly and caught a glimpse of his horse pawing, with arched neck, in the bridle path behind him. She had no wish to meet him there and turned to steal back to her horse when a movement in the maples below caught her eye. She paused, fascinated and alarmed by the cautious stir of the undergrowth.

The air was perfectly quiet; the disturbance was not caused by the wind. Then the head and shoulders of a man were disclosed as he crouched on hands and knees, watching Armitage. His small head and big body as he crept forward suggested to Shirley some fantastic monster of legend, and her heart beat fast with terror as a knife flashed in his hand. He moved more rapidly toward the silent figure by the tree, and still Shirley watched wide eyed, her figure tense and trembling, the hand that held the crop half raised to her lips, while the dark form rose and poised for a spring.

Then she cried out, her voice ringing clear and high across the little vale and sounding back from the cliff:

"Oh, oh!" And Armitage leaped forward and turned. His crop fell first upon the raised hand, knocking the knife far into the trees, then upon the face and shoulders of the Servian. The fellow turned and fled through the maple tangle, Armitage after him, and Shirley ran back toward the bridge where she had left her groom and met him halfway, hurrying toward her.

The fellow fled, Armitage after him.

"What is it, miss? Did you call?"

"No; it was nothing, Thomas—nothing at all," and she mounted and turned toward home.

Her heart was still pounding with excitement, and she walked her horse to gain composure. Twice, in circumstances most unusual and disquieting she had witnessed an attack on John Armitage by an unknown enemy. She recalled now a certain pathos of his figure as she first saw him leaning against the tree watching the turbulent little stream, and she was impatient to find how her sympathy went out to him. It made no difference who John Armitage was; his enemy was a coward, and the horror of such a menace to a man's life appalled her. She passed a mounted policeman, who recognized her and raised his hand in salute, but the idea of reporting the strange affair in the strip of woodland occurred to her only to be dismissed. She felt that here was an ugly business that was not within the grasp of a park patrolman, and, moreover, John Armitage was entitled to pursue his own course in matters that touched his life so closely. The thought of him reassured her. He was no simple boy to suffer such attacks to pass unchallenged, and so, dismissing him, she raised her head and saw him gallop forth from a bypath and rein his horse beside her.

"Miss Claiborne!"

The suppressed feeling in his tone made the moment tense, and she saw that his lips trembled. It was a situation that must have its quick relief, so she said instantly in a mockery of his own tone:

"Mr. Armitage!" She laughed. "I am almost caught in the dark. The blandishments of spring have beguiled me."

He looked at her with a quick scrutiny. It did not seem possible that this could be the girl who had called to him in warning scarce five minutes before, but he knew it had been she. He would have known her voice anywhere in the world. They rode silent beside the creek, which was like a laughing companion seeking to mock them into a cheerier mood. At an opening through the hills they saw the western horizon aglow in tints of lemon deeping into gold and purple. Save for the riot of the brook the world was at peace. She met his eyes for an instant, and their gravity and the firm lines in which his lips were set showed that the shock of his encounter had not yet passed.

"You must think me a strange person, Miss Claiborne. It seems inexplicable that a man's life should be so menaced in a place like this. If you had not called to me"—

"Please don't speak of that! It was so terrible!"

"But I must speak of it. Once before the same attempt was made—that night on the King Edward."

"Yes; I have not forgotten."

"And today I have reason to believe that the same man watched his chance, for I have ridden here every day since I came, and he must have kept track of me."

"But this is America, Mr. Armitage!"

"That does not help me with you. You have every reason to resent my bringing you into such dangers. It is unpardonable, indefensible!"

She saw that he was greatly troubled.

"But you couldn't help my being in the park today. I have often stopped just there before. It's a favorite place for meditations. If you know the man"—

"I know the man."

"Then the law will certainly protect you, as you know very well. He was a dreadful looking person. The police can undoubtedly find and lock him up."

She was seeking to minimize the matter, to pass it off as a commonplace affair of every day. They were walking their horses. The groom followed stolidly behind.

Armitage was silent, a look of great perplexity on his face. When he spoke he was quite calm.

"Miss Claiborne, I must tell you that this is an affair in which I can't ask help in the usual channels. You will pardon me if I seem to make a mystery of what should be ordinarily a bit of business between myself and the police. But to give publicity to these attempts to injure me just now would be a mistake. I could have caught that man there in the wood. But I let him go for the reason—for the reason that I want the men back of him to show themselves before I act. But if it isn't presuming"—

He was quite himself again. His voice was steady and deep with the ease and assurance that she liked in him. She had marked today in his earnestness, more than at any other time, a slight, an almost indistinguishable trace of another tongue in his English.

"How am I to know whether it would be presuming?" she asked.

"But I was going to say"—

"When rudely interrupted!" She was trying to make it easy for him to say whatever he wished.

—"that these troubles of mine are really personal. I have committed no crime and am not fleeing from justice."

She laughed and urged her horse into a gallop for a last stretch of road near the park limits.

"How uninteresting! We expect a Montana ranchman to have a spectacular past."

"But not to carry it, I hope, to Washington. On the range I might become a lawless bandit in the interest of picturesqueness, but here"—

Theaters of Different Ages.

The difference between the playhouse in which we see a drama of Bronson Howard's today and the playhouse in which Sheridan's comedies were originally acted is greater than the difference between Sheridan's Drury Lane and the house for which Congreve wrote and in which Betterton acted. And that restoration playhouse was very unlike the Elizabethan theater for which Shakespeare wrote and in which Burbage acted. Even more apparent is the difference between the theater of Dionysius at Athens and the Roman theater at Orange. These theaters are sharply distinguished from one another by their size, by their shape, by their methods of illumination, by the absence or presence of real scenery and by the arrangement of the seats for the spectators, and as we study these successive changes we are confirmed in the conviction that these physical conditions must have exerted a powerful influence upon the dramatists who followed one another down the centuries.—Brander Matthews in Century.

The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach

A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgement.

This "Discovery" is a pure, glyceric extract of American medical roots, absolutely free from alcohol and all injurious, habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on its wrappers. It has no relationship with secret nostrums. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in all the schools of medicine. Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy of KNOWN COMPOSITION. ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS. They must know of many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

LITTLE DIGESTERS

positively CURE Indigestion. Stomach Troubles and distress of all sorts disappear like magic. Depression and brain fag, lassitude and that tired feeling all come from the stomach. LITTLE DIGESTERS make every day your good day. Read what others say:

EVERY MEAL BROUGHT AGONY

But Since Taking "Little Digesters" He Can Eat Heartily

From Osgoode Station, Ont., comes a story of five years of suffering from Indigestion and Dyspepsia—five years of doctoring in vain—then "Little Digesters" and a complete cure. Mr. R. H. Ralph tells the story—his own story—thus:

"I have been a sufferer from Indigestion and Stomach Trouble for five years. I had treatment from several doctors. I did not find a cure until I began using "Little Digesters."

"I can hardly describe how much I suffered at times. Every meal brought with it more or less agony and I seemed to have a complete distaste for food. I had almost begun to think my case incurable when I came across an advertisement in the papers about "Little Digesters." I decided to give them a trial. I am very thankful that I did so for I had not been taking them long when I found them helping me. I can now eat heartily and no longer feel pain and discomfort after eating."

"I Was in Bad Shape"

But Little Digesters "Have Done Wonders for Me"

Here is an experience with the first part of which you may be all too familiar. Mr. Josh Smith, of North Seneca, Ont., writes about "Little Digesters."

"Having been troubled with Indigestion for a number of years, I have tried nearly all kinds of pills and tablets for Indigestion only to be disappointed.

"Seeing your tablets advertised I thought I would give them a trial, and must say I am glad I did. Before taking them I was in bad shape. Bad taste in my mouth mornings and so dizzy that I hardly knew how I would put in the day. Everything I would eat would seem to sour and ferment, but after taking "Digesters" I can say they have done wonders for me."

If you know what the first part of this story means why not learn the relief and delight which comes from the use of "Little Digesters!"

HE FEARED TO EAT

Till "Little Digesters" Cured His Indigestion

Like many another sufferer from Indigestion, Mr. E. Thody looked forward to mealtime with dread instead of pleasure. Writing from his home at 141 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, on June 12th last, he says:

"For two years I suffered with Indigestion and obtained no relief from anything I took, including several prescriptions from prominent physicians. Every meal was followed with acute pain until I feared to eat, consequently became run down for lack of nourishment.

"'Little Digesters" were recommended to me by a friend and I tried them with remarkable results, two boxes completely curing me. It is three months since I took any and have not suffered a pain no matter how heartily I eat. I would certainly recommend them to anyone suffering with Indigestion."

King, Ont., Nov. 12, 1909.
THE COLEMAN MEDICINE CO.
Gentlemen,—

Having suffered for three years with Indigestion, nothing could relieve me, having seen your advertisements in the paper for "Little Digesters," took three, was entirely cured. I feel convinced that any one suffering with same will not fail to try "Little Digesters." PHILIP PAYN, Junior.

"Find Them Marvellous"

Here is a short but very convincing letter which we received recently:

THE COLEMAN MEDICINE CO.,
I have been using "Little Digesters" for some time. I still use them and find them marvellous. I recommend them sincerely.
MRS. CHAS. BROOKS.
Low, Wright Co., Que.

Here is another letter, dated Nov. 9th, 1909, almost equally brief and to the point;
COLEMAN MEDICINE CO.,
Would say that the box of "Little Digesters" has done me a lot of good. I think they are all right for any Stomach Trouble.

Send Me Another Box of "Little Digesters"

That's what Mr. E. S. Glassco, of Toronto, wrote us last May, after he had tried and proved "Little Digesters" for Indigestion. He said:

"I wish you would send me another box of your "Little Digesters." All the members of my family have been using them and have obtained the most satisfactory results.

"I congratulate you on your success in putting up a tablet for the cure of Indigestion. I suffered for years and tried everything that was recommended to me. Nothing gave me relief until I was persuaded to try "Little Digesters." Now I never suffer from Indigestion. I enjoy my meals and am not afraid to eat, because I know a "Little Digester" after each meal will digest my food.

"I recommend them to all my friends who suffer from Indigestion and would further say that you may publish the above if you wish. I know there are thousands of people suffering from Indigestion who will be glad to know there is a safe and sure cure for them."

Cured at Seventy-four

Little Digesters are a Great Help to Mr. John F. Becker

The weight of years very often brings with it a still heavier burden, that of Indigestion or some form of Stomach Trouble.

Then "Little Digesters" come to the rescue—if you give them a chance, as did Mr. Becker. Here is his letter telling what they did for him:

New Dundee, Nov. 10, 1909.
TO THE COLEMAN MEDICINE CO.
Dear Sirs,—

I was for a long time troubled with bloating after meals, and my tongue was always coated. Seeing the "Little Digesters" advertised I bought a box, and they took all that trouble away, but I thought one box would not be enough, so I sent to you for more. They are a great help to my body. Yours truly,
JOHN F. BECKER.

Excuse my writing with pencil, being an old man of 74.

Letters like these are the best possible proof that "Little Digesters" do exactly what we claim—relieve and cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all forms of Stomach Troubles and distress. They aid the feeble stomach to digest food perfectly so that you can enjoy your meals and get the strength out of what you eat.

ARE HOUSE-WIVES OF CANADA EXTRAVAGANT?

Potatoes are not an extravagant luxury, but we use a lot of them; and six pecks fly before four or five healthy appetites in a fairly short time. Six pecks make a bag, but many housekeepers never know it; and six pecks remain six pecks and arrive at the back door each in its own single, peckedness to the end of the chapter.

Which means that bang goes sixpence, as six pecks cost 90 cents, whereas a bag may be bought for 75 cents.

In the same way eleven pecks of apples make a barrel. Eleven pecks at 40 cents a peck total up to $4.40; while a barrel of the same may be yours for $3—$1.40 more to the housekeeper's credit.

Cereals, Eggs, Bacon.

In the orthodox family with its two, three or more olive branches sprouting, the morning oatmeal porridge or the morning wheatmean porridge are as inevitable as the sun's rising. Nowadays most housekeeper's are large buyers of rolled oats, flaked wheat, or some such form of cereal, costing about five cents a pound. But it is not customary among all apportioners of the family income to invest in a stone of rolled oats at 50 cents, instead of fourteen pounds at 70 cents. Eggs may be bought by the crate, bacon by the side, tea in large quantities at a reduction of five cents in the pound.

It would not pay to buy pepper or olives or vanilla in large quantities, because comparatively little of them is used in the month or the six months, and thus the possible saving would not make up for the bother of storing them. But the larger staples, even though inexpensive, make up the bulk of the week's bills, and, so far as groceries are concerned, mostly lend themselves to a considerable saving through the giving of orders in large terms. Meat and other perishable commodities present a problem to the housekeeper with small premises, though, where circumstances permit, and a large family makes it desirable, a side of beef, at 9½ cents a pound throughout, would mean an appreciable difference in the butcher's bill for the period while it lasted—provided the housekeeper knew how to make use of the different and less familiar parts, such as the brisket and the neckpiece.

Large Families and Small Incomes.

This forethought in buying at one order enough for some weeks or months saves the housekeeper trouble as well as money. It also saves the grocer trouble and does not deprive him of his gain, as he finds it as profitable to sell large quantities as small ones. The gain to the housekeeper varies with the size of the household, but as it often happens that the large family is the one with the small income, the idea of buying in large quantities is quite worth taking into consideration, as it stops leak number three in the family bankbook.

ENNISMORE COUNCIL MEETING

The Township Council of Ennismore met in the town hall on March 15th, 1910. All the members were present and the minutes of last meeting were read and signed, Reeve Young in the chair.

Under By-law No. 337, the following road masters were appointed: Thomas Calvert, George Boate, William J. Clarke, Patrick M. Twomey, John Conway, Richard Nurse, Lawrence Twomey, James Killen, John Geary, Joseph Doran, John O'Donoghue, John Mahoney, Michael S. Crough, Eugene Moloney, James Guiry, John Brick, Patrick Crough, Con. Reilly James Scollard, James Cadigan, Eugene Murphy, Patrick Crowley, Richard Killen, William J. Crough, Daniel Cadigan, Maurice O'Connor, Thomas Flood, Michael Crough, Daniel Harrington, Peter Flood, William Young, Edward Harrington, Richard Davis, Michael Holland, John K. Galvin, Michael Gannon, Owen O'Connor, John J. Hickson, William Telford.

By-law No. 338, passed in Council for the purpose of borrowing $1200 to meet current expenses for the year 1910.

The following accounts were drawn on the treasury: William D. Cavanagh and W. W. Crough, for opening gravel pit, $2.00 each; J. Moloney, part of salary as clerk, $25.00; Edward Gorman, work on road, $3.00; William F. Cavanagh, salary as assessor, $27.50; James Collins, cutting brush on road, $4.50.

Moved by Messrs. W. H. Crough and Cavanagh, that William Young be appointed road commissioner for the payment of $307.35 for drawing gravel.

Moved by W. H. Crough and Harrington, that the claim of Frank Young for trespass on his gravel pit be left over for future consideration.

Moved by Messrs. Cavanagh and Timothy Crowe, that Joseph Doran and Henry Killen be appointed fenceviewers for the township of Ennismore for the year 1910.

By resolution of Wm. Cavanagh and W. H. Crough, the meeting was adjourned until the call of the reeve.

ALL THE LATEST FASHION IDEAS

The wide Gibson plait continues to give the broad shoulder effect in shirtwaists of the tailor kind.

Large bows of filmy net and lace, wired into shape, are being worn as ornaments with the flat coiffure.

Puffings and tiny shirrings are to be used as trimmings on some of the spring gowns with filmy laces and gauzes.

Self-coloured dots of various sizes will be seen on some of the handsome woollen dress fabrics of this spring.

Cuban heels, quite high, seem to predominate among shoes, and there are also many military heels, quite as high.

Shoes are a bit less pointed, and the new vamps are very short, the effect being to make the foot look rather shorter.

Coloured correspondence stationery is once more in vogue. The delicate greys, dove and pearl shades are exquisite.

Black net collars, studded with nail heads, or embroidered with jet bugles, are being worn with black waists.

Loose weaves and heavy threads are characteristic notes of many of the popular materials for walking suits.

Many of the new Swiss muslins have must unusual figures in place of the dots, to which we have been accustomed.

The vogue of Dutch silver now includes bullet-shaped buttons that are among the smartest trimmings on blouses.

A new and lustrous weave of cashmere that closely resembles crepe de chine is expected to be a leader in the summer styles.

Because most of the lingerie gowns will be collarless and with short sleeves, comfort will be characteristic of summer wear.

Linen crash for suits has never been cheaper than at present. It comes a yard wide, and is to be had in innumerable shades.

Marquisette will be as popular as ever this summer. It may be had plain as well as figured, and in all shades and colours.

It is predicted that the lingerie gown will be more popular than ever this summer. Also, that it will be more elaborate than in the past.

Patent leather slippers are always suitable to go with anything, and may be varied by different coloured hose worn with different frocks.

The return of the blouse and separate skirt restore the sash and belt to favour, and they are found in attractive styles in leather and silk.

The predictions are for a white summer for children. However, coloured sashes and coloured hair ribbons will be worn with the little white dresses.

The yoke is seen on many of the new wash skirts. It fits snugly over the hips, while the lower part is box-pleated ,and consequently quite full.

Blues will be the favourite shades for the tailor-made gown this spring. When of the darker shades they will be lightened by touches of yellow and white.

Hip-length coats in Irish crochet or Princess lace are in evidence as the garments, worn as yet, of course, under the opera cloak or street wrap.

Embroidered linen waists will continue in style this summer. An exceedingly pretty model opens a little to the left of the front, the entire front being rich in handwork.

The vogue of the jabot is threatened by the fashion of having coats cut along the line of the Russian blouse, which is so high necked as to make the jabot impossible.

However elaborate a collet may be in itself or in its trimmings, the edge is usually finished with a selvage all around. The selvage varies from a quarter to two inches in width.

White flowers of tulle and other transparent stuffs will be in favour this spring and summer for hat trimmings, those fashioned of braid will be considered especially dressy.

The nun's veiling shirtwaist is very popular for the between seasons, being delightfully light in weight and at the same time warm enough for comfort without an interlining.

The tunic that is straight across the front is in general favour just now. It is not unlike last year's washerwoman skirt in style, and is indistinctly related to the long and overused Moyen age style.

The long-gathered or puffed sleeves completed by a three or four-inch close-fitting muff, almost identical with that which had such vogue several years ago, is now being inserted in the newest shirtwaists.

She scarf cape is made of a single piece of satin a yard and a quarter wide and over twice as long. This is edged with several rows of marabou. When draped gracefully over the shoulders it is most fascinating.

Tunics vary in length to suit the taste and height of the wearer. Some extend to within a few inches of the hem of the gown, while others come but a few inches below the waist line. The lower edge, seemingly, may be as unusual in its outline as the wearer desires.

The peplum, which after all, is nothing but a variation of the loose tunic worn in the days of Rome's supremacy, is coming to the fore this spring. Pattern dresses of silk and fancy woven woollen fabrics are to be had with a peplum, or drapery, having a design which differentiates it from the material of the skirt.

RECORD OF CRIME POLICE HELPLESS

That 200 persons a week are being murdered in this country and crime is costing us $3,500,000 a day, while the police stand practically helpless, is the striking declaration of Mr. Hugh C. Weir in The World To-day (Chicago). He figures that 250,000 persons whom the law never touches are engaged in the systematic pursuit of crime as a business.' Meanwhile the police devote a large part of their time to gathering in "drunks." Out of 786,000 arrests in this country last year, over 350,000 were for drunkenness. It is one of the arguments of the temperance reformer that if drunkenness were abolished the police could give more attention to protecting life and property, and Mr. Weir seems, inferentially at least, to reach the same conclusion. At any rate, crime is rampant and unpunished. Mr. Weir begins with some disquieting remarks on murder:

"Ten thousand persons are murdered in this country every year—shot, strangled, poisoned, stabbed, or beaten with a club or a sand-bag. Of the murderers, two in every 100 are punished. The remaining 98 escape—absolutely free! In many of our States the proportion of convictions is only half as great. In Georgia, for instance, only one murderer in every 100 is punished. In a recent census of American crime, digesting the nation as a whole, the statement was made that in only 1.3 per cent. of our homicides do we secure a conviction.

Chicago's Awful Record.

Chicago averages 118 murders in a year. In the same space of time Paris records only 15 murders and attempted murders. London, four times the size of Chicago, has only 20 murders. In the course of twelve months, Georgia—a typical example of the average American State—records 45 homicides—more than the whole of the British Empire! More people are murdered in a year in this country than are killed on the railroads. In three years the victims of our murder cases total more than the losses of the British army in the Boer War.

"And now we discover that when our poets and our orators and our artists have finished telling of our greatness and our glory, we have fostered wickedness and lawlessness as has no other nation in the world; that, behind our boasted institutions of Government, the thug and the thief and the assassin are operating with a vigour and a freedom duplicated nowhere else in civilization. And our crime and wickedness are steadily increasing.

"There are four and a half times as many murders for every million of our population to-day as there were twenty years ago!

"The significant fact about it all is that the rest of the world does not share these statistics. Our increased wickedness is confined to our own borders. In the march of civilization, as applied to the protection of public life and public property, we have fallen wofully behind. We may lead the globe in many things. We assuredly lead in crime. In 95 per cent of the homicides of Germany, the guilty person is brought to justice. In Spain the number of convictions is 85 per cent. of the total number of crimes. In France, it is 61 per cent.; in Italy, 77 per cent.; in England, 50 per cent. Do these facts—when offset against our two convictions in every 100 murders—explain why we have more homicides, every year than Italy, Austria, France, Belgium, England, Ireland, Scotland, Spain, Hungary, Holland and Germany combined?

Private Detective Corps.

"A number of years ago, the jewelers of America were forced to form a national detective organization to guard their property. The bankers of America have done likewise. So have the hotel-keepers. So have the railroads. They could not depend on the public police. It was cheaper to maintain a police system of their own. Will the people of America also be forced to employ private watchmen?"

The annual cost of crime, as figured in property stolen or destroyed, and in the money spent on Police Courts, jails, etc., reaches the impressive total of $1,873,000,000, yet the police seem helpless. And, as if this stinging indictment of inefficiency were not enough, Mr. Weir goes on to say that what the police lack in efficiency they try to make up in brutality. By the barbarous "third degree," which the writer compares with the Spanish Inquisition in ferocity, any citizen, guilty or innocent, perhaps not even charged with any crime, may be dragged to the police station and put through tortures that wreck him physically, or, worse, unhinge his reason, "and send him forth a hopeless idiot."

When it Comes to Pie, Madam, Words Fail Us

Even in the long ago when the preacher said "Dearly Beloved", even then did we tickle our fancy with the greedy thought that he really meant—PIE.

For pie, in each of its myriad varieties, is the grand wind-up to a joy spread, the last act of a play with a happy ending.

Do you make good pie, Madam—

Pie that is worthy the name, pie that is pie?

Do YOU?

Says the eminent editor of the New York Sun:

"The apex of a wedge of pie "is the alluring overture to a "crescendo of delight which "reaches its climax in the "crust end", and as this "crust becomes part of oneself "one knows what pie is for.

"The "crust end" is the final "cause of pie itself, its raison "d'être, the solution of the "blissfull riddle, why is pie."

But the crust is made of flour, you know, and FIVE ROSES is a wonderful flour for pie crust, and puff paste, and such like.

• • • •

Because, Mistress Housewife, FIVE ROSES makes your paste close grained, even of texture and eating qualities.

Flaky, crinkly, crisp and light, and tooth-teasing, you see.

With a delicate, indescribable flavor, sweet as a nut, tender and rich in color and appearance.

If you should make such pies, Madam, with the FIVE ROSES "crust end"—

Whether of apple, or lemon, or tartlike peach;

Whether of healthy custard, juicy pineapple, glorious mince or dear old pumpkin and squash, or all soppy with the rich red juice of the cherry—

Why, you get the flower of the pie family every time (no black sheep in that family), a truly succulent, tasty article.

With rich filling of your own composition, daintily baked in a crust that leaves no unpleasantness.

• • • •

You need never fear the dire vengeance of an offended stomach, or any calamity due to "inside information"—

If you use FIVE ROSES, Madam.

Then watch the hungry wedges disappear, showing fine appreciation of YOUR culinary skill.

To say nothing of the surreptitious pieces between meals, you know.

There is no more digestible, wholesome article of diet than pie when at its best.

And it is at its very best when wrapped up in a FIVE ROSES crust.

So, Madam, use your own judgment.

Best of All Our Oranges and Lemons Are "Sunkist"

We pick, pack and ship over 20,000 cars of California oranges and lemons each season from our 5,000 groves. These are of varying grades. From all this vast quantity we select the finest—the superior grades—which we wrap in tissue paper bearing the famous "Sunkist" label so that you may know them as the choicest fruit. So be sure to get "Sunkist" oranges and lemons at your dealer's.

He has a fresh supply today.

"Sunkist" oranges ripen on the tree. The warm California sunshine gives a tender, sweet pulp, matured and made exquisitely juicy by Nature.

"Sunkist" Navel Oranges Are Seedless

These oranges are distinct, full-flavor, thin-skinned. They are picked by gloved-hands; thoroughly cleansed; wrapped in "Sunkist" tissue paper; packed carefully to insure firm, unbruised fruit.

How to Tell "Sunkist"

BLACK KNIGHT STOVE POLISH

Has the "Black Knight" come to your home?

Let him show you the quick and easy way to shine the stoves.

It's a paste—so there is no watery mixture to be prepared.

Just a few rubs with cloth or brush brings a mirror-like shine that "you can see your face in". And the shine lasts!

Most dealers handle and recommend "Black Knight" Stove Polish. If your dealer cannot supply it, send 10c. for a big can—sent postpaid.

THEIR LAST DAUGHTER

A Short Story.

It was the day after the wedding. The house ad been cleared of its decorations. The potted plants had been returned to the neighbors who had obligingly loaned them; the left-over cake distributed; the floors swept: the furniture dusted; the rooms aired.

When Mrs. Tabor came in with her shawl over her head for a little consolatory conversation with the newly-bereaved moter she found the house in its normal condition. All traces of the wedding had been removed. And Mrs. Holcomb, looking very calm and comfortable in a dingy old black-and-white wrapper, was setting up a yarn sock for her husband. Mrs. Tabor threw back her shawl, selectedher favorite chair, elevated her feet upon the shining guard-rail of the stove and looked about the room.

"Well," she commented, her glance returning to Mrs. Holcomb, after a torough survey, "I ain't seen you have that wrapper on this good while."

"I ain't worn it in a good while. It's been hanging behind the closet door," replied Mrs. Holcomb, plying her knitting-needles serenely.

"I kinda missed it. I didn't know but you'd give it away. So you've started in knitting again?"

"Yes. I'm going to knit I. D. some blue yarn socks. He's been wanting some this long time. His'n are all worn out."

"I thought mebby now that Marguerite had gone you'd finish up that sofa-pillow top you've been working on so long," suggested Mrs. Tabor.

Mrs. Holcomb's sweet mouth set into firmer lines tan usual.

"I don't expect I'll ever touch it again," she said. "You can have it if you like, Sarah. Somebody's going to get it."

"Twon't be me," laughed Mrs. Tabor. "Land! My fingers are too stiff and old to bother with such new fangled contraptions. It's all well enough for young folks that have plenty of strength and eyesight to waste, but not for an old woman like be."

"Nor me, either," said Mrs. Holcomb.

"I must say you've got everything cleaned up awful quick," resumed Mrs. Tabor. "My! I don't know when I've seen so much sunlight in tis room! And you've got your old knit rug back on the floor, ain't you? And that wooden rocking chair you're setting in—where's that been all this time?"

"Up attic with the rug," replied Mrs. Holcomb. "You know, Marguerite was dretful set against such old stuff. But I. D. and me, we don't feel that way. I set up housekeeping with that chair and that knit rug and the blue set of dishes ma give me."

"That's te way with young folks, Maria," said Mrs. Tabor. "They can't understand our feelings, and mebby they ain't to blame for it. I suppose we do get notional as we get older. You'll miss Marguerite terribly, won't you?" she added, as an afterthought.

"Oh, yes," Mrs. Holcomb said calmly.

"Of course you will. You've had her too ffl ? ffl ? But she's got a nice man and she'll be real happy."

Mrs. Holcomb knit rapidly.

"Yes, she got a nice man."

"You and I. D. must expect to be lonesome," went on Mrs. Tabor. "It was real kind in you to send over that cake. It's saved me baking. Sam will have his cake to top off with, come what will. I'm afraid you didn't save much for yourself."

"I've got plenty," said Mrs. Holcomb. "We don't take much to fancy cake. A plain loaf's what I. D. likes. That makes me think." She suddenly looked interested. "Do you know any place where I can get good buttermilk? I ain't got more'n enough to stir up one batch of cakes with."

"You don't tell me you're going back to buckwheat cakes?" exclaimed Mrs. Tabor. "I thought you were all advocates of breakfast food."

"You don't think right," said Mrs. Holcomb smiling. "Marguerite was the advocate and her pa and I eat it to please her. We're going back to our cakes now."

"We don't have to go back to 'em because we ain't never gave them up," declared Mrs. Tobor. "I'd just as soon think of offering Sam shavings for breakfast as any of that stuff that comes in a pasteboard box. Well," she rose, and adjusted her shawl, "I must go. But I had to just run in for a minute and see how you was getting along. My! It don't seem only 'tother day—does it?—that our cildren was playing together and now they're all gone for themselves. I used to thing mebby Marguerite would stay at home here with you and her pa, but it wan't to be expected when she got a good chance to get married."

"No, we didn't urge her any," said Mrs. Holcomb.

"She was your last daughter," sighed Mrs. Tabor. "Now, don't you and I. D. get downhearted here just by yourselves."

"I guess we won5t," said Mrs. Holcomb cheerfully, seeing er friend to the door. "But run in often, Sarah. Come over this evening, you and Sam, and I'll get out the dominoes and we'll have a game. Do!" Her eyes sparkled.

Mrs. Tabor's sparkled, too. "I don't know but we will, Maria. I'll tell Sam. I don't know when we four have set down to a game of dominoes, do you? Dear, dear, what times we used to have—one house or 'tother after we'd packed the children off to bed. Sam and I often talk of it. Yes, we'll come, Maria. Good-by!"

Mrs. Holcomb closed the door softly and returned to her chair and her knitting. There was a smile on her face which broadened it and smoothed out many of its wrinkles. The old wooden rocking chair, restored to its own, creaked cozily under her weight. The old knit rug felt soft beneath her feet. The fire burned merrily. Serenity and domestic joy seemed to have descended like a dove in the little room. Mrs. Holcomb's contented glance roved about her an dlingered at last at the mantel.

"There!" she exclaimed. "I've just discovered what that self lacks—that pair of old blue vases that used to be on it. I expect they're tucked away upstairs somewhere. Marguerite's gone now and I'll get 'em down."

She drew a long breath. Marguerite! Marguerite! Ever since the girl had come home from the fashionable school to which they had sent er with her name changed from Maggie to Marguerite, with most of the "r's" eliminated from her speaking vocabulary and an acquired taste for face powder, high heels and the guitar, life had been a weary problem for Maria Holcomb. Marguerite had objected to her mother's old cronies, who ate apples noisily and played dominoes on the kitchen table. She had drawn the line at the blue vases and knit rug and wooden rocking-chair. She had induced her father to sit with his coat on and her mother to encase herself in a pair of corsets and to exchange her beloved old wrappers for a kimona. She had banished buckwheat cakes from the breakfast table because of the smoke. She had attached blue-ribbon bows, indiscriminately, and had most of the old furniture painted white. She had made the parlor sofa a thing of misery with and-painted pillows. She had even prevailed upon her mother to discard her knitting and take up embroidery.

Then had come the eventful time when Archie Morse walked home with her from church in the face of the whole community, thus signifying his intention of paying her permanent attention. With the advent of Archie, Maria Holcomb's trials with her daughter increased. The courting had lasted three years and the engagement one. For four long years the parlor had been sacred to the lovers on every winter evening and the front porch on every summer one. Maria and her good man had been wont to frequent the porch themselves, he smoking and she knitting, while some neighbor, perchance, squatted upon the steps for a social chat in the moonlight. For five years, driven from their favorite haunt, they ad crouched patiently upon the back-door stone, smelling the chicken yard and watching the garden grow. This in summer. In winter they betook themselves to the kitchen, whither came softly the sound of many giggles and the strumming of Marguerite's guitar. The Holcombs had old-fashioned ideas of economy and thrift which their youngest child had not inherited. Marguerite loved dress and display and Maria was too often embarrassed to find excuses for the many demands she had to make upon her husband's purse in order to supply Marguerite's demonds for fresh frocks and ribbons. Archie was a stylish dresser and Marguerite's aim was to keep up with him in appearance. Then at last had come the lengthy preparation for her wedding. For days the house was in a hurly-burly of "fixings," and smelled to the heavens of baking cake and broiling chicken.

"I could have scraped rice by the handful off the stairs," thought Maria. "Well, it wasn't wasted exactly, for the chickens got it. Howsomever, I'm glad it's all over, though I wouldn't say it to Sarah Tabor. Let her think if she wants t othat I'm clean broken-hearted over the less of my last child. I ain't. I'm relieved. I ain't seen what you might call a real comfortable minute in four years and I bet I. D. ain't either."

The clock on the mantel struck. Maria rose, rolled up her knitting, which had progressed at a great rate, and went about her supper getting. A thousand remembrances and purposes occurred to her as she worked, stepping with the spryness of youth, her face alight, her heart joyous. She felt almost the same pleasure in her tasks that se had done when she was first married and housekeeping was still a delightful novelty to her.

When at 6 o'clock her husband came home from work he found a smiling wife and a table set invitingly with the old blue ware which had been kept out of sight for so long that he ad forgotten it.

"Well, well?" he said, glancing around at the warm, smudgy kitchen. "It's buckwheat cakes, is it? I smelt 'em the minute I turned the corner. You couldn't 'a' got anything that'd 'a' pleased me better. How purty the table looks! And how purty you look in that dress!"

"Now, pa," protested Mrs. Holcomb, laughing and colouring with pleasure, "stop your blarney and get washed up and set right down to the table. I want you to have your cakes hot from te griddle. Sam and Sarsh are coming over this evening, and I want the parlor het up. We're going to set in there."

"Whew!" whistled Mr. Holcomb. "Ain't you trying to put on airs, M'ri?"

"No, I'm trying to take 'em off," said Mrs. Holcomb. "Now that Marguerite's gone, we're going back to live just the way we used to. I don't know how it'll seem to be setting in my own parlor winter evenings and on the porch summer ones, but I'm going to find out. And we're going to have buckwheats twice a day if we want 'em, besides a good many other things we've been missing right along te last four or five years. I don't know how you feel about it, I. D.," said Mrs. Holcomb slipping a steaming cake from the knife onto his plate, "but I'm lik el was let out of prison. It's pretty hard for old folks like you and me to have to learn new ways of living. We was twenty-five years behind Marguerite or she was twenty-five years ahead of us, I don't know which. Anyway, we didn't hitch. Now we're a one we can do as we please. You can set in your shirt sleeves and I can wear out my old wrappers. I've got everything back just as near as I could th emay it used to be. I've brought the old wooden rocking-chair and rug down from te attic and I've set up some knitting work."

"Well, I'll declare!" said Mr. Holcomb, looking at her admiringly, "I didn't know's you had so much spunk left in you, ma. I ain't heard you go on in this way in years. Is there another cake on the griddle?"

"No, there ain't," said Mrs. Holcomb, rising with alacrit, "but there will be in a minute."

And in peace and security, enveloped by the smoke of the baking cakes the old wedded lovers readjusted their lives and were blissfully happy.

NO DYSPEPSIA OR UNDIGESTED FOOD

Heartburn, Gas, Headache and All Stomach Distress Vanishes.

There would not be a case of indigestion here if readers who are subject to Stomach trouble knew the tremendous anti-ferment and digestive virtue contained in Diapepsin. This harmless preparation will digest a heavy meal without the slightest fuss or discomfort, and relieve the sourest, acid stomach in five minutes, besides overcoming all foul, nauseous odours from the breath.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly printed on each 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily understand why this promptly cures indigestion and removes such symptoms as Heartburn, a feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, Belching of Gas and Eructations of undigested food, water brash, Nausea, Headache, Biliousness and many other bad symptoms; and, besides, you will not need laxatives to keep your stomach, liver and intestines clean and fresh.

If your Stomach is sour and full of gas or your food doesn't digest, and your meals don't seem to fit, why not get a 50-cent. case from your druggist and make life worth living? Absolute relief from Stomach misery and perfect digestion of anything you eat is sure to follow five minutes after, and besides, one case is sufficient to cure a whole family of such trouble.

Surely, a harmless, inexpensive preparation like Diapepsin, which will always, either at daytime or during night, relieve your stomach misery and digest your meals, is about as handy and valuable a thing as you could have in the house.

THE SLIPPERY SPOT

(The Evening Story.)

Salomie had decided to go home when Mrs. Curtis 'phoned asking her to come and spend the day—"the whole day, my dear. I'm not feeling well and I can't think of any one I would rather have with me from morning till night than you. So come as early as you can."

"You must go," said Cousin Laura, when Salomie left the 'phone an instant to consult with her. Cousin Laura knew nothing about Salomie's intention of returning home forthwith. "She has evidently taken a fancy to you, and she may prove a very profitable friend for you to have, although I myself don't know her so very well."

Salomie would rather Laura had not said that. She always estimated everything according to its ultimate gain or loss; even, Salomie felt, her own sewing visit. She had laid aside her sewing and come up to the city for the first time, at Laura's invitation, expecting to have a bit of vacation and a good time. But it seemed tat Salomie sewed very nicely and she immediately set her to work altering odds and ends of clothing for herself and the children. Salomie soon found herself bus from morning till night, contriving new garments out of old ones. Of course, Laura helped, but Salomie did all the cutting and planning and putting together. It really very disappointing after what she had looked forward to—music and plays and all the wonderful things which a city has for sightseers. Moreover, Laura seemed to hold them all very lightly.

"Sandy Bar?" It's a vey rowdy western pla, Salamie. I'm sure you wouldn't care for it. And that new soprano who sings Tosca isn't worth listening to for a moment. The stores? They're a little past their best at this season, you know. As for the Musee, why, nobody visits it now. It's a bit old-fashioned, and, too, one has to make a day's journey to reach it, but of course, if you insist——"

Salomie never insisted. She stayed patiently in and sewed, while the great, happy, hearty city beckoned to her from the rollicking streets. After ten days ,during which she had gone to church twice, to the theatre once and to a single store on a meagre shopping trip for Laura and the children, she made up er mind that she was going home. That morning Laura had resurreceted an old black silk dress an dsubmitted it to Salomie for suggestions.

"You do so beautifully, dear," she said plausibly, "quite as well as Miss Duval, who is so high priced. And you cut closer. That makes me think that perhaps you can get me a slip out of this for my lace body——"

Salomie caught her breath. Another task! She felt as if she could sink through the floor. She hated to den Cousin Laura, and she hated to attack that old black silk. She colored; tears came. What should she do? She would have to go home to escape! Just then te bell rang and Mrs. Curtis called her to the phone.

Mrs. Curtis had called one day and surprised Salomie in a struggle with an awful old waist which Laura plaintively desired to get a little more wear out of. Mrs. Curtis had stayed and stayed and been emboldened to lay aside her work and talk to her. It was very nice in Mrs Curtis to invite her, and she was glad that Laura approved of her going.

"Now, I wonder," Salomie thought, laughing a little as she was getting ready. "If she has someting for me to make over. Tears came into her eyes from sheer nervousness. "Tonight I shall tell Laura that I'm going home to-morrow; that will save making over that old black silk. Oh, dear, maybe I'm ungrateful for her hospitality, but I wish I had never come. I haven't seen one single thing I wanted to and I'm going to just feel ashamed to go back home and tell folks that I sewed the whole blessed time I was here."

"You had better take a car," Laura said when Salomie came down dressed in the pretty suit she had taken such pride in while prep ring to come to the city. But Salomie demurred uneasily. She ad a horror of the flighty things which were quite as apt to leave one stranded in the midst of menacing traffic as to take one aboard.

"I'll walk," she said. "I'm sure I shan't have any trouble in finding the place."

"You won't if you follow my directions," said Laura, and repeated them again impressively, while Salomie listened with all her ears.

"If I get lost I can ask a policeman to find me," she reasoned as she set forth, feeling a pleasant sense of adventure. Surely this day must be different from the ten that had preceded it. When she thought of it, Mrs. Curtis did not seem to be a woman who would thrust anything unexpectedly disagreeable upon her.

"I don't believe she wears made-over things," thought Salomie.

It was a heavy, gra ymorning with just enough ice on the pavements to make one look well to one's footing. But secure in her new rubbers Salomie skimmed merrily along. Her way led trough a comparatively quiet section of the city i nalmost a straight line, and she had a very clear idea of where she was going. As she walked her blood quickened and she became light-hearted. There were few people abroad and these were mostly business men hurrying to their work. Of one of them Salomie took special note. He was coming toward her with such a free step, whistling gayly a bit of tune that she remembered to have heard somewhere. His shoulders were fine, his skin clear; he looked healthy and happy and boyish, as if he had just come out of the country and had not yet got used to the prevalent idea of treating people collectively as if they weer a mass of sheep. It seemed to Salomie somehow that he regarded her as an individual of more or less importance, just as she regarded him. Their eyes met. Then before they could disentangle their glances, he slipped, sprawled, clutched at nothing and went down slap bang at er very feet in a big pitiful heap of helplessness.

It was the most unexpected thing that could have happened, and because it was unexpected an dshe was nervous enough to become hysterical at the least thing, Salomie began to laugh. She laughed until the tears came, though she tried her best not to, and hated herself for appearing such a fool. It was horrid and brutal in her, but she could not stop—literally could not, though she pinched herself as hard as she could. The man laughed, too, when he had picked himself up, but in quite a different manner. His nice, smooth face was scarlet.

"Oh, I hope you aren't hurt," Salomie blurted out when she could speak.

"Not at all, thank you. I did it on purpose," he said, coldly. He adjusted his hat, gave a jerk to his coat collar an dstrode past her, with his head held very igh. Salomie knew, for she glanced back at his over her shoulder.

"I did a wicked thing as I was coming here," she confided to Mrs. Curtis, who received her charmingly in a room that was unlike any of Laura's as possible. "I laughed at a poor man who fell down almost at my very feet."

"It was no laughing matter to him, I dare say," said Mrs. Curtis. She was a calm-eyed, middle-aged woman, with no children and a husband who was up to his ears in business and who, therefore, had not so much time as he should have had for his wife and his home.

Before the day was over Salomie decided that she was glad she came, for she liked Mrs. Curtis better than almost anybody she had ever seen in her life. No to-be-made-over garments appeared; indeed, the subject of dress was never mentioned. Instead, there was a basketful of Angora kittens and endless pictures and bric-a-brac and books to be looked at. They lunched alone, waited upon by a dainty maid. And afterward Mrs. Curtis played all the latest operatic music delightfully, with the aid of the pianola. It was, indeed, a wonderful day, which ended all too soon, for as dusk began to creep in around the high apartment buildings Salomie was warned that she must return home.

"Wait until my nephew comes home and he will accompany you back," Mrs. Curtis said, but Salomie would not. She had promised Laura to return at a certain hour and she was not one ever to break her word if she could help it. So she bade her friend a lingering farewell and started ome alone. She was very happy, so happy that she became a little heedless of how and where she stepped. The pavements were fast becoming dangerous, for the increasing cold was glazing them over with a thin scale of ice.

As she approached the spot where the accident of the morning had taken place she thought of it and felt again an absurd desire to laugh. But the desire vanished as she saw suddenly coming toward her around a near-by corner the very man of whom she was thinking. He was whistling the same little tune he had been whistling that morning, and his face shone fresh and cheery among the many pale, jaded ones which everywhere met her eyes. Salomie thought regretfully of the way she had laughed at him that morning and the colour sprang to er sensitive face. In that instant her feet touched the fatal slipper spot, flew out from under her, and down she went, flat as a apncake with a distressing jolt that seemed to loosen her very teeth, to say nothing of every bone and muscle in her body. Her hairpins flew to right and left and her hat joggled over her eyes. She pused it back and gasped for breath.

"I beg your pardon! Are you hurt?" He was bending over her and he was not laughing. Instead he looked quite solicitous as he extended a hand and helped raise her to her feet, for the other seemed unwilling to bear its share of her weight.

"Why don't you laugh?" she asked, feeling as if all the merriment was crushed out of her forever.

"Laugh," he said, "when you're hurt! It's your left foot, isn't it? And there isn't a cab in sight."

"I think I can get back to Mrs. Curtis'," said Salomie, "and from there I can telephone to Laura to send for me."

"Mrs. Curtis! What Mrs. Curtis?" e asked quickly.

"Mrs. Randolph Curtis. She lives in the Arlington and——"

"Oh," he interrupted, joyfully. "She's my aunt. I'm living with her while I'm in the city. I'm going there now. And I'll help you along if you'll let me."

Hopping, limping, leaning upon his strong arm, Salomie at last reached Mrs. Curtis' apartments. Mrs. Curtis herself admitted them.

"For heaven's sake, what has appened, Paul?" she cried.

"I fell down," explained Salomie—"just where he fell this morning. And he saw me. But he didn't laugh."

"I guess not," said Paul. "She has sprained her foot, I think."

And so she had. It was two days before Salomie could be removed from Mrs. Curtis' apartments and then she went in a cab to Laura's. And from there home. During the time se and Paul became well acquainted.

"Are the Westmore sidewalks as slippery as these are?" he enquired at parting. "Because, you see, I'm coming out there before the winter is over—that is, if you are willing, Salomie."

"Oh," said Salomie gladly, with a happy blush, "I—I'm willing."

But Paul had already seen from her face that she was.

THE CITY'S CALL

(A Short Story.)

Peter came home to supper to find Sabina in that state of excitement which has as its consequence tousled hair, flushed cheeks and shining eyes. She had been spending the afternoon at Mrs. White's and Mr. White had as her guest Lucia Stilson, who was Lucia Jones before she married little Gus Stilson and went to New York to live.

"Oh, Peter," began Sabina, spilling the tea unheedingly as she poured it, "I had the loveliest time! I wish you had seen Lucia. She's so improved. The city has done it, of course. She had on a wisteria gown of the very latest style and her hair was all done in puffs and curls. If I live till to-morrow I'm going to take my hair combings to Miss Moore and have her make me some puffs.

"Is that my tea in the cup?" asked Peter patiently.

"Yes, it is. I forgot to give it to you. Oh, Peter, I wish you could hear Lucia talk about New York. Why, the things she tells are wonderful. She goes to the theatre every week and she speaks just as commonly of the subway and elevators as we do of—of the bridge. She lives in a flat—the dearest place, she says. They pay $25 a month, and it's quite near the park. She says she and Gus spent every pleasant Sunday afternoon this summer in the park. She says she wouldn't be back here in Westmore for anything in the world."

Peter ate his supper and wondered what was coming next. He found out presently.

"And to think I've never been to New York in my life!" mourned Sabina. "You don't know how behind hand I felt while Lucia was talking. Oh, Peter, what do you think? She says Gus will help you to get a job down there if you like? She says you could make twice as much there as you do here."

"And spend twice as much," commented Peter under his breath.

"What say?" Sabina, intent on her own thoughts, caught only the murmur. "Oh, Peter, I wish you'd go! I do wish you would. We're young people, and it's perfectly awful for us to stay cooped up here in this hole of a town when we might be out seeing something of the world and having a good time for your money."

"That's the first time I ever heard you call it that," said Peter, dryly.

"It—that? What do you mean?" demanded Sabina, pausing with a morsel of cake midway to her mouth. "But I don't care what you mean. What I care about is your slaving yourself to death here when we—you might be having a good time in the city earning big wages. Lucy says that just now there's a great demand for skilled workmen like you."

Peter, who read the paper and knew all about trade unions and strikes and other disadvantages of the kind which did not trouble peaceful Westmore, quietly turned the trend of conversation from himself by asking:

"When's Lucia going home?"

"I don't know exactly," replied Sabina.

Peter, having finished his supper, rose, lit his pipe and sauntered out to feed his chickens. During the days that followed Sabina spent a great deal of time with young Mrs. Stilson at the Whites, and became so enthusiastic about the city that she couldn't talk of anything else.

Sabina had lived in Westmore all her life and knew very little of any other part of the world. To her New York had always been a kind of Mecca—the ultimate destination of one's pilgrimage toward delight and knowledge and fashion. She read eagerly all she could find in Peter's daily newspaper about the doings of the 400. She had studied pictures until she was sure she could name any of the skyscrapers at sight. Any one who came from New York or had been there had the deepest interest for her. Indeed, with Sabina the New York idea had become rather an obsession. Peter, on the contrary, cared no more for New York than he did for Timbuctoo. Peter was content with Westmore, which gave him a good living, and he saw no sense in going a-roaming to strange places. Taken all in all, he was very much of a stay-at-home. He liked his own house and the small pleasures and diversions he was used to. Sometimes he found it hard to understand Sabina, who was so different from himself—a very butterfly of restlessness and inconstancy to his personal gods.

Sabina was determined now, after listening to Lucia Stilson, that Peter should take her to New York to live. She would give him no peace until he let her have her own way. She hated Westmore more and more each day. One looked like a dowdy because one had to buy what the shops offered, and the shops were distinctly behind the times. Morning, noon and night Sabina urged Peter to give up his work in Westmore and go to New York. And morning, noon and night Peter, silently listening, planned how he would emancipate his headstrong little wife from this idea that had seized her without losing a bit of her love and confidence.

"When did you say Lucia was going home?" he asked again one day.

"She's going day after to-morrow," replied Sabina, who from the looks of her nose and eyelids seemed to have been comforting herself with a good cry.

Peter considered thoughtfully. "Well," he said at last, gently, "I guess you'd better get ready and go with her and take a look at the city. You can stay a week. There's nothing to hinder. And when you get back, if you like it as well as you thought you would, why, I'll pull up here and see to getting a job—"

"Peter!" Sabina had flung herself around the table and into his arms, hugging him ecstatically, kissing him with amazed gratitude. "Peter! You dear old darling! How good you are! That's the very thing I wanted to do. Lucia will be pleased to death to have me go home with her, I know.

Peter sighed. After he had gone to work Sabina tore over to Mrs. White's to tell Lucia the good news and then tore back again to get ready for the journey. That night Peter opened his worn purse and took out five $10 bills and laid them in Sabina's hands. They represented the greater part of his months' wages. Sabina looked at them doubtfully.

"Why, I shan't need all this," she said.

"You may. New York's a bad place to be in without plenty of money And it goes faster than you'd think."

"Oh, I know that,' Sabina said. She already felt quite experienced. Then a thought suddenly struck her. "Didn't you say you'd been there?" she asked.

"Yes, I've been there," answered Peter calmly.

Two days later, Sabina, looking very pretty, and very excited, clinging to her suit case with one hand and her purse with the other and conscious of a hard lump on her chest where the greater part of her money was pinned in a tiny bag to her waist, as Lucia suggested, set forth with her friend to the metropolis. Peter accompanied them to the station.

"He hates to have me go," Sabina thought, remembering that this was the first real separation of their married life.

Once on the train Sabina smoothed her new gloves and rearranged her new veil and wondered if any one else in the world had ever been as happy as she was. She was so happy that she forgot to be sorry for Peter, who must stay alone in the house for a week, eating the pies and cake and bread she had baked up for him. Probably it would be a long week for him. For Sabina it did not seem half long enough. Still she would make the most of it every minute. Peter was, indeed, lonely, but she had faith in his scheme, which was the result not of inspiration, but of his own younger experience. It was dreary coming back to the empty house that first night and eating from the same dishes he had used at noon. The pantry shelf was piled with unwashed dishes, the bread which he had forgotten to put back in the jar was hard and a mouse had been at the pie. Then, after he had eaten and had sat down with his pipe and newspaper, he missed Sabina's bright presence opposite under the lamp! That night he found a great hole in one of his socks and a rip in his coat lining. The third night, as he sat miserably at his supper, thinking that to-morrow he must have old Mrs. Tripp, whom he hated, in to clean up for him, the evening train sailed into the station, blurring the saffron evening sky with its trail of smoke. Ten minutes later the hotel bus stopped at the door, the door opened and in ran Sabina, with her veil dangling and her hat over one ear, straight to Peter's arms. He held her close, and for a moment all she could do was to sob against his shoulder. Such a pale, dilapidated little Sabina was she. Yet, as Peter looked at her she had never seemed so beautiful, and his plain, anxious face received back its old look of imperturbability, with a small mixture of triumph. If Peter had been a woman that look would have meant, "I told you so!"

"Well," he said, when he had Sabina in a chair with her hat off and a cup of hot tea before her, "how did you like New York?"

"Oh, Peter!" Sabina gasped, turning wan eyes upon him. "It's the worst place! Why I was scared to death from the minute I left the train at Weehauken until I had safely boarded it again. With those taxicabs whizzing all ways and the trolley cars flying by and the elevated and subway and the people crowding and pushing each for himself and Old Nick take the hindermost, your life isn't safe a minute. Lucia said I'd get used to it! She did. But she was never as timid as I am. I wouldn't live the way she does for the world—up three flights of stairs and burning gas all day in the kitchen so as to be able to see, and not a bit of fresh air in the bedrooms! Think of paying $25 for a place like that! She said it was a stylish neighbourhood and you paid for the neighbourhood! Humph! I didn't dare to move hardly for fear I'd pull something off the wall or upset something, it was so crowded. And the noise—I dont' believe I slept two straight hours. They took me uptown to the theatre last night and the policeman stopped the car till they could pick up a man that had been run over, Lucia said that was a common occurrence. She said I wouldn't mind it after a while. Wouldn't mind having folks killed under my very feeet! Suppose it had been you! I never enjoyed the place one mite for thinking about it. This morning I told Lucia I had to come home. I guess she wasn't pleased, but I dont care; I couldn't 'stand it another minute."

Peter drew a breath of relief.

"Then you wouldn't want to live there?"

"Live there, Peter!" Sabina shook her head at him solemnly. "I never want to see another taxicab or trolley car as long as I live!" Then, as he came to her and put his arms about her and drew her tired, whirling head upon his shoulder, she added humbly, "Westmore's good enough for quiet folk like you and me, Peter, yet a while."

And Peter, the wise and prudent, smiled thankfully above her head.

Suffered Terrible Pains From His Kidneys.

Perhaps no other organs work harder than the kidneys to preserve the general health of the body, and most people are troubled with some kind of kidney complaint, but do not suspect it.

There is no way of getting the kidney poisons out of the system except through the kidneys, and no medicine so effective in taking them out as Doan's Kidney Pills.

They help the kidneys to flush off the acrid and poisonous impurities which have collected, thus clearing out the kidneys, bladder and urinary passages.

Doan's Kidney Pills are entirely vegetable, and may be safely taken by old and young.

Mr. Dougald A. McInnes, Broad Cove Banks, N.S., writes:—"I was troubled with my kidneys for nine months, and suffered with such terrible pains across the small of my back all the time that I could hardly get around. After taking two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills I began to feel better, and by the time I had taken three I was completely cured."

Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

INSTRUCTIVE LECTURE

His Honour Judge Huycke gave a very interesting and instructive lecture on the 'Legend of the Holy Grail,' at the Y. W. C. A. last night. The speaker handled his subject in a manner that showed considerable thought and study, and the lecture proved a rare treat to those who heard it. Judge Huycke is a very pleasing speaker, and his lectures are always an intellectual treat. He has consented to give another talk on the same subject in the near future.

Mr. T. F. Matthews acted as chairman of the meeting and the proceedings opened with a piano solo by Miss Kathleen Burnett, followed by a vocal solo by Miss Kathleen Martyn, which were very much appreciated. At the close of the lecture a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Judge Huycke for his very able lecture.

Butchers'

Geo. Rowntree bought for the Harris Abattoir Company 200 cattle, as follows: Butchers, 25 to $5.20, and a few lots of top-notch cattle at $5.25 to $5.30; cows, $3 to $5.10; bulls, $4.50 to $5.60. Mr. Rowntree bought two of the finest loads of cattle that he has handled this winter. These cattle were brought on the market by Isaac Groff, and were fed by Messrs. E. Snider of Elmira, and J. Shantz of Waterloo, who both deserve great credit for knowing how to finish cattle, and doing it.

Milkers and Springers.

Trade in milkers and springers is not nearly as strong, and prices were reported at $30 to $55 each.

Veal Calves.

About 200 veal calves sold at $3 to $8 per cwt.

New York Stock Prices Up.

New York, March 23.—Prices of meat in retail shops throughout the city were advanced Monday from three to five cents a pound, which constitutes one of the most radical horizontal increases ever made in this district, according to the dealers. This action on the part of the retailers, they say, was made necessary through the bounding of prices by wholesalers from one and one-half cents to three cents a pound on all classes of carcasses.

Railwaymen Get Increase.

Chicago, March 23.—An increase of three cents an hour to switchmen and of $5 a month to switch tenders and towermen of several western railroads is granted in a decision of the federal arbitration board, announced yesterday. The increase is retroactive, going into effect Feb. 1, 1910.

Finds Ancient Inscription.

Halifax, March 23.—Dr. Allan C. Johnson, a young Nova Scotian, has made an important discovery at Athens while pursuing his investigations on the Acropolis. While carefully examining the stones which were built into the retaining wall of an ancient cistern, he found on one of these stones an inscription which had previously escaped observation because of its having been built into the wall in such a way that no letters were visible. The stone was removed and the inscription was found to be an Attic decree of 303 B.C., enacted in honor of Nikon of Abydos, for having saved Athenians from drowning in the previous war. This valuable document, which is thirty lines in length, and contains historical information hitherto quite unknown, will be published by Dr. Johnson at an early date. It is worthy of note that his doctoral dissertation had to do with Attic decrees down to 300 B.C., and it must therefore be particularly gratifying to him to have made such an important contribution to the subject of his previous studies.

Dr. Johnson is a graduate of Dalhousie and Johns Hopkins Universities.

Trying to Settle Strike.

Philadelphia, March 23.—The committee of ten, the Rapid Transit officials and State Senator J. P. McNichol, are now in conference at the residence of G. H. Earle, jr., discussing plans for the termination of the street carmen's strike.

The first big break in the general sympathetic strike came yesterday when the journeymen bricklayers, numbering 2,200 men, notified the master bricklayers that they were ready to return to work. The masters will act on the matter to-day, and it is expected work will be resumed to-morrow.

Fugitive Murderer Arrested.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., March 23.—Sheriff McCann of Bangor, Me., who has been in the Soo for several days, yesterday afternoon arrested Guiseppe Stefani on a charge of murder committed in Brockville, Maine, two years ago. McCann was assisted by Provincial Constable Flannigan and Chief of Police Downey. Stefani, who has been in the Soo about six months, is known as James Roy, and was employed at the steel plant. In corresponding with his family mail matter from both ends of the line was sent through another man.

JOLT FOR MR. TAFT.

A Democrat Wins In a Republican Stronghold In Boston.

Brockton, Mass., March 23.—The national political weather cock turned Democraticward in Massachusetts yesterday, when the old colony section, one of the Republican strongholds of the state, placed Eugene R. Foss of Boston, a Democrat, in the Congressional seat of the late Wm. C. Lovering of Taunton. Mr. Foss accomplished what is regarded as almost a political miracle, turning a Republican plurality of 14,250 into a Democratic victory of 5,640. His opponent was Wm. R. Buchanan of Brockton, Republican.

The result is considered of more than state-wide importance, for Foss stumped the entire fourteenth district on national questions. Where the two cities and every one of the 44 towns in the district gave Republican majorities only four months ago at the state elections, a scant dozen remained loyal to the Republicans yesterday.

It was the first contest to be decided by the voters since the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill became operative and had a peculiar interest on that account. Foss, who has figured in several campaigns, first as a Republican, and later as a Democrat, with moderate protectionist leanings, is well known in the northeastern states and in Canada as a champion of Canadian reciprocity, an issue which led him to leave the Republican party last year and become the Democratic candidate for lieutenant-governor. He failed by only 8,000 votes to carry the state at that time.

Niagara Falls Protests.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 23.—Claiming that the tariff war between the United States and Canada would ruin the large volume of business between the two cities on Niagara River, Niagara Falls, N.Y., Board of Trade has passed a strong resolution calling on Representative Simmons and President Taft to maintain the present trade relations.

Letters of protest from big manufacturers who have Canadian branches will also be forwarded.

Another One.

North Tonawanda, N.Y., March 23.—The Board of Trade yesterday adopted resolutions pleading against a tariff war with Canada. The President and Secretary of State are urged to do everything in their power, consistent with the dignity and honor of the Government to continue in effect the present tariff.

Congressman Is Hopeful.

Detroit, Mich., March 23.—Congressman Denby of this district telegraphed as follows yesterday afternoon:

"After a conference with the Secretary of State yesterday, I feel greatly encouraged to hope for a favorable outcome of the Canadian situation. Negotiations are proceeding in the most friendly spirit and all parties are hopeful."

Peace, But Not Yet.

New York, March 23.—The President of the United States spoke in the cause of world-peace last night before a brilliant assemblage at the Hotel Astor. He was the honor guest at the banquet of the Peace and Arbitration League. International peace was the keynote of every address, but no speaker advocated the immediate disarmament of nations. On the contrary, all agreed that armies and navies were necessary until a more Utopian universe shall have come about.

On this point President Taft said: "Because we are in favor of universal peace and in favor of arbitration in order to secure it, we stand together that we are not in favor of one country giving up that which we now use for the purpose of securing peace, to wit, our navy."

Tremendous applause greeted his declarations. He added: "Personally I do not see any more reason why matters of national honor should not be referred to a court of arbitration any more than matters of property or matters of national proprietorship."

CLEVER PETERBOROUGH BOY CONSTRUCTS AND SUCCESSFULLY OPERATES WIRELESS SYSTEM

Mr. Roy Powell Succeeds in Sending Messages Through the Air a Distance of Three Blocks---The Examiner Inspects Complete Wireless Station Which He Has Constructed and Which Works Perfectly---Has Been Studying the Subject for Years and Deserves Great Credit for His Enterprise and Perseverance.

To have completed a wireless telegraph instrument without any assistance, except hints in technical magazines on the subject, is an achievement of which any person might well feel proud, and it is no wonder that Mr. Roy Powell, son of Mr. Geo. W. Powell, 590 George street, is being warmly congratulated by his friends upon his success. That his system is a success has been established beyond preadventure, as it has been operated not once but often, and the experiments have been completely successful.

An Examiner reporter had the pleasure of inspecting Mr. Powell's laboratory and system last night, and found his two hours' visit one of enthralling interest. Mr. Powell has by his own efforts constructed a complete wireless station, and during the reporter's visit sent and received messages to and from another station at the home of Mr. Clarence Miller, on Harvey street, three blocks away. The second station is also the result of Mr. Powell's genius, as he was instrumental in interesting Mr. Miller in wireless telegraphy and in installing the plant there. The two can exchange messages through the mysterious medium of the air waves, without any difficulty, and the Examiner man was privileged to be present at one of these exchanges last night, the demonstration being completely successful.

"We are not experts with the Morse code yet," remarked Mr. Powell, "but we are able to send and receive fairly well, and the rest will come with practice."

The reporter had the pleasure of adjusting the apparatus over his head and received his first wireless message.

"Tick, tick-tick, tick," came from the instrument, and the newspaper man felt quite like Jack Binns as he listened to the mysterious sounds. Not being a telegrapher he was unable to understand the message, but was quite satisfied just to know that he had heard sounds transmitted a distance of three blocks, with no other carrying medium than currents of air. The crackling blue flame that buzzed around the instrument added to the mystery of the system, and to the novice there was something weird about the whole apparatus.

It is not possible in these columns, nor is the mechanical knowledge of the writer sufficient to allow of a detailed technical description of the plant which Mr. Powell has constructed, almost entirely himself from descriptions and suggestions in different magazines and books, which deal with the subjects of wireless telegraphy. He has adopted a compromise system which incorporates the good points of some of the best known methods, including that of Marconi. The main point is that by his genius and industry he has been able to complete an intricate system that, as has been demonstrated, has been in every way most successful. He has succeeded in sending a message a quarter of a mile through the air, and on another occasion believes he was successful at three miles, although, as he did not receive the message himself, he is not absolutely certain on that point.

"How far do you think it possible for your plant to send a message?" asked the reporter.

"I have estimated that I should get as far as twenty-five miles with it, as it is constructed at present," was the reply.

Mr. Powell has been interested in the subject of wireless telegraphy since August, 1903, and since that time has been studying the system. He has collected everything he could find bearing on the subject and has a library of valuable literature dealing on the wireless, while several scrap books are filled from cover to cover with clippings, in which all the recognized systems are taken up. These notes have proved of great help to him in his experiments.

The reporter was shown his first effort at constructing a system, the principal item in the apparatus being a compass. With this crude makeshift Mr. Powell was enabled to send a distance of forty six feet, and encouraged by his success persevered in his efforts. His second instrument was far more ambitious, and with it he is enabled to make many interesting experiments, such as ringing bells, lighting incandescent lamps by means of the current through the air from a distance of a yard away. This outfit is one that is most interesting to visitors, as every detail of the wireless system can be seen.

The third apparatus is the one with which he has been making experiments with Mr. Miller, and is by far the most advanced of the three. Mr. Powell has succeeded in getting Mr. Ernest Oke, of Ashburnham interested in the subject, and a third station is under course of construction at his residence.

Mr. Powell has shown his genius in several useful inventions around his home. One in particular attracted the attention of the reporter. Mr. Powell styled it his pilot lamp. The apparatus consists of a small incandescent lamp placed near the switchboard, controlling the lights in the house. When the switch is turned on the lamp is placed in series with other lamps throughout the house so that it is possible to detect at once if there is a light burning anywhere in the house. It is thus very useful when one is retiring as it saves the trouble of going over the house to make sure that none of the lights are burning.

ASKED FOR ASSISTANCE

Deputation Consisting of Representatives From Counties of Peterboro and Victoria Waited Upon Hon. Mr. Graham at Ottawa Yesterday.

RE BUILDING A BRIDGE

The Little Bob bridge at Bobcaygeon was the subject of a deputation which was in Ottawa yesterday (Tuesday) to solicit government contribution to the cost of the new level bridge. The party accompanied by Hon. J. R. Stratton and Col. Sam Hughes, was composed of the Warden of Victoria county, Mr. J. R. McNeillie, clerk and treasurer; Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, county solicitor, and Mr. Frank Moher, warden of Peterborough county. They were cordially received and courteously heard by the Minister of Railways and Canals. The proposal is to construct a new level bridge across the Little Bob just out of Bobcaygeon in the township of Verulam. It will be remembered that this is a boundary bridge in law, if not in fact, a legislative enactment having so settled a long standing source of trouble between the counties, the agreement having been arrived at to divide the cost of maintenance between Victoria and Peterborough counties in the proportion of three quarters and one quarter, respectively. The bridge having become dilapidated, it is found necessary to build a new structure and it is proposed to build a level bridge reducing it to two spans and further filling in the approaches at either end.

The grounds upon which the government is asked to contribute a portion of the cost are that the raising of the waters for canal navigation purposes, has increased the length and deepened the necessary fill and consequently increased the cost of the structure. The matter was presented to the minister, who promised to look into the matter and give the request the consideration it deserved.

TELLS IN DESCRIPTIVE DETAIL HIS EXPERIENCE IN ROGERS PASS SNOWSLIDE

The following is an extract from a letter received by Mr. T. J. Soucie, of this city from his brother Edward, who was in the accident at Rogers' Pass.

"I was in the accident at Rogers' Pass, and came out without the slightest injury, also eleven of my crew out of thirteen. Two of my men were killed. How we got out of it alive, is a miracle. We are the only white men that escaped, with the exception of the fireman on the locomotive. He had his arm and leg badly crushed, but will recover. We got another man, the conductor, out alive, but he died in an hour, while I was cutting his clothing off. He was terribly bruised and crushed.

There were in all about 65 men buried and lost their lives as near as I can figure out. There were 20 white men and the remainder Japanese. There were about 10 in all working at the slide.

The report of my being buried 300 feet is not true. I ran about that for, the same as the rest of us, that were saved. I never lost my footing and carried a lantern, which I did not let go, and it did not go out. It was the only light we had. When all was over the scene of desolation and destruction cannot be explained in words.

The men who got out ran down the track, fearin ganother slide, and I ran after them to try and get them to come back and endeavour to rescue some of the men, but found they had all lost their shovels, so I returned myself and found everything Rotary snow plough, engine covered by the snow. There wasn't a sign of anything, except in one place where steam was gushing up through the snow from the engine, which was turned over. The rotary plough and an engine almost as heavy as the track, fearing another slide, and I a deep cut right up on top of the bank. If it had not been that the snow was hard, from the slide that came down previously from the opposite direction, there would not have been one saved. Had the slide occurred in day time there would have been no loss of life, as it could have been seen coming. It travelled almost a mile and a half.

Since the accident they cannot get the men to work at night. Since coming back to Golden I was called to a slide near here, and refused to go or allow my men to go.

The papers are full of all kinds of reports, but a great deal of them are untrue. Myself and my men are the only ones who can give a true account of the slide and we were not there when the reporters came. Waters of a mile away, and got shovels and all went to Rogers' Pass three quarels and an engine and all the men that would volunteer. My men all turned out though some of them were shaken up.

I have just got a message that they have found the body of John McLennan, one of my men. He is to be buried in Revelstoke, and I will attend his funeral, if I can get through, but there are two slides west of Rogers' Pass and trains may be blocked.

There were seven foremen ond the assistant road master at the slide and I was the only foreman to escape. The road master was only there 10 minutes before, but had gone to the telephone half a mile west at a watch house, and when he returned there wasn't a sign of life. He supposed everybody was buried, as we had gone to Rogers' Pass for help. He was almost crazy. His brother was killed. He returned to the telephone and called up Revelstoke and said everyone was killed in the slide. So they rang the fire alarm and summoned everybody to the station and they got 5 coach loads of men to volunteer to go, and were on the scene of the accident in less than 3 hours, a distance of 50 miles.

WAS SAVED BY HIS DOG

WAS A NARROW ESCAPE

Special to The Examiner:

Ottawa, March 22.—Alexander St. Jacques, of Gracefield, some fifty miles north of Hull, while crossing the Gatineau River, was saved from drowning yesterday by his collie dog. St. Jacques, who is a mail carrier, was driving across the river on the ice when his team broke through. While struggling in the swift current the dog seized him by the neck of the coat and kept him above water until help came and he was rescued.

LONG HAT PINS BARRED IN CHICAGO HENCEFORTH

It Will be a Misdemeanor to Wear Them in the Windy City After This---City Council Passes Ordinance in Spite of the Hisses of the Crowd of Women in the Galleries.

Special to The Examiner.

Chicago, March 22.—It is now a misdemeanour for any woman to wear long hatpins in public places in Chicago. Any woman caught wearing one is liable to arrest and a fine of $50. After a month's discussion, the City Council, by a vote of 68 to 2, last night passed an "anti-hatpin" ordinance. It was passed in spite of many hisses and 'boos' from the galleries, where a crowd of women had gathered to protest against the measure, on the ground that the city had no right to attempt to regulate women's wearing apparel, and that long hatpins often at night formed a woman's only weapon of defence.

The ordinance decrees that "no person" while on the public streets or in any street or elevated car or public elevator or other public place shall "wear any hatpin the exposed point whereof shall protrude more than one-half inch beyond the crown of the hat in which such pin is worn."

BODY OF B. L. RAPLEY WAS FOUND IN NAPANEE RIVER

Special to The Examiner:

Napanee, March 23.—The fate of B. F. Rapley, the young commercial traveller, who disappeared so mysteriously from his hotel here last fall, and for information concerning whom a reward of $500 was offered, is no longer in doubt. His body was taken from Napanee River two and a half miles from here this morning. His face was badly decomposed, but identification was established by his cuff links, ring and order book, which was still in his pocket.

"Fluffy Ruffles" Coming Here On March 29th

It seems to have been pretty generally overlooked by the newspaper fraternity elsewhere that the character of "Fluffy Ruffles," which Florence Gear impersonates in the merry musical comedy of that name which will be seen at the Grand on Tuesday next, March 29, has been patterned after their own guild. "Fluffy Ruffles" is a reporter, and no reporter in real life ever stuck to an assignment more perseveringly than does this stage prototype of the craft in running down her big story. There have been many attempts to transport the reporter to the stage. The result heretofore has nearly always been a palpable exaggeration. There was a play produced a couple of seasons ago, entitled "The Stolen Story," which introduced an almost human reporter. "Billy Woods" was his name, but like all exotics "Billy" was short lived. One would not ordinarily look for a very careful character study in a musical comedy. Nevertheless Florence Gear, who apparently is not content to make her bid for popular favour solely through the gifts that nature has so very generously bestowed upon her, must have devoted considerable thought to the purely dramatic side of the character of "Fluffy Ruffles." She brings out quite clearly the generally recognized traits of the wideawake, resourceful reporter. And Miss Gear does this without sacrificing any of the comedy possibilities of the part. In fact, she is even more droll and unctuous than she was last season in "Marrying Mary," when it became patent to the theatre-going public wherever she appeared that she must be given rank with the very best comediennes of the day. All hail to Miss "Fluffy Ruffles" Gear, reporter and comedienne.

A PROSPECTOR'S LUCK

How Two Trail Blazers Lived in the Virgin Wilderness Without Meat.

Winter sends acute hardships to the prospector who leaves civilization to draw conclusions with chance, in the endeavour to make a paying "strike" and make himself independent for life. How the hardship of a depleted pack was overcome by two sturdy adventurers is evidenced by the following, prompted by the impulse of real appreciation:

Porcupine Trail, Ont.,
Feb. 6th, 1910.

Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Co., Limited, London, Ont.

Gentlemen,—Have prospected these parts for several months, removed from civilization, difficult to get supplies, obliged to draw loaded toboggan for miles through bush, snow four or five feet deep, forty three or more miles from settlement, carrying only tent, prospector's outfit and grub for thirty days. A case of your Corn Flakes was one of the articles taken in, the writer's favourite breakfast dish. This proved a very valuable pack as we ranshort of supplies and for days subsisted on one full meal; excepting a breakfast of Corn Flakes, canned cream and coffee. We gauged our supplies to make them last until our return to Porcupine Lake; but ran short and rather than make the eighty mile journey, cut rations and fairly lived on Corn Flakes for eight days, having two full meals a day on this food and the latter few days without cream, merely Corn Flakes, sugar and hot water.

We thrived on it; did full days' work, even more than formerly, as we rushed things to completion, and two healthier, stronger and fleeter fellows than we haven't travelled these trails. We finished the case of Corn Flakes; and one of our first purchases was another. It is a favourite article of diet in our camp and we will always recommend it to others.

In a country like this, Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes are worth more than their weight in gold. We are pleased to sing their praises, as we benefitted greatly by them, and at a time when it meant much to us.

Very truly yours,
Merry Christmas,
P. SHEEHAN.

THREE WOMEN DROWNED BY UPSETTING OF BOAT

Triple Fatality on Semple Farm, Teeswater, in Which Mrs. Semple, Her Daughter and Mrs. Elliott, From England, Lost Their Lives---One Girl Was Rescued.

Special to The Examiner.

Teeswater, March 22.—A very sad drowning accident occurred at Semple's farm, four miles from here, when Mrs. Semple, her daughter, Crissie, and Mrs. Elliot, a relative from Liverpol, England, were drowned in the Teeswater River. Mrs. Elliot's daughter, Miss Elliott, was the only one of the party saved. The river runs through the Semple farm just below the house, and they intended rowing up the river and crossing over to a neighbour's, but, owing to the swollen condition of the river and the strong current at this spot, the boat was swept down and overturned before they had taken hold of the oars. The accident was seen by Miss Kate Semple, and she immediately called her brother, who managed to rescue Miss Elliott as she was being swept around a bend in the river. The bodies of Mrs. Elliot and Mrs. Semple were recovered at Grant's bridge, a half a mile away, but Miss Semple's body has not yet been found.

Will Try To Arrange Settlement Of Claims For Damages By Sewer

A meeting of the Board of Works was held last evening, when several matters were discussed. Those present were Ald. Hicks in the chair, Mayor Morrow, Ald. Metheral, Graham, Duncan, Phelan, Gillespie, Duffus.

A letter from the Peterborough Light and Power Co. was read, offering to supply a 30 h.p. motor for the stone crusher for twelve dollars per week, if the city would pay the cost of installation or they would give it for fifteen dollars per week and the company pay for installing it. Ald. Duncan moved, seconded by Ald. Phelan that the twelve dollars offer be accepted and that the chairman and Mr. Evans arrange for the motor and current.—Carried.

Mr. E. F. Mason was present and asked that a sewer be built on Antrim St., between George and Water Sts. The City Engineer was instructed to advertise it in the usual way.

On motion of Ald. Phelan, seconded by Ald. Gillespie, the chairman and Mayor Morrow were appointed to settle the claims of Mr. S. Edwards for $52, and that of Miss A. L. Phelan for $150, for damage done to property on London St. by the stoppage of a city sewer. While it was pointed out that the above amounts exceeded the real loss, they will endeavour to reach a satisfactory settlement to all concerned.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall, city solicitor, wrote, stating that Mrs. Cadigan had no claim against the city for the contamination of her well by the septic tank. The city engineer had inspected it and found no leakages. It was therefore decided that no action be taken.

The Cameron Septic Tank Co., wrote claiming an infringment of the patent on the part of the city in the building of the septic tank. They asked, as settlement, 5 per cent. of the cost which is $150. On motion of the Mayor and Ald. Duffus, it was decided to write Mr. Chipman to ascertain what action was being taken by other municipalities and whether he would advise a settlement on the basis suggested.

From Peterborough Hardware Co., quoting cement at $1.65 per barrel, with sacks f.o.b. Peterborough storage and testing six cents extra. The matter was allowed to stand for awhile.

Ald. Morgan was present and asked on behalf of certain residents of East City for a sidewalk to be built on Mark St., from Sophia to Maria Sts. He also said that one was needed on Rogers St. in front of St. Joseph's Hospital and the House of Providence. He made another request to have a fountain built at the corner of Hunter and Mark Sts. Ald. Duncan moved, seconded by Ald. Duffus, that the engineer be asked to report on the cost of a new fountain.

A report from Engineer Chipman, of Toronto, on ways and means for a satisfactory sewerage system in the south and south-west ends of the city was read by Ald. Hicks at the Board of Works meeting last evening. No action was taken in the matter.

THE CASE FOR THE PROSECUTION IN BRADLEY CASE COMPLETED

Special to The Examiner:

St. Catharines, March 23.—The case for the prosecution in the Bradley murder trial was completed this morning by 9.30. Nine of the winesses called by the Crown swore they saw Bradley kick Bulman on the head as the latter lay on the ground.

The defence, which opened this morning proposes to call considerable medical testimony. The case is expected to go to the jury late this afternoon.

DRUNK ARRESTED

Had Too Big a Cargo to be in Condition to Give His Name.

A young man who considered himself supreme ruler of the Bank of Nova Scotia corner, was arrested this afternoon by P. C. McGinty for being intoxicated. Owing to an impediment in his speech and a certain amount of liquor, he was unable to tell his name.

THE BEST ONE OF THEM ALL

A Most Unusual Story Told by "Indian List" Man in Court as to Where He Got His "Joy Water"—Had Traded Coats.

"SMILED, SIMPLY SMILED"

Of all the stories that have been told in court by men on the "Indian list" as to where they got their liquor the following, taken from a Brantford paper, has them all beaten:

"The billed man has tried every conceivable scheme to get liquor, but a new industry came to light this morning in court, when Saunders, who is an Indian lister, and who was charged with being drunk, said he traded his coat to a stranger, and in the coat he got there was a bottle of liquor. The magistrate could not see it that way and fined the defendant $10 and $2.85 costs or one month."

MADRIGAL CONCERT

Conservatory Organization Will be Heard on April 4th.

The Madrigal Club of the Conservatory of Music will hold a concert in the Conservatory Music Hall on Monday evening, April 4, for the purpose of defraying the expenses of sending the Madrigal Club and the Conservatory soloists to Toronto to take part in the Earl Grey competition. A splendid programme will be provided, the Madrigal Club contributing several numbers while the soloists, Miss Choate, Miss Wallis and Miss McGill will also take part and the Conservatory orchestra will be heard. The reserved seat tickets are on sale at 50c. each and may be secured from members of the Madrigal Club or from Macdonald's drug store.

W. E. LECH INSTALS THE NEW HAT CONFORMATEUR

By far the best and most practical article invented for the up-to-date hat store, is the new French Conformateur which has just been added to the modern equipments of Mr. W. E. Lech's hat store, 366 George street.

By this ingenious contrivance results are obtained which are quite impossible to the fastidious dresser by tour is an adjustable instrument by any other method. The conformameans of which the correct shape of the head is recorded in an instant. The result which is obtained by this invention is that individual customers are fitted perfectly, according to the actual conformation of every individual's head. Thus, a long-shaped head gets a long-shaped hat and round-shaped head gets a round-shaped hat. In this way, too, your hatter always retains a correct record of the shape of his customers' heads.

THE QUEEN'S

Toronto, the Queen City of Canada, has much of the beautiful. It is found in the many handsome churches, artistic public buildings, imposing offices, public drives, parks and gardens. Its government buildings are fine. Of hotels there are many; none, however, approaching the Queen's for perfect service, quiet comfort, and homelike surroundings, and the peculiar excellence of its cuisine. Its fame is far-reaching, and many remember with pleasure the hours spent within its hospitable walls. The charges are based on the American and European plan, and are as follows:

CANADA'S SELF-GOVERNMENT.

Great Britain has made many concessions of Canada's status of self-government, in regard to her domestic affairs and even of foreign affairs, bearing upon the promotion of her domestic interests; and Premier Asquith has given further evidence. He stated in the British Parliament yesterday, when the tariff negotiations between Canada and the United States were made the subject of questions, that the Canadian Government had been made fully aware that the good offices of the British Government and of Ambassador Bryce, were at its disposal; but—he significantly added—he declined to discuss the matter further in view of the negotiations that were pending. Further, the London Times, referring to the possibility of tariff war, says the record of Canadian statesmen during the critical weeks of rumour and suspense, have been worthy of the great traditions left by earlier times, and that Canadian Regeship was never used more worthily in connection with a tariff question, and the whole Empire should tender her this praise. The tariff question is not yet settled, but Canadian public sentiment demands that her honour and self-respect must not be the price of any settlement agreed upon.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Under rural mail delivery there are in use 3729 boxes and the cost of the service for the past four years has been $14,031. Naturally the larger proportion of boxes is in the Province of Ontario, that being the most thickly populated.

Canada's progress is well illustrated by the figures of the Montreal Bank Clearing House. During the past ten years tens of thousands of millions of dollars have passed through it. In 1900 the total of bank clearings was 730 million dollars. In 1909 the figures were 1866 millions of dollars.

The discovery of vast quantities of excellent anthracite coal on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, in the Rockies, provides for a supply independently of the Pennsylvania coal fields in the event of a tariff war being declared. In any event the maximum tariff club cannot knock out our chance of getting United States coal. The United States constitution prevents the application of an export duty. The amount of this reported deposit is 800 million tons, enough to warm the northwest for many years to come.

Acoerding to a return brought down in the House on Monday, March 21, the total value of the field crops of the Dominion last year was $532,992,000. The total of the wheat crop was 158,240,000 bushels. Of this total 139,912,000 was produced by the prairie province, Saskatchewan leading the count with 85,197,000 bushels. The total value of the produce of the mines of Canada in 1909 was $90,415,763. Thus it will be seen that the value of the farmer's mine, was six times that of the mineral mines. The farmers' mine is one that, with proper working never "peters out," but will be productive as long as the sun shines and water flows.

WILLIAM THE SILENT

"Now really can't you tell us," we said to Mr. Fielding,
"If in this Presidential chat you showed a sign of yielding?"
The minister smiled blandly, and answered in a trice
"I found the meals at Albany were very, very nice."

"Please, can't you give a waiting world the reason of your going
To Empire State's fair capital, where winds of spring are blowing?"
The light of reminiscence shone within the Fielding eye—
"I never shall forget," he said, "that glorious pumpkin pie."

"There's just another thing," we said, "about those new concessions (?)
Are we to now regard ourselves as one of Sam's possessions?
The public will want to know just where we now are at;"
"I like it underdone," he said, "with just a little fat."

"One final word, can't you just say if Taft is merely bluffing?
And all this friendliness for us is just mere wind and stuffing?"
The minister gazed earnestly, and said within a minute—
"I always like it strong, with just a squeeze of lemon in it."

SYDNEY ROE.

Press Room Ottawa.
March 22.

Note by Printer's Devil:
"Now, could you give the press a tip, re this great negotiation,
So that we could indulge in safe vaticination?"
Across his face we saw a reminiscence come—
'They asked what it would be and straightway I said 'Mumm.'"

A POSITIVE CURE FOR INDIGESTION

If you have indigestion, your food ferments in the stomach and bowels. It does more; it decays, and the nutritious matter which should go to make new blood decays with it, and this leads to an impoverished condition of the blood, to nervousness, biliousness, constipation, sick headache, bad breath which disgusts your friends, and other disagreeable and unpleasant conditions.

And all this trouble is caused by the food that doesn't digest, but ferments and ofttimes rots in the stomach.

And fermentation is caused by the stomach not being strong enough and energetic enough to thoroughly mix the food with the digestive juices.

MI-O-NA is responsible for tens of thousands of cures. In fact, it is such a positive cure for indigestion and all stomach troubles that it is guaranteed by Wm. Madill to cure or money back. The price of a large promptly relieve the worst case of indigestion or gastritis. Try them.

WASHINGTON'S TURN.

The Saturday Review, one of the most influential of British publications, has the following to say in an article discussing the trade relation and changed international attitudes of the United States and Canada:

"The United States commissioners have brought nothing back from Ottawa. Canada will make no concessions in return for the minimum rates of the Payne tariff. That the commissioners should have gone at all is a triumph for Canada. Time was when the pilgrimage was the other way, and it was Ottawa that begged Washington. Now, thanks to her tariff, that time has passed. Canada has pulled through and it is Washington's turn to beg. A prolonged tariff war is too serious a thing to contemplate. The interests involved are too great, and the results would reach too far. There is only one possible end. Canada must and will stand up well to the Americans. Her history is a good guarantee that she will do so, and her strong commercial position in relation to her opponent makes it plain that she will be comparatively successful. Canada will make no concessions without a good return, and once war is declared, she will not be the first to call for peace. There will be no pilgrimage to Washington. The United States will have to withdraw from their present position, for they will get nothing whatever out of Canada as long as they insist upon the maximum rates of the Payne tariff."

GREAT INTEREST TAKEN IN COMING THEATRICAL CONTEST

Interest in the Earl Grey dramatic and musical trophy competition extends from Quebec to Winnipeg, several individual competitors having entered from those cities, and the smaller places in Ontario, such as Peterborough and Waterloo, have shown their courage and ambition by entering musical companies to compete with the best Toronto has." So says the Globe and Mail last Saturday, and to those who do not know it, be it known that the courage and ambition side of this business is that Mr. R. Gliddon and Mr. R. J. Devey have entered the competition for the Earl Grey Musical Trophy and accompanied (each leader) by about fifty voices, propose to take Toronto by storm. Both companies will be heard here. The Geisha Company in the Grand Opera House on March 31 and April 1, and the Madrigal Club on April 4, in Conservatory Hall. A message has come from Col. Denison, Toronto, stating that Dr. Vogt will come to Peterborough to give the entries from here a preliminary hearing, in the course of the next few days —an honour quite unexpected by either of the Peterborough entrants. The caste for the Geisha is a strong one, and as many enquiries have been made about it, the members are given here:

"O Mimosa San, (Chief Geisha), Miss Lavina Hallihan.
"Juliette Diamant" (A French Interpreter) Miss Lilian Dean.
"Nami" (Wave of the Sea) (An Attendant) Miss Leila Beach.
"O Kiku San", (Chrysanthemum) Miss Josie Delaire, Geisha.
"Ottana San" (Blossom) Miss Ruby Quartermaine, Geisha.
"Okinkoto San" (Little Violet) Miss Agnes Horsfield, Geisha.
"Komurasaki San" (Golden Harp) Miss E. Primeau, Geisha.
"Lady Constance Wynne" (An English visitor in Japan, travelling in her yacht) Mrs. J. E. Firth.
English ladies, guests of Lady Constance—"Miss Marie Worthington," Miss Daisy Wood; "Miss Ethel Hurst," Miss Shannon; "Miss Mabel Grant," Miss Stella Collinson; "Miss Molly Seamore," Mrs. R. J. Devey.
Officers of H. M. S. "The Turtle"—"Reginald Fairfax," Mr. Geo. Chandler; "Dick Cunningham," Mr. John King; "George Grimston," Mr. Hickey; "Arthur Cuddy," Mr. R. Sutcliffe; "Tom Stanley (Middy)" Cyril H. Devey.
"Captain Katana" (Governor's Guard) Mr. Lee.
"Takemini" (Sergeant on Guard) Mr. Stacey.
"Wun Hi" (A Chinaman, proprietor of Tea House) Mr. Maclaren.
"The Marquis Imari" (Chief of Police —Governor of Province) Mr. Nat. Greenhalgh.

A splendid chorus supports the above strong caste. A few pointers about the play may be of interest. No less than twenty-six numbers have to be committed to memory, in the short space of two months. This play ran for nearly three years in the Daly Theatre, London, England. In the first act are three numbers, containing unaccompanied part singing, not of the easy variety, and the farewell solos in the finale of Act I., with vocal accompaniments, are gems famous the world over. There is not the slightest doubt of the ambition of Mr. R. J. Devey and his company, in undertaking a work of such magnitude from the staging point of view. But what of the financial end. The mere fact of presenting it in the Grand Opera House here guarantees no small sum, and the Toronto production nearly doubles that. Special costumes, props, make-up, and a hundred things, all swell the expense, but a liberal patronage by the public at the forthcoming performances will bring a balance on the right side.

When children are pale, peevish and restless at night they require a dose or two of Miller's Worm Powders.—Wm. Madill, Druggist.

"FAKE MEDICINES"

are fast being eliminated from the market by the action of the Pure Food and Drugs Law, but there many dependable advertised medicines, such as the Cod Liver and Iron preparation called VINOL, constantly prescribed by reputable physicians who are successful and broad enough to recognize the intrinsic merit of such a preparation. This combination of two world-famed tonics builds up the system when run-down and weakened by sickness or age quicker than any other means.—McDermid & Jury, Druggists, Peterborough, Ont.

OPERA BY WIRELESS

WIRELESS TELEPHONE TRANSMITS MUSIC FROM OPERA HOUSE STAGE

Mizarin Singing Carmen by Wireless Heard Miles Away—Time Not Far Distant When Every Boat Will Hear New York or Paris Opera While Crossing the Atlantic.

You ask if the age of invention is passing. Why, it hasn't started yet. We don't know anything yet. Why, we don't even know what electricity is yet. How can we say that we've reached the limit of a force whose nature we are ignorant of?—Thomas A. Edison.

(By Rene Homer.)

We are living in an age of marvelous things. Scientists are no longer content when they make some wonderful discovery but they must immediately turn it to commercial use and human advantage.

We had all heard in a general way of the wireless telephone, but few of us realized that it was already becoming a factor in the subtle refinements of our modern civilization until the news of the past two months caused us to "sit up and take notice," so to speak.

On January 13 music was transmitted direct from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, to over a score of wireless stations, some of them miles away, and the solos and duets of Caruso and Emmy Destinn in "Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" were heard as far distant as Bridgeport, Conn., and at points nearer wherever wireless operators keyed their instruments up to the proper point to hear the sounds borne on Hertzian waves.

On many steamers in and out of the harbour the music of the grand opera was heard. Especially was the music appreciated on board the Royal Mail Packet Avon, when two hundred and sixty guests of Lloyd B. Sanderson, general manager of the Royal Mail in America, heard Caruso's voice reproduced.

Marooned Passengers Entertained.

K. M. Turner's invention, the dictograph, was used to carry sound from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House to a wireless plant on the roof of the opera house, whence it was sent out by the Hertzian waves.

The tests made at the Hotel Breslin and in the laboratories of Mr. Turner and Dr. Lee DeForest were most successful.

Passengers marooned on ships over night at Quarantine heard the music through the wireless operators' receivers. In Mr. Dippel's office in the Metropolitan Opera House, well away from the stage, the dictograph, connected to a telephone wire, carried the music from the stage through a horn much like those used on phonographs. The horn, known as the multiphone, is also one of Mr. Turner's inventions.

A remarkable thing about the tests was the strength of Caruso's voice, as compared with other voices. Not a note of Caruso was lost.

The veterans of the Metropolitan foyer stood in open-mouthed wonder as they listened to the first trial of De Forest wireless transmission of an opera performance in progress on the stage. The audience was interested, too. The experimental receiver at the front of the house delivered the voices like any talking machine.

Heard at World's Greatest Station.

At the great wireless station of the Radio Telephone Company, in the tower of the Metropolitan Life Building, New York; the exchange of messages with Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, and Key West was stopped long enough for a group of newspaper men to "listen in" and hear the performance. As the Metropolitan Tower contains the largest and best equipped wireless station in the world, reaching up 700 ft. into the air above Madison Square, it was a very easy matter to hear the music in all its beauty and clearness of tone. The harsh notes of the orchestra became soft and wooing like fairy music. The Hertzian waves carried sharps, flats and naturals through the atmosphere without hitch.

That such a thing never entered the wildest dreams of opera singers or producers of a generation ago, it is hardly necessary to state; but the wonders of electricity combined with the increasing knowledge and appreciation of atmospheric vibration has brought the seemingly impossible down to a business basis. The time is not far distant, when a steamer departing from New York will have New York opera every evening until half way to Europe. Then the American music will be shut off, and that given in London or Paris "picked up" by the wireless and continued until the vessel is docked.

Ship Concerts Doomed.

It looks as if the usual concerts given aboard the great sea-going hotels would soon become a thing of the past. No one who travels abroad—unless he wished to see us well as hear—would prefer a cabin musicale to listening to a Caruso or a Sembrich.

Atmospheric grand opera is probably in its infancy; but the pace at which we live and invent and perfect things means that the merely thought-of to-day is the accomplished fact to-morrow. The combination of sound-reproducing machines with improved moving pictures may yet bring about an apparatus which will, in every sense of the term, bring grand opera to the music lover's home, hotel, or steamer cabin without the necessity of standing in line for tickets or purchasing boxes in advance. Anything to save time—and increase our joys, even though they have to be taken on the fly!

When the wireless opera is as firmly established as the telephone itself, there will be only one important question worthy of the name before the producers of such operas. For though this latest invention does much, it is not to be thought that it can eradicate the human attribute that causes more musical upsets among human song birds than anything else—plain every day jealousy.

Mazarin Sings by Wireless.

The comment occasioned all over the world by this performance had hardly subsided before another test of the music-carrying qualities of the wireless telephone was made. Selections from "Carmen" were sung over the roofs of New York, on the afternoon of February 24th.. The feat was performed by Mme. Mazarin, the brilliant new star.

Mme. Mazarin sang into the wireless telephone at the laboratory of Dr. Lee De Forest, at 103 Park Avenue, New York. A small, but select, audience heard the notes on the roof of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Building and applauded the singer over a mile away. A selection from "Elektra" thrilled the distant hearers. It was a strange and weird performance. The audience that heard the opera was charmed by the singer's voice as well as the novelty of the performance.

Between thesongs the wireless operator of the Newark, N.J., station of the Radio Telephone Company, conversed by wireless telephone with Dr. DeForest in New York. During the singing the employees of the factory all listened to the music.

Mme. Mazarin began her performance at 3.30 in the afternoon. She sang the Aria from "Carmen" first, then rested a few minutes before sending forth the terrific, crashing notes of "Elektra."

After the exhibition Mme. Mazarin and the audience at the Metropolitan station were taken to the very top of the 700 foot tower, where they could see away in the dim distance the wireless station on the inventor's laboratory from which the music had been transmitted.

First Wireless Telephone.

The wireless telephone which made possible the accomplishment of this wonder of electricity is the invention of Dr. Lee DeForest, whom electrical men consider the very foremost wireless expert in America. His first successful demonstration of the wireless telephone was in May, 1907, when accounts of the yacht races at Put-in Bay, Ohio, were reported over four miles away by means of the new invention. The first demonstration was so successful that after thorough testing the United States Government equipped all of the battleships of the great Atlantic fleet which was then preparing for its memorable voyage around the world.

The inventor then went to Europe where he equipped several vessels of the Italian Navy and made a record test by sending distinguished sounds by phonograph from the Eiffel Tower to a vessel off Marseilles.

This feat was followed by a thorough trial on the British Navy, where two vessels sixty miles apart maintained perfect communication.

New Noiseless Telegraph.

This invention Dr. DeForest calls the radio telephone. In February, 1909, the inventor of the wireless telephone brought out his new suppressed spark wireless telegraph with which he was able to send messages without any interreference from surrounding stations.

The first record made by this new "radiotone" wireless telegraph was the exchanging of messages between Key West and New York, and its most notable triumph was the sending of two long radiograms from the Metropolitan Tower, New York, to the Railway Exchange Building, Milwaukee, through all interference and during the most adverse weather conditions, a feat never before accomplished. The radiotone noiseless telegraph using only a 2 Kilowatt generator communicates with Key West and Milwaukee, while the United States Government station at Key West requires a 35 Kilowatt generator in order to send back its answer.

Truly the wonders of wireless are astounding, and yet the inventors tell us that the art is only in its infancy. The transmitting of several wireless messages from a Curtiss biplane to the ground at Fresno, Cal., was only the beginning of a practical use of the invention, which will be as common in a few years as the wire telephone is to-day.

Talk Across Atlantic Next.

A trans-Atlantic wireless telephone seems to be the next step in the progress of communication between nations. This ability to telephone without wires results from stirring certain wave movements in the ether, an element about which scientists admit they know little or nothing, and the nature of which they dimly comprehend.

The wireless telegraph established across the Atlantic only eight years ago is now a common adjunct of commerce, and while wireless telephony presents many more difficulties than the telegraph, it is just as practical and we cannot doubt that its range will, in time, be just as great.

When Hertz discovered these etheric or electric waves he never imagined that they could be used for telegraphy, much less telephony.

With wireless telephony accomplished, the next natural step will be the transmission of power by wireless, and imagination can easily picture a giant plant at Niagara Falls or on the shores of the sea, utilizing the motions of the tides, transmitting power to run looms and industrial machines hundreds, if not tansuhoda hundreds, if not thousands, of miles away.

Nervous Headache

AND MUSCULAR RHEUMATISM DISAPPEARED WHEN THE NERVES WERE RESTORED BY

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

Feeble, wasted, starved nerves often make their condition known by nervous headaches. This was one of the first and most marked symptoms.

If you are at all subject to rheumatism you have noticed how much worse it gets when the system gets run down.

Both nervous headache and muscular rheumatism disappear when Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is used to rebuild and revitalize the wasted and weakened body.

Mr. James Riley, moulder for the Waterous Engine Co., 46 Jarvis St., Brantford, Ont., writes: "I suffered for years with muscular rheumatism and as I also had frequent and severe attacks of nervous headache I concluded that the trouble come from the nerves and began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. As I continued this treatment the rheumatism was gradually driven out of the system, my nerves got stronger and steadier and the headaches disappeared. I consider Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a splendid nerve regulator and health builder."

You cannot possibly make a mistake in using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when the nervous system gets run down, for, by forming new, rich, blood this great food cure builds up the nerve cells as nothing else can.

When you have made up your mind to test this treatment, go at it in earnest and keep at it regularly until you feel again the joy of health and vigour.

50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

Do You Suffer From Headaches?

There are few people who have never experienced a headache from one cause or another. It effects all ages and both sexes alike, but the female sex is naturally the more effected through the higher nervous development and more delicate organization of the system. Those also of a nervous temperament and studious or sedentary occupation are subject to it.

The presence of headache nearly always tells us that there is another disease which, although we may not be aware of it, is still exerting its baneful influence and perhaps awaiting an opportunity to assert itself plainly.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for years, been curing all kinds of headaches, and if you will only give it a trial we are sure it will do for you what it has done for thousands of others.

Headache and Constipation Cured.

Mrs. John Connors, Burlington, N.S., writes: "I have been troubled with headache and constipation for a long time. After trying different doctors' medicine a friend asked me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I find I am completely cured after having taken three bottles. I can safely recommend it to all."

CANADA MUST MAINTAIN HER SELF RESPECT---PEOPLE WILL ENDORSE THE GOVERNMENT

Should Retaliation Become Necessary to Preserve the Dignity and Self Respect of the Canadian People, the Government Will be Commended---Trust This Will be Averted---Experience With Germany Sets Precedent.

PONDER OVER THIS.

The United States cannot expect that Canada will give tariff advantages without some reciprocal agreement.

Canada will not be dictated to, or bluffed into making tariff concessions to any country.

If the United States imposes a prohibitory tariff as against Canadian Goods, Canada must take steps to adjust her tariff as against the United States.

This will injure United States more than Canada.

Delicate Operation.

Any tariff change is a delicate operation not to be entered upon without good reason. Commerce proceeds upon the basis of a fixed tariff and to change a tariff that may have been in existence any length of time, unsettles financial and commercial relations, although such changes might be advisable and directly in the interests of business.

Tariff Difficulty.

A difficulty has appeared between the United States and Canada, arising out of the recent changes in the fiscal policy of the United States.

How it Works.

Under the terms of the Aldrich-Payne law, any country which extends to another country a lower tariff than is enjoyed by the United States, may be regarded as "unduly discriminating" against the United States, and shall thereupon be subjected to an extra 25 per cent. ad valorem duty.

French Convention.

Canada recently concluded a convention with France, by which Canada secured certain tariff modifications on specified articles—Canada reciprocated by modifying her tariff upon certain articles imported from France. This was a mutual and reciprocal arrangement between the two countries.

Discrimination Claimed.

The United States is said to take the position, that Canada, by extending certain privileges to France, has unduly discriminated against the United States, and therefore will be subjected to the extra 25 per cent. ad valorem. At present the United States enjoys the benefits of our general tariff and Canada enjoys the benefits of the United States minimum tariff.

Very Unreasonable.

This contention upon the face of it, appears unreasonable. Because Canada, in the exercise of her undoubted right, has concluded certain reciprocal arrangements with a foreign country, why should the United States take the position that there has been undue discrimination against her?

How About Reciprocity?

It would appear that the question for the United States to determine is: "What reciprocal advantages will the United States extend to Canada in exchange for similar advantages?"

Canada cannot, consistent with her self-respect or dignity, regard a suggestion with equanimity which proposes to add 25 per cent. ad valorem to the existing duties against her upon the ground that like privileges had been given a foreign power.

Must be Mutual.

If the United States took the position that there should be mutual and reciprocal arrangement, then Canada might give the matter every consideration. But to hold over Canada a threat of an extra duty unless concessions are granted, does not appear to be supported by any argument founded upon equity or reason.

If the United States desires some modifications in the Canadian tariff to apply to imports from the United States, what privileges will the United States give to Canada by way of reciprocity?

If Canada cannot enjoy the benefits of the United States minimum tariff without sacrifice of self-respect, some other way out of the difficulty must be found, and this will not be difficult.

Reciprocity the Basis.

Reciprocity in trade is the basis of commercial expansion. As matters stand now, the balance of trade between Canada and the United States is largely in favour of the latter. Last year Canada bought from the United States $300,000,000 and United States bought from Canada $90,000,000.

Only Hurt Themselves.

Any country which establishes against another a prohibitive tariff, which erects a tariff wall, not only keeps out goods from a foreign country, but makes it more difficult to dispose of its own surplus products. In commerce between nations there must be reciprocity. No country can debar by tariff regulations, the products of another country and find in that country a free market for its own goods.

U. S. Policy.

Broadly speaking, the policy of the United States is to give the benefit of their minimum tariff only to those countries which give them the best terms extended elsewhere.

Canadian Policy.

The Canadian policy is to have a general tariff and give special rates to those countries which reciprocate. The British preference is outside this view of the case.

The position appears to be that the United States takes the ground that no country can make any tariff arrangements with another power, involving reciprocal advantages, without including the United States in the benefits, otherwise they would be penalized in 25 per cent. ad valorem.

Tariff Errors.

It has been stated that the Canadian duties are higher than those of the United States. This is a misleading statement. The present effect of the two tariffs is that Canada exports to the United States articles subjected to the higher duties, while the articles imported into Canada from the United States are subject to the lower duties.

Erroneous Calculation.

A calculation based only upon the duties affecting the articles dealt in, will lead to the conclusion that Canadian duties are higher than those of the United States, whereas the contrary is the case. The general tariff of the United States on the whole is nearly 50 per cent. minimum higher than the Canadian tariff. The dutiable list throughout of both countries will show the average duty of the United States to be 45 per cent. and the average duties of Canada 27 per cent. These are approximate figures, but near enough to illustrate the point.

OneAdvantage.

The United States has an advantage of 5 per cent. to 7 1-2 per cent. in dealing with Canada in consequence of the nearness of the market, and the facility this affords to deal with a big customer day after day, thus saving story ago. The goods can arrive by lake

ST. ANDREW'S CHAMPS WERE BANQUETTED

Were Presented With the Burnham Trophy at a Most Enjoyable Function Last Evening.

WARMLY CONGRATULATED

The triumph of the St. Andrew's church hockey league in winning for the second time the championship of the Church Hockey League was fittingly recognized last evening when the champions were banquetted by the Ladies' Aid of the church in the lecture room and at the same time were presented with the Burnham trophy, emblematic of the championship. The affair was a great success and the ladies are deserving of much credit for the enjoyable evening they provided. The champions were overwhelmed with congratulations upon their success and were made to feel that the members of St. Andrew's are proud of their second victory in hockey circles. In addition to the members of the winning team a number of invited guests werepresent and the event was one of thorough enjoyment.

The menu was of the variety that the ladies of St. Andrew's seem peculiarly successful in providing, and ample justice was done to the array of good things, after which an enjoyable toast list was honoured, Mr. P. A. Kerr making a very acceptable toast master.

The toast to the King was heartily honoured, after which Mr. Rutherford proposed the toast to "Canada," Mr. G. A. Cornish making an eloquent reply.

Mr. C. Coleman rendered a solo that was much appreciated.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, donor of the trophy, made a very neat speech in presenting the Cup to the St Andrew's team, congratulating the victors upon their success and on the splendid showing they had made in hockey circles during the past two years.

Mr. Harry Clarke, in reply, thanked Mr. Burnham for the trophy and for the interest he had shown in the affairs of the Church Hockey League.

Mr. J. Johns contributed a reading that was a much appreciated feature of the programme.

Mr. W. Richardson proposed the health of the Church Hockey League and Mr. Fred Reed, the secretary of the organization made a fitting response.

Mr. Coleman was heard to advantage in another song and Mr. Johns rendered a recitation in his usual excellent fashion.

The toast to the Press was proposed by Mr. Geo. McDonald and responded to by representatives present.

Before the event was brought to a close a vote of thanks was unanimously tendered the ladies on motion of Rev. J. G. Potter, seconded by Mr. J. Johns.

BANQUET A SUCCESS

Junior League of George Street Church Spent Enjoyable Evening.

The Junior League banquet of the George St Methodist church was held last evening in the schoolroom of the church.

About one hundred young people partook of a dainty supper, which was arranged for them by the lady superintendents, Miss Bennett and Miss Bradley.

Rev. E. A. Pearson presided and the following programme was rendered:

Vocal duet—Misses Doane and Morrow of the Junior League.

Recitation—Master Joe Zepp.

The toast list was as follows:, "Our King and Our City," proposed by L. Pearson and responded to by Maitland Wood.

"Our Church," proposed by Miss S. Sherwin and responded to by Mrs. E. Outram.

"Our League," proopsed by W. Hamilton and responded to by M. Carlisle.

"The Ladies," proopsed by B. Hamilton and responded to by H. Hill.

An address was given by Mr. S. R. Armstrong, Sabbath school superintendent and the entertainment was closed by the singing of the doxology.

DR. LLWYD COMING

Will Give an Address on "Joan of Arc" for Girls' Guild of St. John's.

During the second week in April, a rare treat is in store for the lovers of literature in Peterborough, when in the interests of the Girls' Auxiliary of St. John's church the Rev. Dr. Llwyd of Toronto, will deliver a lecture on Joan of Arc.

Those who were privileged a fortnight ago to hear the Vice Provost of Trinity preach in this town, will need no urging to avail themselves of the opportunity of again listening to his eloquent words; but to the many to whom Dr. Llwyd is still a stranger, we might suggest that this is a chance of hearing a man who is a scholar and a thinker, whose subject will be well presented and who is a master of English diction.

SERVICES ARRANGED

For Holy Thursday, Good Friday and Holy Saturday.

On Holy Thursday, Good Friday, and Holy Saturday mass will be said at the Church of the Sacred Heart at half past eight, and in the evenings, including to-night, services will be held at 7.30. On Good Friday evening Rev. Father Kelly of Wooler, will deliver the Passion sermon.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE REV. J. A. G. STIRLING HELD TO-DAY

Impressive Public Service in St. Andrew's Church This Morning Under Auspices of Presbytery.

MANY FROM HAVELOCK

The services in connection with the burial of the late Rev. J. A. G. Stirling, for some time minister of the Presbyterian church in Havelock, were held in St. Andrew's church this morning at ten o'clock, and were of a most impressive character.

Mrs. C. S. McClelland, organist of the church, played appropriate selections while the mourners assembled. The Presbytery was well represented. The Rev. D. A. McKenzie, B.A., Moderator of Presbytery, officiated and the following clergy were present: Rev. Messrs. Brown, Thompson, Johnson, McDonald, Pogue, Keith, Marsh and Potter. The elders present were J. R. Graham, J. S. Ferguson, J. C Shook, Wm Madill and J. W. Bennett. The chief mourners were the members of the congregation, a large number of them, both men and women having come up on the morning train. The Rev. Mr. Holdsworth, Anglican clergyman and Rev. Mr. Balfour Methodist clergyman, from Havelock, were both in attendance and took part in the service. An interesting feature of the service was the expression of sympathy and sorrow by Rural Dean Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, Ph.D., on behalf of the clergy of the deanery.

The Rev. D. A. Thompson, clerk of sessions, who was a college mate of the late minister, based words of exhortation and comfort on Philippians, 1:21. "For to me to live is Christ and to die is gain." The Rev. G. A. Brown led in public prayer. The hymns sung were "The Sands of Time are Sinking," "Forever with the Lord," "Jerusalem My Happy Home" and "Christ of All My Hopes the Ground."

Before the service closed the Rev. Mr. Keith referred to the closing days in the life of the Rev. Mr. Stirling, and paid a fine tribute to the qualities of head and heart of which he was possessed.

The Rev. R. Pogue closed the solemn occasion with a brief prayer and the benediction.

The floral tributes marked the esteem of the congregation and Presbytery.

Rev. D. D. McDonald, of Keene took charge of the services leaving the church, and the organ pealed forth the strains of "The Dead March in Saul," as the corpse was carried along the aisle. The carriages were occupied by the members of the Havelock congregation, and the clergy of the Presbytery of Peterborough.

At a special meeting of the Presbytery held before the service the Rev. Jas. G. Potter was appointed interim moderator of the Havelock congregation and was requested to conduct memorial services there next Sunday and declare the pulpit vacant.

The congregation will proceed at once to call a successor and the Rev. Mr. Potter will go to Toronto to-morrow to make arrangements for carrying out the wish of the Presbytery.

Comber Women Will Give Best The Cold Shoulder

Comber, Ont., March 21.—Women residents of Comber, who are prominent in church circles, are seriously considering the advisability of electing a delegation to visit Arthur J. Best; whose wife is supposed to have been drowned in the Detroit river a week ago Saturday night, under mysterious circumstances, and tell him that his absence from that place would be more preferable than his presence.

"Best may be telling the truth when he says that he has no guilty knowledge of his wife's body being in the river, but by returning to Comber and courting her cousin, Martha Frankfurth, for a month after he married Miss Alice Frankfurth in Detroit he was violating one of the laws of decent society," declared one of Comber's leading citizens yesterday.

This appears to be the opinion of everyone in the town, and incidentally the reason why a woman church worker called on Thomas Beattie to verify the report that he had advertised for another tinsmith to take the place of Best. Beattie assured her that he did not care to employ Best, whereupon the woman visited other business men and learned they, too, had no work for the young man.

Would Live it Down.

"Maybe Beattie won't give me a job," said Best, "but I am going to continue to stay here and try and live down the reputation I have gained during the past few days."

"Whether or not Best thinks his wife's body is in the river, the fact still remains that she is missing, and he ought to be in Detroit trying to find her," said Martha Frankfurth, when she learned Best had expressed a determination to remain in Comber.

"I don't condemn Arthur, because I have known him for years and don't think he is the kind of a fellow who would do anything criminal," she continued. "Still Alice was his lawful wife, and in justice to the girl's memory, if nothing more, he ought to be helping those who are searching for her."

"You ought not to talk like that, daughter," interjected Martha's mother.

"Oh, yes, I think I should, mother," returned the girl kindly. "There are always those ready and willing to condemn a man or woman before they know all the facts. Arthur is young, that may in a way excuse him, but in all fairness I don't" think it was right for him to come back here and go to work as if nothing had happened."

IN AGONY WITH PILES

Mr. G. W. Cornell, with the Shaw Milling Co., St. Catharines, Ont., writes, "For six years I was a victim of itching, protruding piles and was in dreadful agony day and night. Doctors were unable to help me and I was about as miserable as any creature could be. My druggist advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, which I did and obtained relief from the first box and complete cure with the second. This

BUGLERS ARE CHAMPS

Win the Championship of the Indoor Baseball League.

The Bugle Band baseball team won the championship of the Monthly Indoor Baseball League at the armouries last night by defeating No. 7 Company of the 57th in a lively game, by 19 runs to 15. The Buglers have gone through the schedule without a defeat and have beaten all the other teams with the exception of the nine representing No. 8 Company, who defaulted to them last Thursday night, owing to the fact that it was impossible for them to get a team together that night. Last night's game was one of the most exciting that has yet been played. There were no less than four shut-out innings, and the Buglers only won by a garrison finish. R. A. W. Hay, on the bases, and Sam. Sharpe, on balls and strikes, were most satisfactory umpires.

The Buglers lined up as follows: W. Sharpe, p.; G. Butcher, c.; M. Drysdale, 3b.; W. Fitzgerald, l.f.; A. Rew, 2b.; G. East, r. s.s.; P. A. Weatherstone, 1b.; B. Mills, r.f.; A. McWilliams, Capt., l. s.s.

MARRIED.

READ—POPE.—On March 16th, 1910, by Rev. J. R. Webb, Mr. William Henry Read and Miss Daisy Pope, both of Peterborough.

A WOMAN'S OPINION OF RICHARD HALL & SON'S NEW SPRING STYLES

The Inspiration of Doing Things Better---Every Section Teems With Brand New Goods in Which Richness Predominates.

The ladies of Peterborough have cause for pride in possessing a department store of the high character of Messrs. Richard Hall & Son. I have some reason for speaking authoritatively when making this statement; because my duties are of a nature which brings me in almost daily contact with the modes and fashions as they prevail in some of the best dry goods houses, and with which I am expected to keep in close touch regarding the trend of fashion and character of fabrics.

My impressions of Richard Hall & Son's store were not formed hurriedly, for I enjoyed the pleasure of the freedom of the store in company with friends who were on various shopping errands.

The thing that most forcibly impressed me was the predominance of new goods. No where could be discerned any trace of second-grade, or last season's goods. In this splendid combination of newness and exclusiveness, it is the "aristocrats" and "distinctives" that are in greatest evidence. I learned afterwards that there was one reason which partly accounted for this, and that was that a previous fire sale had been utilized to make a complete clearance of all former stocks.

THE EXHIBITS OF DRESS GOODS.

The variety and charm of the beautiful new dress goods was another convincing proof of the high character and fashionable nature of the many new lines assembled for the season.

Special shipments recently received embraced dress fabrics for every occasion at home and to go abroad in, in every new weave, every new shade, and good every yard through and through. The most popular weaves for this season in wool are: Rajah Cloths, Diagonal Torsions, Broadcloths, Corded Taffetas, Striped Taffetas, Haslemere Suitings, Alpine Suitings, Serges, etc.

The most popular colours are: Aeroplane, Ashes of Roses, Amethyst, Wisteria, Delf Blue, Khaki-Copper, Beach, Tan, Cedar, Canard Blue, Moss, Bronze, Navy, Blacks.

THE EXPOSITION OF MILLINERY

I could see that in a business like this, which must be constantly growing and steadily bringing in new customers, as well as strengthening the esteem and confidence of old patrons the management has to make each day a stepping-stone to better achievement. With this keen sense of its obligation to the finer class of trade, their splendid millinery display was a meritorious demonstration. The talented milliner, Miss Wright, has her showroom filled with brightest of fashionable headwear for glad Easter. The woman of refinement who wishes to dress stylishly and distinctly should enjoy a rich treat in choosing from the extremely smart and refined models exhibited. Trimmed millinery for all occasions in charming creations, and original pleasing ideas are portrayed exclusively in this store. The colour inspiration that has set fashion going since the world began, has kept step to every measure for spring, 1910, in Richard Hall & Son's millinery salon.

STYLISH COSTUMES, COATS AND WAISTS.

This store has stopped at nothing that would in any way add to the completeness of its fashion display. The assemblage of new Spring Coats, Costumes, Skirts and Waists represent the genius and skill of foremost designers. Modes are shown of the extreme sort, the conservative, and the practical, to meet the individual requirements of the most discriminating woman. The demand for apparel that has individuality has been met in a way that must secure unqualified approval. Women's costumes for street wear are displayed in a variety of charming modes. Many imported silk and lace coats drew the attention of the writer by their chic style and commanding beauty. Tailored wear being popular, tailored waists are displayed in soft silks and in scores of shades. Peterborough women are sure to appreciate the exceedingly stylish tailored costumes, made in the newest spring effects and in models that should overcome any difficulty about correct fitting.

EASTER GLOVES, NECKWEAR, ETC.

During this week, the demands upon the glove and neck wear counters appear to be exceptional, imported French kid gloves, in soft new shades of greys, mauves, greens, tans, blues and violets, have been selected to blend beautifully with the new spring costumes. Dainty and effective creations in Easter neckwear are shown displaying numerous charming and distinctive styles. Inspection of the new lines affords a wealth of suggestions as to the trend of the styles for Easter and early summer, including dainty effects in Jabots. Other dress accessories are: Fancy belts, veilings, hosiery, ribbons, corsets, etc.

HANDSOME CARPETS AND RUGS.

Hundreds of Peterborough ladies have been in inspecting the rich, new rugs, carpets and linoleums, and many were the remarks made on the costly piles of these goods which are displayed. It is almost useless to attempt to tell in cold type of the beauties of Richard Hall & Son's Carpet Department. But, I feel sure that most of your readers have come to know that it is fully as resourceful in its handsome floor coverings as most of the large retail stores of larger cities. I can safely say that it is the prototype of the best and most beautiful that the buyers can find in Europe.

MODERATE PRICES.

From the viewpoint of price, the selections and assortment in each stock are sufficiently broad to enable one to make choice at about the figure nearest the purse limitations, if there be such. I saw nothing suggestive of high prices. Add to this the splendid calibre of the new stocks, then assortment, then trueness to the dress ideals, and you have some of the reasons why Peterborough should be proud of Richard Hall & Son's store.

Costume made of Taffeta in the aeroplane shade, in Polonaise effect, corded in fancy design. Yoke of Parisian silk and lace collar, outlined with band of gold; deep lace cuffs, with band of gold; skirt pleated in deep side pleats. One of Richard Hall & Son's Spring designs.

CANADA MUST MAINTAIN HER SELF RESPECT

vessel, coast steamer and by rail, all of which gives the United States a great advantage over a European competitor. These are views of the subject it is well to bear in mind for future reference.

Cannot Comply With Request.

In the case of the United States any demand that Canada give her the same terms as France has secured, with a quid pro quo is absurd. It is still more unreasonable to have it indicated in the public press that if Canada refuses to do this, an extra 25 per cent. ad volorem will be levied against Canadian goods.

Canada a Big Customer.

Canada is a big customer for the United States—a business of $200,000,000 a year is not to be despised, and it hardly seems reasonable that the United States would jeopardize this business because Canada very properly refuses to give fiscal advantages without getting any in return.

Canada's Attitude.

What would be Canada's attitude should the Aldrich-Payne act come into force with its surtax of 25 per cent. ad valorem against Canada? It may be stated with some degree of certainty, that the Laurier government will follow the precedent set in the case of Germany. If there should be a prohibitory tariff raised against Canada by the United States, Canada would have but one course open, and that would be, a corresponding rise in the Canadian duties, which with respect to some of the items mentioned in the list given above would be hailed with delight by the agricultural community of Ontario.

An Extreme Measure.

However, a policy of retaliation should only be resorted to in an extremity. The President is to be in Chicago this week, and he has delayed any action with regard to the proclamation until his return to Washington.

The Toronto Globe publishes an item on the situation in which some concern is displayed for certain lumber interests in the States. Canada has nothing to do with these men, or the position in which they find themselves. If there is any blame to be placed, blame the Aldrich-Payne tariff for which Canada is in no way responsible.

Critical for U. S.

If there is any "critical condition" in the situation, as announced by the Globe, we are inclined to think the situation may be somewhat critical for the United States, which appears to be taking a course that may provoke Canada to measures of retaliation, and self preservation, which will do incalculably more injury to the United States than to Canada.

Disturbing Element.

Changes in the tariff are a disturbing element which unsettles business, and has a bad effect upon industrial life, and it is to be hoped that the better sense of the President will prevail, and that he will not find that Canada's action in entering into a convention with France has any bearing on the situation amounting to undue discrimination.

People Would Support Government,

On the other hand the government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier may be assured that the people of Canada as a whole, will endorse any action which tends to uphold the dignity and self respect of the Canadian people, even if such action goes to the extent of adjusting the tariff as between the United States and Canada.

Internal Revenue Jumping.

The internal revenue ofr the month of February, 1910, amounted to $1,195,877, as against $1,083,302 the corresponding month of last year. The revenue from all sources is on the increase.

More Obstruction.

During the week the Opposition made an attempt at obstruction and after sitting all night they finally gave in. These exhibitions are without sense or reason and would disgust the people if they could only be present and listen to the balderdash that is put on Hansard by men who appear to possess the average of intelligence. The Liberals go upon the principle that they are right, and they stick to it.

Commons Adjourns

Member For West Huron Supports the Government on Tariff Issue Whether the Opposition Does So or Not—Premier Looks For an Early Prorogation of Parliament—Reassemble March 30.

Ottawa, March 24.—N. Lewis (West Huron) made the Commons sit up yesterday afternoon when he announced that the Opposition was behind the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance in the tariff difficulty with the United States. R. L. Borden, the Opposition leader, is in Boston, and Hon. John Haggart and Dr. Sproule are leading the Conservative party in his absence.

Mr. Lewis began by asking if the Government did not consider that it was due to the business community to give some indication as to whether they were to expect a tariff war or not.

Said Hon. Mr. Fielding:—"I am afraid that, with every desire on my part to inform the House of what they naturally desire to know in this matter, I am not in a position to give any statement in negotiations of the character which it is known are now in progress, it would be impolite in the highest degree to make any statement until a conclusion has been reached. At the conclusion of the conference, which I had the honor to hold with the President of United States at Albany, a brief statement was given out that "the matter remains as one of friendly negotiation." That was the condition at that moment, and that is the condition to-day.

"I am very hopeful that an early arrangement will be reached, but I do not think any good purpose would be served by our making any statement to-day."

Thereupon Mr. Lewis stated that the Opposition was behind the Government on this question, irrespective of party.

R. S. Lake (Qu'Appelle) asked: "Are you speaking for the whole party?"

"No, not for all the party," said Mr. Lewis, who was continuing his speech when the Speaker interrupted to say that he could not enter into a discussion.

Mr. Lewis: I want to say to the Minister that I am with him.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson: He'll feel better now. (Laughter.)

Haughton Lennox (South Simcoe) said that, before Mr. Lewis had propounded his question, he had proposed to ask him, and which he did not think would involve the disclosures of any state secrets. The question was:

"Having regard to the fact that Parliament is now in session, will the Finance Minister assure the House that he will not agree to admit the United States to participation in the intermediate tariff, or otherwise substantially to alter the tariff conditions between Canada and the United States, without first submitting the proposals to Parliament?"

Mr. Fielding replied that it would not involve the disclosure of any secrets, but it would involve one of policy, which he thought would embarrass the freedom of negotiations which all desired that the Government should have. He would ask both sides of the House to assume that the Government was thoroughly seized of the importance of the whole question, and was dealing with it in the manner conceived to be consistent with the best interests of Canada.

"I may say," concluded Mr. Fielding, "that if there are to be any guns in the matter, we will be exceedingly glad to have the member for West Huron along with us, behind the guns. But if we can avoid the use of guns at all, that will be much better."

Dr. Sproule (East Grey) enquired as to the probable duration of the session.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied that any additional program of business would be of a light character. There would be some supplementary estimates for the coming year, resolutions about dry docks, and possibly some other matters which at present he was not at liberty to disclose. On the whole there was nothing to prevent "very early prorogation."

Dr. Sproule asked if the Government intended to go on with the insurance bill and the banking bill.

Mr. Fielding answered that in his opinion the insurance bill was in such a good shape that it could be dealt with without much delay. However, he was beginning to despair of getting the bank act through this session.

Hon. Frank Oliver introduced a bill to amend the Irrigation Act. He said the bill was to give power to expropriate reservoir sites. It also would enable the Government to dispense with the filing of elaborate plans for minor schemes, drainage at present being assumed to be the responsibility of the provinces.

Hon. John Haggart remarked that the point arose as to whether the Federal Government had any right at all to legislate regarding irrigation.

Mr. Oliver introduced another bill to confirm and declare the rights of the crown with respect to water and water power and relating to the division, acquisition and use of water in the railway belt of British Columbia. The proprietory rights to water granted by the Provincial Government were in a state of uncertainty. The bill declared that the right to the water was vested in the Dominion and made provision for carrying forward the rights granted by the Provincial Government until a decision was given by the Privy Council. Development, meanwhile, would not be held up.

Hon. A. B. Aylesworth introduced a bill to amend the act respecting the National Battlefields at Quebec, to provide a more efficient means of expropriation by allowing the terms of the expropriation act to be exercised.

The House spent the afternoon on minor bills, and adjourned until next Wednesday.

Bradley Was Acquitted On Charge Of Murder

Jury Brings in Verdict of "Not Guilty" at St. Catharines---Chief Justice Falconbridge Expresses Himself as Dissatisfied With the Verdict---Should Have Been Manslaughter.

St. Catharines, Ont., March 24.—The jury in the Bradley murder case returned a verdict of not guilty here last night, after about three hours' deliberation.

Chief Justice Sir Gwenholme Falconbridge, in addressing the prisoner, after the rendering of the verdict, remarked that he did not agree with the jury's decision.

"I would have found you guilty of manslaughter," said he. "I believe this man's death was attributable to you." His lordship's charge to the jury was along this line.

The court-room was crowded to the doors, and the verdict was received with an outburst of applause.

The evidence of the afternoon was mainly in rebuttal, Dr. McCoy contradicting Drs. Macdonald and Jessop as to whether the deceased could have so fallen as to have received the wound that caused death.

Bradley had got into a fight with George Bulman, on a radial car on New Year's Day, and, according to witnesses for the crown, had struck and kicked him in such a manner as to cause almost instant death. Defence witnesses gave evidence mainly to discredit the statements of those who had sworn to seeing the blows delivered.

Bulman was an Englishman, who had been in Canada about eighteen months, and was employed in a paper mill. He was married and left a year-old boy. Bradley has been a life-long resident of the locality, and has a wife and daughter. He has always borne an excellent reputation.

To Form a Labor Party.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., March 24.—After being in session all day, the executive council of the State Federation of Labor came to the conclusion that it would be inopportune to call a state-wide strike to aid the striking street car men in Philadelphia.

This decision was reached unanimously and it is said to have been hastened by the action of the textile workers of Philadelphia, who went out on a sympathetic strike and who on Tuesday night voted to return to work.

Instead of appealing to the state unionists to quit work, the council fell in with the movement started in Philadelphia Tuesday night to form a labor party in the state.

President Greenawalt was very positive in his statement that the only way the working classes in Philadelphia and throughout the state could get justice was through the ballot box.

Speculation Ends In Suicide.

Philadelphia, Pa., March 24.—Placing a revolver to his breast while an express train from Buffalo on which he was a passenger was pulling into the Reading railroad station yesterday, William H. Swanberg, aged 40, manager of a big Chestnut street department store, killed himself almost instantly.

Swanberg was returning from Chicago where he had visited his son. A letter to his wife stated that he had met with reverses in Wall street speculations.

Body Found In Slip.

Toronto, March 24.—The body of Robert J. Nichols, 28 years, a grocer, who has been missing from his home in Hiawatha avenue, East Toronto, since the beginning of January, was found floating in the bay in the Yonge street slip, yesterday, by Second Mate John McKeown of the Corona. It was taken to the morgue. No inquest will be held. He leaves a widow and four children. It is believed that death was accidental.

Attorney-General Better.

Toronto, March 24.—Hon. J. J. Foy, Attorney-General, was back at the Parliament Buildings yesterday, after an absence of nearly three weeks through sickness. He hopes to be well enough to attend the inter-provincial conference at Ottawa on March 29. Hon. Dr. Pyne expects to be back at his office next week.

Victim Was a Watford Man.

Watford, March 24.—The man killed in Monday's wreck at Marshalltown, Iowa, was John Bambridge of Watford, Ont. He was on his way home from a trip to Saskatoon, Sask., and was to have stopped at Marshalltown, where a daughter, Mrs. (Rev.) Wise resides. The remains arrived here yesterday.

New Branch of I.C.R.

Ottawa, March 24.—A quarter of a million dollars' contract was awarded by the Railway Department yesterday for the construction of a branch of the Intercolonial Railway from Orange River to Sydney, N.S. The distance is ten miles, and the contractor is A. Kirk of Antigonish, N.S.

Dynamite Instead of Plow.

Spartanburg, S.C., March 24.—J. H. Caldwell, a farmer near here, broke up an acre of land yesterday with 900 charges of dynamite, the explosive being used instead of the plow.

Caldwell claims that blasting land with dynamite is the best method for subsoiling.

Six Months For Buck.

Toronto, March 24.—Samuel H. C. Buck was sent to prison for six months from the Police Court yesterday morning. He pleaded guilty to falsely declaring that he had sent $200 by registered mail to his wife in England.

Nice for Governor Hughes.

Albany, N.Y., March 24.—Without debate the Senate yesterday passed the concurrent resolution increasing the governor's salary from $10,000 to $20,000 a year.

South Africa and Defence.

London, March 24.—A South African cable reports that at Zerust, Gen. Botha in a speech stated that his dearest ambition was to create the best colonial defence force in the empire, representing both races.

Why Britain Is Deterred.

London, March 24.—Sir Edward Grey, Foreign Secretary, explained in the House of Commons yesterday that the British Government was unable to support actively the United States Government in its Chinchoco—Aigun Railroad plan, because of the provisions of the Anglo-Russian agreement of 1899, which had never been formally abrogated.

G.T.R. Grain Carrying Rates.

Montreal, March 24.—The Grand Trunk has announced it will meet any rate made by the American roads for grain carrying.

The American roads gave a rate of four cents a bushel from Buffalo to New York and Boston. The G.T.R. announces the same rate from Georgian Bay ports to Montreal.

Oldest Mason Dead.

Newport, N.H., March 24.—James Bellows McGregor, believed to be the oldest Freemason in the world, died at his home here yesterday, aged 108 years. McGregor remembered the war of 1812 and the receipt of the news of the French defeat at Waterloo. He joined a Masonic lodge at Salisbury, N.H., in 1825.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

She walked her horse again. It occurred to her that he might wish an assurance of silence from her. What she had seen would make a capital bit of gossip, to say nothing of being material for the newspapers, and her conscience as she reflected grew uneasy at the thought of shielding him. She knew that her father and mother and, even more strictly, her brother would close their doors on a man whose enemies followed him over seas and lay in wait for him in a peaceful park, but here she tested him. A man of breeding would not ask protection of a woman on whom he had no claim, and it was certainly not for her to establish an understanding with him in so strange and grave a matter.

"It must be fun having a ranch with cattle on a thousand hills. I always wished my father would go in for a western place, but he can't travel so far from home. Our ranch is in Virginia."

"You have a Virginia farm? That is very interesting."

"Yes; at Storm Springs. It's really beautiful down there," she said simply.

It was on his tongue to tell her that he, too, owned a bit of Virginia soil, but he had just established himself as a Montana ranchman, and it seemed best not to multiply his places of residence. He had, moreover, forgotten the name of the county in which his preserve lay. He said, with truth:

"I know nothing of Virginia or the south, but I have viewed the landscape from Arlington, and some day I hope to go adventuring in the Virginia hills."

"Then you should not overlook our valley. I am sure there must be adventures waiting for somebody down there. You can tell our place by the spring lamb on the hillside. There's a huge inn that offers the long distance telephone and market reports and golf links and very good horses, and lots of people stop there as a matter of course in their flight between Florida and Newport. They go up and down the coast like the mercury in a thermometer—up when it's warm, down when it's cold. There's the secret of our mercurial temperament."

A passing automobile frightened her horse, and he watched her perfect coolness in quieting the animal with rein and voice.

"He's just up from the farm and doesn't like town very much. But he shall go home again soon," she said as they rode on.

"Oh, you go down to shepherd those spring lambs!" he exclaimed, with misgiving in his heart. He had followed her across the sea, and now she was about to take flight again.

He dimly understood as he left her in a gay mood at the Claiborne house that she had sought to make him forget the lurking figure in the park thicket and the dark deed thwarted there. It was her way of conveying to him her dismissal of the incident, and it implied a greater kindness than any pledge of secrecy. He rode away with grave eyes, and a new hope filled his heart.

Chapter X

JOHN ARMITAGE IS SHADOWED.

ARMITAGE dined alone that evening and left the hotel at 9 o'clock for a walk. He unaffectedly enjoyed paved ground and the sights and ways of cities, and he walked aimlessly about the lighted thoroughfares of the capital with conscious pleasure in the movement and color of life. He let his eyes follow the Washington monument's gray line starward, and he stopped to enjoy the high poised equestrian statue of Sherman, to which the starry dusk gave something of legendary and old world charm.

Coming out upon Pennsylvania avenue, he strolled past the White House and at the wide flung gates paused while a carriage swept by him at the driveway. He saw within the grim face of Baron von Marhof and unconsciously lifted his hat, though the ambassador was deep in thought and did not see him. Armitage struck the pavement smartly with his stick as he walked slowly on, pondering, but he was conscious a moment later that some one was loitering persistently in his wake. Armitage was at once on the alert with all his faculties sharpened. He turned and gradually slackened his pace, and the person behind him immediately did likewise.

The sensation of being followed is at first annoying. Then a pleasant zest creeps into it, and in Armitage's case the reaction was immediate. He was even amused to reflect that the shadow had chosen for his exploit what is probably the most conspicuous and the best guarded spot in America. It was not yet 10 o'clock, but the streets were comparatively free of people. He slackened his pace gradually and threw open his overcoat, for the night was warm, to give an impression of ease, and when he had reached the somber facade of the treasury building he paused and studied it in the glare of the electric lights as though he were a chance traveler taking a preliminary view of the sights of the capital. A man still lingered behind him, drawing nearer now, at a moment when they had the sidewalk comparatively free to themselves. The fellow was short, but of soldierly erectness and even in his loitering pace lifted his feet with the quick precision of the drilled man. Armitage walked to the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Fifteenth street, then turned and retraced his steps slowly past the treasury building. The man who had been following faced about and walked slowly in the opposite direction, and Armitage, quickening his own pace, amused himself by dogging the fellow's steps closely for twenty yards, then passed him.

When he had gained the advantage of a few feet Armitage stopped suddenly and spoke to the man in the casual tone he might have used in addressing a passing acquaintance.

"My friend," he said, "there are two policemen across the street. If you continue to follow me I shall call their attention to you."

"Pardon me"—

"You are watching me, and the thing won't do."

"Yes, I'm watching you, but"—

"But the thing won't do! If you are hired"—

"Nein! Nein! You do me a wrong, sir."

"Then if you are not hired you are your own master, and you serve yourself ill when you take the trouble to follow me. Now I'm going to finish my walk, and I beg you to keep out of my way. This is not a place where liberties may be infringed with impunity. Good evening, sir!"

Armitage wheeled about sharply, and as his face came into the full light of the street lamps the stranger stared at him intently.

Armitage was fumbling in his pocket for a coin, but this impertinence caused him to change his mind. Two policemen were walking slowly toward them, and Armitage, annoyed by the whole incident, walked quickly away.

He was not wholly at ease over the meeting. The fact that Chauvenet had so promptly put a spy as well as the Servian assassin on his trail quickened his pulse with anger for an instant and then sobered him.

He continued his walk and paused presently before an array of books in a shop window. Then some one stopped at his side, and he looked up to find the same man he had accosted at the treasury building lifting his hat, an American soldier's campaign hat. The fellow was an extreme blond, with a smooth shaved, weather beaten face, blue eyes and light hair.

"Pardon me. You are mistaken. I am not a spy. But it is wonderful; it is quite wonderful"—

The man's face was alight with discovery, with an alert pleasure that awaited recognition.

"My dear fellow, you really become annoying," and Armitage again thrust his hand into his trousers pocket. "I should hate awfully to appeal to the police, but you must not crowd me too far."

The man seemed moved by deep feeling, and his eyes were bright with excitement. His hands clasped tightly the railing that protected the glass window of the bookshop. As Armitage turned away impatiently the man ejaculated huskily, as though some overmastering influence wrung the words from him:

"Don't you know me? I am Oscar. Don't you remember me and the great forest, where I taught you to shoot and fish? You are"—

He bent toward Armitage with a fierce insistence, his eyes blazing in his eagerness to be understood.

John Armitage turned again to the window, leaned lightly upon the iron railing and studied the title of a book attentively. He was silently absorbed for a full minute, in which the man who had followed him waited. Taking his cue from Armitage's manner, he appeared to be deeply interested in the bookseller's display, but the excitement still glittered in his eyes.

Armitage was thinking swiftly, and his thoughts covered a very wide range of time and place as he stood there. Then he spoke very deliberately and coolly, but with a certain peremptory sharpness.

"Go ahead of me to the New American and wait in the office until I come."

The man's hand went to his hat.

"None of that!"

Armitage arrested him with a gesture. "My name is Armitage—John Armitage," he said. "I advise you to remember it. Now go!"

The man hurried away, and Armitage slowly followed.

It occurred to him that the man might be of use, and with this in mind

"Don't you know me? I am Oscar."

he returned to the New American, got his key from the office, nodded to his acquaintance of the street and led the way to the elevator.

Armitage put aside his coat and hat, locked the hall door, and then, when the two stood face to face in his little sitting room, he surveyed the man carefully.

"What do you want?" he demanded bluntly.

He took a cigarette from a box on the table, lighted it and then, with an air of finality, fixed his gaze upon the man, who eyed him with a kind of stupefied wonder. Then there flashed into the fellow's bronzed face something of dignity and resentment. He stood perfectly erect, with his felt hat clasped in his hand. His clothes were cheap, but clean, and his short coat was buttoned trimly about him.

"I want nothing, Mr. Armitage," he replied humbly, speaking slowly and with a marked German accent.

"Then you will be easily satisfied," said Armitage. "You said your name was"—

"Oscar—Oscar Breunig."

Armitage sat down and scrutinized the man again without relaxing his severity.

"You think you have seen me somewhere, so you have followed me in the streets to make sure. When did this idea first occur to you?"

"I saw you at Fort Myer at the drill last Friday. I have been looking for you since and saw you leave your horse at the hotel this afternoon. You ride at Rock creek—yes?"

"What do you do for a living, Mr. Breunig?" asked Armitage.

"I was in the army, but served out my time and was discharged a few months ago and came to Washington to see where they make the government—yes? I am going to South America. Is it Peru—yes? There will be a revolution."

He paused, and Armitage met his eyes. They were very blue and kind, eyes that spoke of sincerity and fidelity, such eyes as a leader of forlorn hopes would like to know were behind him when he gave the order to charge. Then a curious thing happened. It may have been the contact of eye with eye that awoke question and response between them. It may have been a need in one that touched a chord of helplessness in the other, but suddenly Armitage leaped to his feet and grasped the outstretched hands of the little soldier.

(To be continued.)

is generally the result of a cold caused by exposure to wet and inclement weather and may be recognised by a tightness across the chest, sharp pains and a difficulty in breathing, a secretion of thick phlegm, at first white, but later of a greenish or yellowish color coming from the bronchial tubes when coughing, especially the first thing in the morning. Cure the first symptoms of bronchitis by the use of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

Bronchitis Cured.

Miss Martha Bourget, Little Pabos, Que., writes: "Last spring I was very poorly, had a bad cough, sick headache, could not sleep, and was tired all the time. I consulted two doctors, and both told me I had bronchitis, and advised me to give up teaching. I tried almost everything but none of the medicines gave me any relief. One of my friends advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I had scarcely taken the first bottle when I began to get better and when I had taken the fourth bottle I felt as well as ever, my cough had left me and I could sleep well."

"Dr. Wood's" is the original Norway Pine Syrup. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark and the price 25 cents. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE IMPERIAL GUARANTEE & ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA

Head Office: 46 King Street, West — TORONTO

The Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Imperial Guarantee & Accident Insurance Company of Canada, was held at the Head Office, 46 King Street West, Toronto, on the 10th inst.

Mr. E. W. Cox, President of the Company, in reviewing the business of the year, made reference to the growing popularity of Accident Insurance, and its effect on the success of the business of the Company during the year. The amount of Insurance written was over $95,270,000.00, an increase of $1,940,000.00 over the business taken out in 1908. This is considered exceptionally satisfactory in view of the fact that the business of the Company is confined to Personal Accident and Guarantee Insurance.

The Gross Income for 1909 amounted to $210,741.76.

That being an increase over the year 1908 of $4,817.24.

The Assets now total $206,972.00, and, after allowing for Reserve for unearned premium calculated on the full Government standard, and all other liabilities, the surplus for the protection of policyholders has increased to $213,447.19.

The following Directors and Officers were elected:

Edward W. Cox, President. — Hon. F. T. Frost.
Noel Marshall, Vice-President. — R. Bickerdike.

THE BEST REMEDY

For Women—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Belleville, Ont.—"I was so weak and worn out from a female weakness that I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took several bottles of it, and I gained strength so rapidly that it seemed to make a new woman of me. I can do as good a day's work as I ever did. I sincerely bless the day that I made up my mind to take your medicine for female weakness, and I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kind letters, as I certainly profited by them. I give you permission to publish this any time you wish."—Mrs. ALBERT WICKETT, Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will cure female weakness and so successfully carry women through the Change of Life as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs.

For 30 years it has been curing women from the worst forms of female ills—inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and nervous prostration.

If you want special advice write privately to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. It is free and always helpful.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Collins Remembered on Eve of Their Departure—Other News From Hastings.

Examiner Special.

Hastings, March 19—Our people are anxiously waiting for a view of Halley's comet, which is expected to be in sight about Easter.

The many friends of Miss L. Tate extend congratulations on the success of the pianoforte recital given by her Norwood pupils on Friday evening of last week. Miss Tate has a large class of pupils in Norwood and spends a considerable part of her time with them, and much credit is due to her for the way in which the several selections were rendered.

Last Friday evening the Epworth League of the Methodist church held a "7" social in the basement of the church, which was quite a novelty in the line of socials. The admission fee was 7 cents and every seventh person was admitted free. Refreshments were served in the course of the evening and a very pleasant time was spent by those present.

Mr. Graham has disposed of his hotel business to Mr. Lonergan, of Warkworth, and intends moving his family to the West in the near future.

The friends here of Mr. J. Coyle Brown of Peterborough, formerly of Hastings, sympathize with him in the loss he has sustained by the death of his wife.

Mr. H. A. Wilson has sold his house to Mr. McGrail and intends trying his fortune in Western Canada.

The engineering staff who have been making a survey of Rice Lake during the winter months, have returned to town.

The gravel teams have been obliged to quit work owing to the condition of the roads.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Greenley of Campbellford, have been visiting friends in town.

Mr. J. Cobain of Toronto, has been renewing old acquaintances here.

On Tuesday evening of the past week a number of the friends and neighbours of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Collins met at their home to bid them farewell on the eve of their departure for their new home in Otonabee. During the course of the evening Mr. and Mrs. Collins were presented with an address and two very handsome chairs, and Miss Mary, with a gold bracelet. Mr. Collins replied in a few well-chosen words, thanking them for their kindness and the beautiful gifts. The ladies served refreshments, which were much enjoyed and a pleasant evening was brought to a close by the company joining hands and singing Auld Lang Syne. Mr. and Mrs. Collins left on Thursday morning, followed by the best wishes of a host of friends.

Mr. Wm. Warner has purchased the residence of Mr. J. H. McClelland, who is moving from town.

Mr. L. F. Clarry was in town last week.

Mr. McKessock, late of Toronto, has arrived in town, and has entered into partnership with Mr. Colville, barrister, etc. The new firm will be known as Colville and McKessock.

Mr. Hunter of Myersburg, has been engaged to operate the new cheese factory, and will move to town in the near future.

Mr. John Steele and family are leaving this week for Calgary, where they purpose to reside.

Mrs. Waldon of Lakefield, has been the guest of Mrs. J. Lynn.

Mr. E. J. Laing, of Norwood, was in town on Friday.

Ordered to Hospital

FOR OPERATION FOR ACUTE INDIGESTION—DID NOT GO AND WAS CURED BY

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

The doctors seem to have made the common mistake of dosing the stomach when the real source of trouble was with the liver and kidneys. Anyway Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills made a complete cure and here is the record:

Mrs. F. O. Bacon, Baldwin's Mills, Que., writes: "I was very sick and the doctors said I must go to the hospital for a surgical operation. I had acute indigestion and the liver and kidneys did not act. I did not want to undergo an operation so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills and have used them ever since.

"I am feeling well now and doing my own work for a family of seven. I think there is no equal for acute indigestion and liver and kidney troubles such as I had and they and nothing else made me well again. There is no medicine I like half so well, for this did wonders for me."

The real serious cases of indigestion almost always have their location in the bowels and can only be reached by making the liver and kidneys active. No medicine regulates the liver, kidneys and bowels so nicely and so promptly as do Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers; or Edmanson Bates & Co., Toronto. Do not be satisfied with a substitute or you will be disappointed.

LAKEFIELD NEWS OF GENERAL INTEREST

Examiner Special.

Lakefield, March 23.—Miss Mabel Taylor and Miss Winnie Clysdale, of Warsaw, spent a few days last week in the village, where they were guests of Miss Edna Payne.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bate and family, who have been living at Sudbury, Ont., for the past two years, have again taken up their residence in the village.

Mr. Geo. F. Hilliard, was at Burleigh Falls on Saturday last.

The Grove School breaks up for the Easter holidays on Wednesday, March 23rd.

Mrs. E. A. Norrish has returned after a visit to friends in Dummer.

Col. H. S. Greenwood was in Peterborough on Monday.

Mr. David Gillespie was in Peterborough on Saturday last.

Mr. F. H. Lingwood, B. Paed, of Simcoe, has received a good appointment at East Toronto, where he will begin duties in September.

Miss Myrtle White of Peterborough, was the guest of Miss Bertha White for a few days last week.

Miss Gibson of Campbellford, is in the village visiting her brother, Dr. Gibson.

Miss A. Atwood returned home on Monday from Peterborough, where she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. Evans Atwood for a few days.

During the heavy storm that prevailed over Lakefield and vicinity on Saturday night, the barn owned by Mr. Fred Richardson was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. Fire broke out the instant it was struck, rendering it impossible to save any of the contents. Live stock, consisting of a horse, four cows, and poultry were all burned. This is the second building destroyed by lightning within the past two weeks.

Mr. R. S. Merrifield of Midland, formerly of Lakefield, has been appointed day operator at the Grand Trunk station, Peterborough.

Mrs. F. Coleman, of Los Angeles, Cal., is at present in the village, visiting her mother, Mrs. Z. White.

Miss Lumsden of Peterborough, is the guest of the Misses Ray, Regent street.

Miss D. Sawers, of Peterborough, was the guest of Rev. F. J. and Mrs. Sawers at the rectory, for a few days last week.

HOUSE WAS STRUCK BY LIGHTNING AT FRASERVILLE

Examiner Special.

Fraserville, March 23.—Mr. F. Johnston was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Cruickshanks on Sunday.

Mr Meld is moving to Mr. George Trotter's home this week.

Mr. H. Cruickshank, of Peterborough, was the guest of his parents on Sunday.

Mr. James Trotter left on Tuesday for Webb, Sask., where he intends making his future home.

Mrs Frederick Henry, of Manitoba, and Miss Annie Henry, of Apsley, are guests of Miss Pearl Scobell.

Mr. Richard Stewart, of Montreal, is a guest of his parents here.

Miss Armstrong, of the Normal school, Peterborough, is spending the holidays at her home.

Miss Miller, of Keene, is a guest of Miss Amy Bowles.

Miss Luella Hogg and Mr. Stewart Hogg were at home to a number of their friends on Thursday evening last, a very pleasant evening being enjoyed by those present.

We are all very sorry to lose our respected friend, Mr. Cowling, who has removed from our midst to Pontypool.

Miss Hattie Kidd has returned to Lakefield after spending the winter months with her brother, Mr. W.A. Kidd.

Mr. Joseph Madill is unloading a car of corn this week.

We begin to feel that spring has come when we hear the robins singing in the apple trees, the plover's sharp cry from the surrounding ponds, and the blackbirds whistling in the tall elms; but the fact that the farmers have commenced making maple sugar is a sign of spring not to be mistaken. Mr. Arthur Wood and Mr. Samuel Hunter have commenced that enjoyable occupation a few days ago.

A very severe electric storm passed over this neighbourhood on Sunday morning last, and in some places left traces of its violence. The lightning followed the telephone wire and struck Mr. Harry Ruddy's house, but little damage was done, other than the splintering of a verandah post. It also struck a tree within a few feet of Mr. Wm. Hutchison's house, but fortunately did no damage to the building.

Mrs. R. Delahey was in the city on Wednesday on business.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

For a shiny coat, rub either with turpentine or strong coffee.

When starching Holland pinafores, put a little tea in the starch. It will help them to keep their colour.

Sponge black dress goods with cold tea. All spots and stains, it is said, will disappear and the material be nicely cleaned.

The most hygienic duster is a damp fabric that is soft and free from lint. Cheesecloth and chamois, dampened, are both good for different purposes.

When using stale bread for puddings always soak it in a cold liquid. Bread that has been soaked in cold milk or water is light and crumbly, whereas that soaked in hot liquids is heavy.

If, when using lemon for flavoring you need only half a one, put the other half on a plate and cover with a glass tumbler.

This excludes the air and prevents it from drying up or getting mouldy.

Pumice soap and ammonia will cure the worst cases of tarnished brass.

Just moisten a cloth with ammonia and rub it briskly over the pumice soap and then apply to the article to be cleaned.

The operation is a simple and easy one and the results are immediate and most satisfactory.

Every housekeeper knows how difficult it is to clean under cabinets and dressers when you have waxed floors and do not want to move the furniture and leave marks from the rollers.

If you will take out the bottom drawer one can clean the floors perfectly and with satisfaction.

Where a floor is inlaid or polished and the polish has worn off, a good preparation for restoring is one-half pound of yellow wax, four ounces of oil of turpentine, one pint of linseed oil; cut the wax into bits and melt in something it can remain in (an old lard pail); add the linseed oil; remove from the fire when hot and when almost cool stir in the oil of turpentine.

When used put a little on a woollen cloth and rub in, then rub with a dry cloth.

Two tablespoons of melted butter, one and a half tablespoons of flour, half a can of tomatoes (strained), one teaspoon of salt, one cup of boiling water, one cup of creamy milk.

Cream the butter and flour. Add the tomatoes, stirring well to keep it smooth. Add the salt and water and cook ten minutes. Add the milk, heat thoroughly and serve.

STEWED CHICKEN AND RICE.

Get a nice fat chicken and cut it up as for frying. Put it in a stew pan with salt and white pepper and boiling water enough to cover it. Let it boil rapidly enough for a few minutes and then let cook slowly.

When chicken is partly done wash and pick over a cupful of rice and add to the chicken. Now it must boil rapidly until rice is tender. Serve on platter with the rice.

A spoonful of butter may be stirred in before serving.

POTATOES AU GRATIN.

Boil six medium-sized potatoes in salted water until they may be easily pierced with a fork; drain the water off in a colander.

When they are cool enough to handle cut the potatoes into small neat dice; put them into an earthenware baking dish; cover them with cream sauce; sprinkle them with half a cupful of fine white breadcrumbs mixed with half a cupful of grated cheese; dot the surface with a tablespoonful of butter in small bits, and put it in the oven to brown. Then turn it on a suitable platter and send it to the table.

ENGLISH WALNUT SALAD.

Crack twenty-five English walnuts, remove the meats carefully, put in a saucepan and cover with stock, adding a slice of onion and a bay leaf, and simmer gently twenty minutes.

Take out, cool, line a salad bowl with crisp lettuce leaves and sprinkle over them a handful of chopped watercress or nasturtium leaves and twelve pickled oysters or clams parboiled and marinated. Over this put the nuts, cover with French dressing, chill and serve.

CRANBERRY SAUCE.

Cranberry sauce is much nicer made in a double boiler. One pint cranberries, one pint sugar. Cook one hour.

LEMON PIE.

Line deep plate with rich pie crust. Bake till of a delicate brown. For filling take one cup boiling water, one tablespoon cornstarch, butter size of walnut.

Cook in double boiler till thick. Add beaten yolks of four eggs, three-fourths cup sugar, juice and rind of one lemon. Place in pie crust. Return to oven. Bake about twenty minutes. For a meringue beat the whites of four eggs till dry, then add a quarter cup sugar.

ALMOND CREAM CANDY.

Beat the white of one egg and beat with it one tablespoonful of water and then stir in one and one-quarter pounds of confectioner's sugar, adding three teaspoonfuls of vanilla; mix with this one cup of unchopped almonds; make this into bars and when cold cut in slices.

Delicious Doughnuts

Good doughnuts are good food.

Made from the right flour they are not only a delicious treat but the combination of right flour with fat is distinctly nourishing.

You see I put special emphasis on right flour. For it is very important. It means the difference between light, flaky, crumbly doughnuts that melt in your mouth and are easy to digest, and tough, rubbery greasy wads of dough, heavy, soggy, indigestible.

Try making doughnuts from OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR. Notice how rich, soft, and flaky they are. Every one comes out of the kettle browned to a turn—appetizing, delicious, nutritious, sweet as a nut.

And the reason is that "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" being richer in high quality gluten than ordinary flour resists the absorption of too much fat in cooking. It doesn't get rubbery, makes a lighter dough, absorbs just enough of the fat for nourishment, but not enough for indigestion. And that is an important point—very important. The absolute uniformity of "Royal Household" enables you to get the same splendid results every time.

No matter how good doughnuts seem when made from ordinary flour you will find them much better and more healthful when made from

"Royal Household"

Had Given Up All Hope of Living.

Heart Trouble Cured by Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. Andrew Savoy, Grattan's, N.B., writes:—"In the year 1905, I was taken sick and did not think I could live any length of time. My trouble was with my heart and people told me that nothing could be done for a case like mine. I consulted the very best doctors, but they could do me no good. For seven weeks I could hardly cross the floor. I had no pain, but was so weak nobody in the world can believe how I felt. I had given up all hopes of living and had given my little girl to my sister-in-law.

"One day a friend came to see me, and calling me by name, said, 'Lizzie, if I were you I would try a dose of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as they are good for heart trouble.' My husband got me a box, but for two days I was not feeling any better, but on the fourth day my husband said, 'I believe those pills are doing you good.' I was able to say, 'Yes, I feel a good deal better this morning.' He said, 'Well, I will get you another box right away.' I took two boxes and three doses out of the third one, and I was perfectly well and have not been sick since then.

"I will never be without them in my home for God knows if it had not been for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I would not have been alive now."

The Dope Favours Jeff In Battle With Johnson

Two very essential points are to be decided in judging the ability of a pugilist in these days of progression—in fact, a pugilist has to possess both qualities to be a champion—ability to take punishment and put it back with telling effect.

Cleverness without a knockout punch is decidedly against a boxer climbing to the top of the pugilistic tree. This has been proven many times, and in one instance, especially, when Jeffries knocked out "Jim" Corbett at Coney Island.

For twenty-three rounds Corbett simply chopped "Jeff" to pieces, as the saying goes, and the latter had hardly landed a punch. If the blows Corbett landed could have been counted, he probably hit Jeffries one hundred or more times, yet the one effective blow of Jeffries told more tales than the numberless upper cuts and straight jabs by Corbett which were dealt out in over one hour's fighting.

No more forceful evidence in behalf of the man with a knockout blow can be offered than the fight between Jeffries and Corbett, one of them unquestionably the cleverest boxer of this generation and the other the slow, but determined fighter, who could take all the punishment given to him and still have enough strength left to deal out a decisive blow.

Days That May Have Fled.

The days of a clever boxer being a champion fighter are gone. In olden times the clever man could win a battle when gloves were unheard of. Then a clever boxer's object was to blind his opponent, the objective point in nearly all old-time battles being the eyes. Combined with this was cunning seeking to distress an opponent by wrestling and shoving when opportunity offered. Since the days of John L. Sullivan, who perfected the knockout punch things have been very different. Of course, if a pugilist is also clever he has much the better chance, but to win a fight these days takes stamina and a "bull head," one that cannot be injured by a blow from a gloved hand.

"Battling" Nelson has won all of his fights through his persistency and ability to take punishment, with the added determination to wear his opponent down by keeping at him from the moment the gong sounded. He was not clever, nor did he have a knockout punch that could be depended upon, yet he held the championship for a number of years.

In sizing up Jeffries and Johnson there is no question that Jeffries has all the good qualities a fighter should possess, except that he is not clever—in fact, he is a trifle slow—but, like Nelson, he can take all the punishment a man can give him. He has what Nelson has not, the knock-out punch, when the time comes to land it. He has never been knocked out yet he met the hardest hitters in the pugilistic world when he fought Fitzsimmons and Sharkey.

The Negro is Cleverer.

Johnson is admitted to be cleverer than Jeffries, so the coming fight is a question whether he can stand the strain of a twenty or thirty-round contest, and by punishment wear Jeffries down until he is limp, the same as Corbett did Sullivan in their memorable fight in New Orleans.

In all of Johnson's fights he has never knocked out a first-class man, except Stanley Ketchel, and the fight was practically a giant against a pigmy. On the other hand, to Jeffries' credit are "Bob Fitzsimmons, "Jim" Corbett, "Gus Ruhlin, and "Jack" Munro. In his fight with Sharkey he failed to knock him out, owing, possibly, to many disadvantages, the fight taking place practically in an oven, the heat from nearly a thousand small arc lights being only a few feet above the stage. At the end of the third round the gloves were so saturated with water that they weighed pounds instead of ounces, and blows that would have had a telling effect slipped off the men as though the leather had been greased. Moreover, Jeffries was not in the best condition for a fight of such importance.

When none of these men could knock out Jeffries it can hardly be conceived that Johnson can do it, as few of his fights have been won by knockout punches, and his opponents did not class by a very large majority with men of the Fitzsimmons, Sharkey, and Corbett class.

This deduction may be all wrong, but "dope" on the battles of the men shows that Jeffries is somewhat of a stake horse compared with Johnson. One has knocked out good men, the other has not.

LAME BACK CAUSED BY DIRTY KIDNEYS

A Few Doses Will Clean and Regulate the Kidneys and Make You Feel Fine.

Out-of-order kidneys act fine and backache or bladder misery is relieved after a few doses of Pape's Diuretic.

Pains in the back, sides or loins, rheumatic twinges, debilitating headache, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness, inflamed or swollen eyelids, worn-out feeling and many other symptoms of clogged, inactive kidneys simply vanish.

Frequent painful and uncontrollable urination due to a weak or irritable bladder is promptly overcome.

The moment you suspect any kidney bladder or urinary disorder, or feel rheumatism coming, begin taking this harmless remedy, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which will effect so thorough and prompt a cure as a fifty-cent treatment of Pape's Diuretic, which any druggist can supply.

This unusual preparation goes direct to the out-of-order kidneys, bladder and urinary system, cleaning, healing and strengthening these organs and glands, and completes the cure before you realize it.

A few days' treatment with Pape's Diuretic means clean, active, healthy kidneys, bladder and urinary organs—and you feel fine.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker, or any mercantile agency will tell you that Pape, Thompson & Pape, of Cincinnati, is a large and responsible medicine concern, thoroughly worthy of your confidence.

COOKERY FOR SPRING

Frequently in making some familiar dish a good cook will discover some clever little variation in the way of flavoring new ingredients or serving which add to the appearance and taste of the dish and tune the palate for it anew.

Thus, one clever woman in preparing salads composed of celery and walnuts, or celery, nuts and apples, discovered that if the nuts were first passed through the meat chopper and reduced to the consistency of coarse meal the flavor was greatly improved and the mastication process made easy.

She shreds the celery rather fine and arranges the minced nuts into a little mount on each portion, finishing with a spoonful of thick mayonnaise.

When other ideas for sandwiches fail, try the unusual and tasty ones made of baked beans. The tinned beans can be used, although the home product is preferable. Mash the beans through a wire sieve and work into a soft paste, using a few drops of warm water if necessary. Spread on tiny oblongs of buttered white bread and press together.

Or press through the sieve in the same way and moisten a little with any favorite condiment, spread on small thin slices of rye bread and form into sandwiches as before. The latter receipt makes a "hot" and substantial sandwich.

One woman who her friends think has inspirations for cookery never makes stuffing for poultry without including in it a little chopped sausage. Usually the sausage is cooked, but of late she has discovered that the raw porcupine product is even better. This makes a rich and very "filling" stuffing for either turkey or chicken, one which will meet with favor among folk of hearty appetite—and strong digestion.

For an old-fashioned treat which is so old that it will be new to many of the present generation, make five cornmeal griddle cakes the size of a breakfast plate, and put one upon the other with shaved maple sugar and plenty of butter between. Cut in triangular shape like pie and serve thus.

In serving cocoa some time drop a marshmallow in each cup, and notice the delicate flavor it imparts in addition to looking pretty and novel.

When something out of the usual run is desired for a home luncheon try creamed hazel nuts. Shell the nuts, blanch and boil until soft, then cover with cream sauce. This dainty can be served in individual ramekins or in paper cases. The flavor is new and appetising.

Serve pineapple ice cream or water ice in "surprise style" for the next guest-luncheon, for which novel touches are in order. This is done by cutting the top carefully away, including the green spray itself, and scooping out the pulp with a spoon. Fill with water ice or frozen pineapple made from the pulp, replace the top and bring to table flaunting its green top as before.

Or instead of the water ice for the filling use a delicate cream made by this formula. Stew the pulp of the pineapple, sweeten well, strain through a press, add juice of one lemon and freeze. When partly frozen stir in a cup of whipped cream and freeze again until stiff.

PEARED PARALYSIS

Mr. F. A. Kruts, Schwartz, Que., writes, "For one year I was a complete nervous wreck, could not rest or sleep, had indigestion and terrible headaches and constantly feared paralysis. Six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food made me well and strong. There is no treatment in the world so good as this for building up the nervous system."

PRACTICAL HINTS

Never polish a piano with anything but refined linseed oil.

Verdigris can be removed from brass by the use of ammonia.

Medicine should never be left in sight of the invalid in the sick room.

Jonquils or daffodils are placed to advantage in a brass or copper urn or vase.

To make sure that bread will rise in cold weather, warm the flour before mixing.

Undue consumption of tea, coffee, cocoa or chocolate will make the skin sallow.

Shoes will last much longer if occasionally rubbed with vaseline when they are new.

A long-handled buttonhook should be kept in the laundry to clean the lint from the tub outlets.

A small quantity of chopped figs added to a nut and apple salad gives an excellent flavour.

For obstinate nosebleed, put an ice pack or a cloth wrung out in ice water at the base of the neck.

A cloth skirt should never be hung up inside out, as this tends to crease it more than anything else.

Boiled rice or baked potato will go excellently with sweetbreads, and this dish in good for the sick.

The cheaper and lighter the pan, the whiter and lighter your bread when you bake in a gas range.

Chiffon velvet is a most excellent thing for brushing a felt hat, whether a man's or a woman's.

To insure that potted plants will thrive, always have a little water in the saucer under the flower pot.

When milk boils over on the stove sprinkle on some salt at once. This will counteract the disagreeable odor.

Bronzes should be cleaned by rubbing with sweet oil. Rub dry with a soft cloth and polish with chamois.

Gruel, when properly prepared, should be a little thicker than cream and should be absolutely free from lumps.

After putting buttered paper in the cake pans, sprinkle in just a little flour. This will keep the cakes from sticking.—Brooklyn Standard-Eagle.

HANDICAPPED

This is the Case With Many Peterborough People.

Too many Peterborough citizens are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden and stooping or lifting an impossibility. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest, and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief, but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Can you doubt Peterborough evidence.

W. Wormington, of 121 Brock St., Peterborough, Ont., says:

"I had suffered with rheumatism for over three years. I found little or no relief in any of the remedies I tried. I became so stiff and sore that I could scarcely turn in bed, and had to lay off from my work. The urine was highly coloured and filled with a heavy, sand-like sediment, which plainly told the disordered state of the kidneys. I tried Booth's Kidney Pills through an advertisement at McDermid & Jury's Drug Store, and was surprised to see how quickly the urine cleared. The kidneys were soon active and the uric acid went from my system. The rheumatism gradually became less severe and finally left me. I am better than in years previous and could not hesitate to recommend Booth's Kidney Pills.

COURTSHIP OF A BASEBALL FAN.

They were seated in the parlour and the lights were burning dim;
He was a diamond hero—she a fan quite fair and trim.
But they knew not, as he opened up the game by murmuring "Love—"
That father was the umpire on the stairway just above.

"I like your form"—he led off first—"with me you've made a hit"
You've got the curves—you've got the speed, and you are looking fit—
Now, if with you, my turtle dove, I make a hit likewise,
Won't you improve my single state and make a sacrifice?"

"I'll never play too far off base," he whispered in her ear—
"My salary whip has got the stuff to put 'em over, dear;
Just give the signal for a 'steal' and I'll no longer roam,
And when I slide into the plate, please call me safe at home."

"I've got to have the hope complete," the maiden softly sighed;
"Show me your batting average in Mr. Bradstreet's Guide;
It takes a lot of speed these days with cunning and intrigue,
To win a battle now and then within the Grocers' League.'

"But give me errorless support"—his heart here took a bound—
"And let me live in big league style and I may come around;
Unwrap the tangle from the dope and you can cop the bet,
We'll play a double-header, pal, on any date you set."

He started warming up at once, and with a happy sigh
He whipped a fast one round her neck—the other was waist high;
But here the umpire butted in—she said, "Oh, father, please,
Don't call him out, he's showing me the way they work the 'squeeze.'"

The old man gave an irate snort and said "I'll help the fun
By shewing him another play that's called 'the hit and run.'"
He swung like Wagner at his best—a sole-inspiring clout—
The Son of Swat slid down the steps—the umpire yelled, "You're Out!"

DOLLY PARTY GAME

A "doll hunt" is a delightful way to entertain the little folks at this season.

Arrange in the centre of the parlour a cabinet with bright coloured strings.

Attach to each string a card bearing the name of the doll to be found.

Let the little ones dress their dolls and afterward serve simple refreshments.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Cod liver oil stains on linen may be eradicated by soaking the marks with equal parts of liquid ammonia and hot water, mixed. Afterward wash with soft water and soap.

To shade lace mix five cents worth of yellow ochre with an equal quantity of rice powder and put in a box. Put in the lace and shake it up. Brush off all the powder possible. It will be a fast colour.

Cabbage water is the cause of disagreeable smells when it is not thrown away. To avoid the smell, some people put a piece of charcoal in with the cabbage when boiling it.

For a sardine cocktail, a novel dish, prepare cocktail sauce in a glass surrounded by ice, as in an oyster cocktail. Then cut sardines in pieces about an inch long. Serve in the sauce.

Some people use the whites as well as the yolks of eggs in making mayonnaise. Just before serving the mayonnaise the white of the egg is whipped stiff and beaten into the dressing.

In mixing mustard, use warm, never hot water. If the water is too warm it will make the condiment flat. A delicious mustard is made by mixing the dry mustard with equal parts of olive oil and tarragon vinegar.

After frying doughnuts, place the kettle on hot grease out of doors and pour in a little cold water, enough pour in a little cold water, enough to make the grease bubble. This will take out the burnt grease and the grease may be used again.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts, a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

"TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR ROOM" WAS SPLENDIDLY GIVEN IN ENNISMORE

Produced There by Dramatic Club on St. Patrick's Night—Hall Was Crowded and Many Turned Away —A Splendid Programme.

NEW OFFICERS OF T. A. S.

Examiner Special.

Ennismore, March 22nd.—As usual the feast of Ireland's patront saint was celebrated in a most appropriate and befitting manner in Ennismore. The Holy Sacrifice of the mass was offered by the pastor at 9 o'clock at which upwards of two hundred, mostly members of St. Martin's T.A.S., received Holy Communion. A short sermon after mass was followed by the renewal of the total abstinence pledge for another year. The second largest number in the history of this flourishing society, was entered on the parish books, and Father Fitzpatrick and his able committee, felt rather elated at the sight of so many young men pledging themselves against liquor, thereby showing a generous disposition to further the cause of total abstinence. Then followed the election of officers for the coming year, which resulted as follows:

President—P. J. Scollard.
Vice-President—James Killen.
Treasurer—Thos. Flood, Jr.
Secretary—Peter Galvin.
Committee — Mich. Perdue, ex-Reeve, Wm. Crough, sr, John Geary, Jos. Galvin, John O'Donoghue, sr., Nat Carew, J. K. Galvin, Dan Crough.

No better choice could possibly be made, as each member of the committee is a worker and will do his best to further the interests of the society. Father Fitzpatrick expects to have at least three hundred members within the next two months.

In the afternoon a matinee was given by the Ennismore Dramatic Co. for the children and old people, and the hall was fairly well filled.

The entertainment in the evening was in keeping with that of any former year. The number in attendance was far larger than ever, over fifty or sixty being unable to get into the hall, while fully one hundred were obliged to stand in the porch and aisles. The folowing was the programme presented:

Overture—"Irish Airs" by Ennismore orchestra.
Violin solo—Viola Hickson.
Instrumental duet — Mrs. Dan Crough and Beatrice Flynn.
Song and dance—Irishman from Cork, Mich. Twomey and Earl Hickson.
1st act of play, "Ten Nights in a Bar-room."
Song—"Torence's Farewell"—Olive Herlihey, of Downeyville.
Banjo selection, "Why Can't I Make a Hit—J. K. Galvin.
2nd act of play.
Song, "The Old Gray Bonnet"—Wm Bell.
Song, 'Nora Malone' — Mary Ann Creugh.
3rd act of play.
Song, Irish Eyes of Blue—T. T. Crough.
Song, Sweet Vale of Avoca—Mrs. John E. Donoghue.
4th act of play.
Dance, Irish Jig—O'Conor Bros.
Song—Rings on My Fingers—Ernest Telford.
Song, Go Find a Sweetheart from the Emerald Isle—Lizzie Sullivan.
Song, Tobermory (Scotch)—Clayton Telford.
5th act of play.
God Save the King.

During the evening's programme many encores were given and responded to by the Telford Bros., Wm. Bell, J. K. Galvin, T. T. Crough and others.

The drama, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," old and familiarly known, was well given The following is the cast of characters:

Joe Morgan (the drunkard) — Jos. O'Reilly.
Sample Swichell, a live Yankee—Pat Toohar.
Simon Slade, the landlord—Frank Scollard.
Mr. Romaine, the philanthropist—Mr. J. A. O'Donoghue, teacher.
Harvey Green, the gambler—James Dionne.
Willie Hammond, the pride of the village—Mich. J. Fitzpatrick.
Frank Slade, the example—Herbert Crough.
Mrs. Morgan, the drunkard's wife—Agnes Scollard.
Mary Morgan, the drunkard's child—Loretta Kennedy.
Mehetabel Cartwright, a Yankee girl Lottie Scollard.
Mrs. Slade, the landlord's wife—Evelyn Carew.

The object is to show the evil effects of intoxicating liquor and the certain and sad ruin it produces on those who abuse it. The lessons are well and forcibly taught, and no one can listen to this drama without feeling a disgust for liquor, and a horror of its direful effects. The parts were all well taken and the company upheld their reputation as being one of the best delineators of drama in the country.

The concert in the evening was witnessed by close on six hundred people, many of whom came from a distance. They were there in large numbers from Emily, Bridgenorth, Smith, Young's Point, Lakefield and even Douro and Asphodel sent their contingents.

Each succeeding year finds the attendance larger than the year before, but this year, many were obliged to go away, not even being able to enter the porch.

BASEBALL BREVITIES

Jack Thoney is out of baseball for good, his throwing arm having gone back on him completely. It was apparently all right again, but while at practice with the Red Sox at Hot Springs it suddenly collapsed again, dislocating the shoulder that was first injured at Diamond Park in 1907. Ill luck has pursued Thoney ever since then, and robbed the baseball world of one of the most sensational and brilliant players.

Cincinnati beat the Boston Americans yesterday at Hot Springs by 9 to 3.

The main stand at Rochester is to be extended along the first base line and toward the plate in front, several rows of seats and boxes being planned in front. The contractor has plenty of time to complete the work before the champions return home to open the season on May 9.

"Bumpus" Jones and Pitcher Wiggs have signed their contracts and have returned them to the Montreal club. Both men state that they are in shape, and expect to do great work this season. Same old story. All players hand it out when they sign.

Ben Houser, last year's Toronto first baseman, has entirely recovered from the injury to his leg, and is again playing fine ball for the Philadelphia Americans. Recently he made three hits in a practice game.

New York Mail: The more we see of Fred Mitchell behind the bat the better we like the way he works. He is not as fast on his feet as we might like, but he is there every other way. His arm is coming around into shape, and his pegs to the bags are the real cheese. Fred is as flat-footed as some of the dusky boys in this town, and it's said that the other morning he gave an old pair of shoes to one of the waiters, but the smoke brought them back again complaining they were too big. That's going some.

Manager Stallings has decided on this year's infield for the New York Americans, with the exception of shortstop, Capt. Chase will of course play first, Earl Gardner will be at second, and Austin at third. Jack Knight has a fight on for shortstop, Kid Foster, who has purchased of Jersey City, has a chance for the job. Roach and Johnson, third basemen, have not shown quite in Austin's class.

If Manager Jack Dunn wants Bobby Hall to play on the Baltimore team this season he will have to open the money bag. At least, that is what the Oriole third sacker says. Hall is holding out for more money and threatens to quit unless Dunn comes through with the coin. On the other hand Dunn says nothing doing and that Hall will be on hand when the time comes. Jimmy Catiz will be stationed at third this season and Hall is to be switched to the right field.

Sam Wicker, the burly twirler with the Montreal club last year, is slated for a berth in some league below class A. Manager Barrow has sent out word to minor league managers all over the country, offering for sale the portly heaver. Wicker should be a good man in the New York State League or any class B league. At times last year he pitched great ball but at other times his work was of the poorest order.

Philadelphia Telegraph: The players have a habit of picking a pool ball off the table and slipping it into another man's pocket. This causes those playing to have only fourteen of the ivories to shoot at. One evening Eddie Grant vowed vengeance on the man who had swiped the ball, only to discover after he had played several games that someone had slipped it into his own pocket. John Titus likes to watch the game, but he seldom picks up a cue. John thought that he would fool the players, so he took a lump of loaf sugar and placed it on the rail of the table, thinking that someone would take it for a piece of chalk. For more than an hour "Silent John" watched that piece of sugar like a cat does a mouse. He was momentarily hoping that the joke would work. Unfortunately for Titus' scheme, one of the players saw him place the sugar on the rail, and the laugh was on the silent outfielder.

Toronto Wins Out.

Ottawa, March 24.—It has been agreed that the Hamilton, Waterloo & Guelph Radial Railway will be given permission to cross over and under highways and easements of the City of Toronto, on plans to be agreed to between the city and the company engineers, the Railway Board to arbitrate if differences arise.

The company definitely agrees to the proposal of the city that lines are not to parallel streets, it being distinctly understood that the rights of the company as outlined above apply to the "crossing" of streets. Thus the city wins its main contention.

Babe Burned to Death.

Windsor, March 24.—Herbert Jubenville, the two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Jubenville, Tilbury East, was burned to death yesterday morning before the eyes of three young brothers. The mother had left the house to do chores in the barn. The child was in a baby carriage playing with a ruler with a piece of string attached, a few feet from the stove. It is supposed the string became ignited, and the clothing caught fire.

The mother found the charred remains in the carriage.

Wireless on Lake Superior.

Port Arthur, March 24.—On the first trip out of Duluth harbor, the Booth steamer Moore, which leaves next Sunday, will carry to Washington Harbor, Isle Royale, a wireless outfit. When this is installed, every point on the lake will be covered, and a boat carrying equipment cannot be beyond the reach of communication with land.

Suicide For Nation's Good.

Albany, N.Y., March 24.—A hero, a martyr, a political and social suicide for the good of his country.

This was the wreath placed upon the head of Senator Ben Conger yesterday by his chief counsel when his summing up concluded the Senate's investigation of Conger's bribery charges against Senator Allds.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, March 23.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific market offerings were 450 cattle, 225 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 1200 calves. There was a good demand and as the supply was not very large prices realized were much the same as on Monday. Trade was fairly active. Choice Ontario stall-fed steers sold at 6½c to 6¾c; good, at 6c to 6¼c; fairly good, at 5½c to 5¾c; fair, at 5c to 5½c; common, at 4½c to 4¾c per lb. Choice fat cows sold with a fair sale at 5c to 5¼c, and fair to common cows at 3½c to 4½c per lb. A few extra good bulls brought 5c to 5½c and the lower grades 4c to 4½c per lb.

A feature of the small meat trade was a weaker feeling in the market for hogs, as supplies were somewhat in excess of requirements. Sales of selected lots were made at 8¾c to 8¾c per cwt., weighed off cars.

There was an increased supply of calves and prices ruled much lower than on Monday. Demand was good at prices $3 to $20 each as to quality.

The demand for spring lambs was active, and offerings not very large, and prices ranged from $5 to $9 each. Old sheep met with a fair sale at 4c per lb.

Too Much French Taught.

Ottawa, March 24.—Archibald McFall of Lemieux, Russell County, a Roman Catholic, but a public school supporter, has laid a complaint that he cannot get his children taught enought English in the public school to fit them properly for the duties of Canadian citizenship. He claims that, though the school he pays taxes to and sends his children to is a public school, the larger part of the teaching is in French. The school is known as the Rose Corners school.

BORDEN ON EMPIRE.

Tells Bostonese Some of the Problems to Be Solved.

Boston, March 24.—"The task which confronted George Washington and Alexander Hamilton, in the construction days following 1784, was not unlike that which confronts the statesmen of the British Empire at the present time," was the declaration made in an interesting address delivered before the Boston Canadian Club last night by R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party of Canada. He said, in part:

"The task of the British Empire to-day is one of surpassing greatness. You have great problems, but consider for a moment those of the empire.

"Double the area of your vast territory, divide it into a hundred fragments, great and small, and distribute them among the continents, and throughout all the seas.

"Consecrate three-fourths of your white population into an area of 250,000 square miles, and make it dependent on your overseas dominions for its food supply.

"Undertake the government of a distant alien population of 300,000,000 endowed—maybap encumbered—with very old complicated civilizations, embracing 50 jarring and jealous nationalities, a hundred religions, a thousand different castes, and still unpermeated by any real capacity for the task of self-government.

"Add to your responsibilities some fifty colonies and protectorates, scattered throughout the world, and governed by such diverse administrative methods as are best adapted to the requirements of their several peoples.

"Complicate this situation by the growth of great neighboring naval powers, tending to deprive you of that secure and open path across the seas, which would be absolutely essential to the integrity and cohesion of your empire.

"And commit the control of so vast an empire to a Parliament that is called upon to settle not only great imperial questions, but a thousand matters of purely domestic concern, which in the United States or Canada is largely left to state or provincial legislatures or to municipal authorities."

All China to Arm.

Berlin, March 24.—A genuine military awakening in China was foreshadowed in an interview given by Chinese Minister Yn-Tchang, who is about to relinquish his post in Berlin and return to Pekin to assume the Ministry of War.

"I intend to introduce compulsory military service in China," said the Minister, who added: "If we make all the available men join the military, we have such an enormous population—some 400,000,000—that we shall overshadow all other armed nations.

"The details of the plan have not yet been worked out, but we propose to make our young men soldiers, not only through drills, but by education. They must learn what a shame it is for the most ancient and, in population, the greatest nation on earth to be so weak.

"I shall have excellent assistants in the War Office, who have studied European military systems and will be of the greatest help."

Has Tariff Been Settled?

New York, March 24.—The Tribune, Republican organ, says to-day:

There was a report last night that the national Government had arrived at a definite arrangement with Canada on the tariff. It was said that this would be promulgated within a few days from Ottawa and Washington.

The conference at Albany, it was said, had not led to any definite understanding, but that since then there has been an interchange of communications with the President and the Canadian Government, which resulted last evening in the smoothing over of all difficulties."

DESPERADO ON A TRAIN SHOOTS TWO MEN

Conductor and Pullman Car Porter are Wounded—Man Barricades Himself and is at Length Shot Down.

POLICE SHOOT HIM

Special to The Examiner.

Wilmington, Del., March 23.—Three men were killed on a northbound Baltimore & Ohio railroad train this afternoon in a fight which began at Newark, Del., and ended in a desperate battle between the police, aided by the firemen and citizens, and a murderer at Delaware Station here, following the arrival of the train at 5.17 o'clock. Several were wounded.

The dead are: O. E. Wellman, of Philadelphia, conductor of the train; Samuel Williams, coloured, Pullman porter, whose home is said to have been in Jersey City; and J. H. Bethea, of Dillon, S.C. This triple tragedy was the result of an altercation between Bethea, who was a passenger, and Williams, porter on the Pullman. The car was bound from Washington to Jersey City. Bethea, who had been drinking heavily, shot the porter through the heart, killing him instantly. When Conductor Wellman saw the porter and ran up, Bethea fired a second shot into the coloured man's body. Then, without a word, he shot Wellman through the heart. The conductor fell dead in his tracks. Before the passengers could interfere the double murderer barricaded himself in the toilet room of the Pullman car and threatened to kill the first person who approached. Meanwhile, the train reached Wilmington. When it came into the station a hurry call was sent to the police station.

When the officers arrived and called on Bethea to surrender, he opened fire on them with an automatic revolver. After a battle lasting an hour, the murderer was driven from his stronghold by firemen with hose, and continued his flight from the car platform, where he was at length shot down.

PREPARATIONS FOR DERBY

World's Best Runners Will Compete in New York Event.

New York, March 23.—The next big professional foot race will be the $10,000 Marathon Derby at the New York Polo grounds on April 2nd. All the men who appeared in the recent Garden races — Ljungstrom, Johannsen, Crowley, Clarke Meadows, Acoose, Sellen, Holmer and Zanti—will be contenders, as well as Henri St. Yves and Pietri Dorando. Doubtful starters are Tom Longboat and Johnny Hayes.

The race is likely to throw the experts off. The men who have been cutting up high jinks indoors are likely to go to the bad on the heavy turf track at the Polo grounds. If Ljungstrom can run on the turf in the form he showed over the boards, he will be a sure winner. There's where the rub comes, however. The track is likely to upset all calculations, especially if it should be muddy.

From all indications the coming Derby will produce the greatest Marathon in the annals of sport. Never has such a field faced the barrier. It will be one gruelling battle from flagfall to finish and the man who wins will be a wonder.

A year or so ago a 1.51 performance for twenty miles would have been scoffed at. Ljungstrom, when he turned his twenty miles in 1.50.58 3-5 the other night, could have kept on at the same gait for another five miles. When he trotted over to pose for the photographers immediately after the race, the only thing that denoted his exertions was his breathing. Ten minutes after the race one never would have known that Ljungstrom had run the fastest twenty miles in the annals of sport.

THE BOYS GOT SUSPENDED SENTENCE

For Having Stolen Several Bottles of Beer From Cellar of Havelock Resident—Men Implicated Were Fined.

APPEARED YESTERDAY

The boys who were charged with stealing several bottles of beer from the cellar of a Havelock resident, appeared before Magistrate Edmison at Havelock yesterday. They were found guilty but were allowed to go on suspended sentence. The men who were instrumental in having the boys commit the theft were each fined five dollars and costs, amounting to $7.80. It appears that the boys first went, and entering the cellar carried away two bottles of beer. They took them to a poolroom where with some men they drank the contents. These men persuaded the lads to make another trip and on their second visit they got four bottles. A third one was also made and they took six on this occasion. It is said that both men and boys were drunk. The boys averaged in age about fifteen years.

CHARGE IS LAID

Against Norwood Hotelkeeper for Selling Liquor Without a License.

A charge has been laid against the proprietor of the Norwood House, Norwood, for selling liquor without a license. The offence is alleged to have taken place quite recently and will come up for hearing before Magistrate Edmison in the course of a few days.

SUMMER WEATHER

Mr. Harry Long, Writing From Edmonton, Says Temperature is 86.

Mr. Charlie Cheverill received a letter yesterday from Mr. Harry Long, who is at present in Edmonton, Alta. Mr. Long stated that in Edmonton on the seventeenth of March the temperature was 86 in the sun. They were experiencing beautiful weather. Two weeks ago, Mr. Long said, there were several inches of snow in Edmonton, but now it is all gone and they are having regular summer weather.

ASK WM. MADILL

Parisian Sage, the Hair Grower, Is Now Sold in Canada on Money Back Plan.

It's a mighty good thing for the women of Canada that Parisian Sage can now be obtained in every town of consequence.

No preparation for the hair has done so much to stop falling hair and eradicate dandruff and make women's hair beautiful as Parisian Sage.

Parisian Sage is the only certain destroyer of the dandruff microbe which is the cause of 97 per cent. of hair troubles.

These pernicious, peraistent and destructive little devils thrive on the ordinary hair tonics.

Parisian Sage is such an extraordinary and quick acting rejuvenator that Wm. Madill, who is the agent in Peterborough guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It is a magnificent dressing for women who desire luxuriant, lustrous hair that compels admiration.

And a large bottle of Parisian Sage costs only 50 cents at Wm. Madill's, and all over Canada.

THEY PLAYED WILLIAM TELL AIM WAS BAD

Bullet Fired at Cigarette Held in the Lips of a Montreal Youth Passed Through the Latter's Mouth.

WOUND NOT DANGEROUS

Special to The Examiner.

Cincinnati, Ohio, March 23.—The drama of "William Tell," the noted shot an apple of his son's head, was Swiss archer who, tradition says, re-enacted in slightly different form in the shooting gallery conducted by D. P. Bunce on West Sixth street late to-day.

Bunce, during an argument with Harry Lacken, aged 21, whose home is in Montreal Canada, declared that he could shoot off the ashes from a cigarette held between Lacken's lips. Lacken agreed to the trial, and stood under the electric lamps near the shooting gallery targets. Bunce fired, but the bullet did not touch the cigarette. Instead, it passed through Lacken's lip and into his mouth. The wounded young man was taken to the city hospital. His injury is not fatal. No arrest was made, as the shooting was purely an accident.

SPRING SKIN TROUBLES

Pimples, Eruptions and "Spotty Complexions."

At this season, scores of people—girls and young women especially—find their faces disfigured by pimples, dark spots, eruptions, etc. The skin needs attention—needs renovating after the trying time it has passed through during the winter.

Just think what it has gone through! You have been out in rain and sleet and snow. You have been at one moment perspiring from skating, or some other exertion. Then you have stood to "cool off." You have spent hours of the day indoors at a temperature equal to summer heat. Then you have covered up your skin—except your face—and got out in a temperature away below zero. No wonder that, with all these changes, the skin of the face and neck shows signs of needing attention.

Don't forget that the skin has to do work just as any other organ of the body, and if you overwork it, it gives out. Zam-Buk is the remedy. Smear it lightly over the spots, the eruptions, the sallow patches at nights, and notice how quickly your appearance improves. As the rich refined, herbal essences, sink deep into the tissue, the hard, scurfy-like patches are removed. Better colour results. The cells of the skin become transparent. The blood beneath is able to impart its proper colouring to the tissue, and the delicate bloom of health replaces the sallowness and pallor of disease.

Zam-Buk is also of great use for skin injuries and diseases. Eczema, ulcers, chaps, ringworm, acne, yield to its use. For cuts, burns, bruises, children's rashes, etc., it is unequalled, and it is a sure cure for piles. All druggists and stores at 50c. a box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful substitutes and imitations.

CANDY POISONED!

Port Perry Student is Made Very Ill by Chocolates.

Valentia, March 23.—To be sick as a result of being poisoned by eating chocolates, has fallen to the unfortunate lot of Mr. Victor Suggitt, of Valentia, son of Mr. Wm. Suggitt, who is attending the Port Perry High School. One day recently Suggitt bought some chocolates and treated some of his companions. He ate a number of them and as a result became sick, and returned to his home. Some of the other boys who partook of the chocolates are also sick. Suggitt claims that the chocolates contained poison.

HER TORONTO DEBUT

Mrs. W. A. Greenslade Will Appear at Association Hall.

Mrs. W. A. Greenslade, well known in Peterborough as a contralto vocalist, and for the past year a pupil of Ed. Barton at the Conservatory of Music, will make her debut as a concert soprano at Association Hall, Toronto on March the 30th. Previous toMr. Barton visiting Peterborough, Mrs. Greenslade was known as a contralto singer and it is a revelation to those who have heard her sing in the role to learn that she will make her first appearance before the critics of Toronto as a genuine soprano vocalist. Mr. Barton has had a wide experience in testing voices in England, France and Canada, and is quite capable of recognizing natural talent and ability. He is confident that Mrs. Greenslade will be a great success as a soprano soloist.

SEVEN YEARS IN KINGSTON PENITENTIARY

Hamilton Magistrate Gives Long Term to Man Guilty of of Bigamy —Deserted Wife at Stepney, England.

MARRIED AT DUNDAS

Hamilton, March 24.—William G. Nash, who was arrested last night on a charge of bigamy was this morning sentenced to seven years at Kingston penitentiary by Magistrate Jelfs. Nash deserted a wife in Stepney, England, a few days before her child was born. Clara Brown, the Dundas girl, whom he also married, was likewise deserted.

HIGH MASS

Holy Thursday Services in St. Peter's Cathedral.

Solemn High Mass was celebrated by his Lordship Bishop O'Connor, at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning. His Lordship was assisted by Rev. Father McColl, as master of ceremonies; Father Scanlan, of Grafton, as deacon, and Father Fitzpatrick of Ennismore, as sub-deacon.

The visiting clergy were Father F. Sullivan, of Port Hope, Father Keeley, of Lindsay, Father Bretherton of Hastings, Father Galvin of Kinmount, Father Phelan, of Lakefield, and Father McGuire, of Douro.

ANNUAL MEETING

Midland Football Organization Will Start Campaign To-morrow.

The annual meeting of the Midland Football League will be held in the Y. M. C. A. parlours to-morrow afternoon at 1 o'clock, and every team in the district that intends to play the game this year is asked to have representatives present at this meeting, as business of importance is to come up for discussion, notably the proposed new constitution, which, it is understood, embodies some new and important features. Officers will be elected and the reports of last season's work received.

THE "CADI" CHARGED

County Magistrate Moore Has to Explain His Dog Being at Large.

Lindsay, March 23.—On a complaint being lodged by Mr. Samuel McGill, the town dog catcher, against County Police Magistrate F. D. Moore, Chief Vincent this morning laid an information against Mr. Moore for allowing his dog to run at large contrary to the regulations of the by-law recently passed by the town council. The case will come before Police Magistrate Jackson and it is understood that Mr. G. H. Hopkins, K.C., will be present for Mr. Moore, while in all probability the acting town solicitor will appear for the prosecution.

ON BLACKLIST

One Man is Assessed $12.60 at Police Court To-day.

Harry Pergue pleaded guilty to partaking of the "nectarial cup" too often. Yesterday afternoon Harry was arrested and brought to the police station by P. C. McGinty.

The magistrate imposed a fine of two dollars, which Harry paid.

A black-listed man was fined $12.60, to be paid within ten days, for liquor he obtained on March 12th.

SOFTNESS OF SEALSKIN.

Is Rivalled by Human Hair Where Dandruff is Eradicated.

Sealskin is admired the world over for its softness and glossiness; and yet the human hair is equally as soft and glossy when healthy; and the radical cause of all hair trouble is dandruff, which is caused by a pestiferous parasite that saps the vitality of the hair at its root. Newbro's Herpicide is the only preparation that is fatal to the dandruff germ. Without dandruff there is no falling hair, but a luxuriant growth of glossy, soft hair is certain. Scouring the scalp won't cure dandruff. Kill the dandruff germ. Thousands of women owe their beautiful suits of hair to Newbro's Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Sold by McDermid & Jury. Druggists; also Payne's Drug Store. One Dollar Bottles guaranteed.

SIXTEEN YEAR OLD GIRL IS CHARGED WITH MURDER

Is Accused of Having Poisoned Her Sister by Administering Strychnine —A Two-Hour Examination.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Special to The Examiner:

Massillon, O., March 22.—"Not guilty" was the plea entered by 16-year-old Catherine Mantz, when arraigned before Mayor Remley to-day on the charge of murdering her sister, Elizabeth, aegd 19, "by administering a deadly drug."

This morning, after a night in the Massillon jail, the girl underwent a two hours' examination before Chief of Police Ertle and Mayor Remley. She finally gave the police the name of the man who, she says, gave her the poison supposed to have caused the death of her sister. Beyond saying that the man lives in Canton, the police will tell nothing. Massillon authorities went to Canton this afternoon to search for him.

According to the girl's latest version of the affair, she purchased strychnine at the man's request for the purpose of killing a dog. Two days before Elizabeth was found dead, Catherine says, this man gave her two capsules. One of them she threw away and the other she placed on the kitchen table in the Mantz home.

THE FIRST LAUNCHED

The "Tootsie" Put Into the Water on Tuesday Last.

The beautiful weather of the past few days has caused some launch owners to make preparations for the coming season. The first boat to be launched was the "Tootsie," the launching having taken place on Tuesday afternoon, at Rye's boat house. The "Tootsie" is owned by Mr. H. Allin, and he expects to make the initial trip to-morrow or Saturday. The Otonabee River is now free of ice and to-morrow will likely see a large number of boats got ready for the summer.

DR. VOGT COMING

Local Entrants in Earl Grey Competition Will Have Special Rehearsal

Mr. R. Gliddon, conductor of the Conservatory Madrigal Club and Mr. R. J. Devey, director of the local production of Geisha, both of which organizations wil take place in the Earl Grey competition, have been notified that Dr. Vogt will come to the city on Easter Monday to attend the rehearsals of the Dramatic Club and Geisha.

To-morrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock, and Saturday evening, practices will be held. It is necessary to have a full attendance at each practice as the final day will soon come round.

ON THE ALERT FOR NOVELTIES

Women who are on the alert for novelties now vary the croutons served with soup by making them of rye bread instead of from the wheaten loaf. The crusts are trimmed away from a thick slice of bread, the surface of which is then rubbed ever so lightly with a clove of garlic cut in half. After being cut into the conventional squares or triangles they are transferred to a baking dish and browned delicately in a quick oven.

Others vary the grape fruit salad now and then by the addition of stuffed Malaga or hothouse grapes. To prepare it this way seed the grapes and in each, replacing the seeds, put a blanched hazel nut. Mix with the grape fruit and serve on white lettuce hearts with French dressing. The juice of the shaddock, by the way, should be used instead of vinegar in the French dressing. This makes a salad attractive to the eye as well as delicious.

During the short season that oysters now remain to use they may, for novelty's sake, be served roasted. For this get the large ones in shells, wash and put in a pan with the deeper side of the shell down so as to form a receptacle for the juice. The oven should be a hot one. When they open they are done. Remove from the pan at once, carefully take away the top shell without spilling the juice, put a bit of butter on each, add a dash of seasoning and serve on a plate with a napkin under each portion.

FRESH FRUIT AND FISH AT HARRY BRADSHAW'S

The best you ever tasted for Easter and every other day—the nicest you ever saw. Nothing more seasonable for the springtime table. As usual, Harry Bradshaw's fruit and fish store is crammed full of the most toothsome and healthsome foods and relishes for early spring, that helps to give zest to fickle appetites. Such good things to eat as fresh fish of various kinds in splendid condition. Order early for Thursday and Good Friday. Also, carefully selected foreign fruits, juicy seedless oranges, the finest from the favourite orange groves; pineapples, bananas, grape fruit, lemons, nuts, figs, dates, as well as lettuce, celery, onions, rhubarb, etc. Both phones, 271. HARRY BRADSHAW. 3d.

OBITUARY

The death occurred this morning of Mrs. Edward Webb, at her residence, 550 Chamberlain street, Peterborough.

The funeral service will be held at 2.30 Saturday, and the funeral will leave the above address at 3 o'clock for interment at the Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. J. A. FAIRBAIRN.

The many friends of Elizabeth Lowrie, wife of Mr. J. A. Fairbairn, will be exceedingly grieved to learn of her death at 2 o'clock this morning, after the birth of twin children, who with her husband survive her. The deceased was well known in Peterborough and had a wide circle of friends She was a member of St. John's church and for some time taught a class in the Sunday school there. She was thirty-nine years of age and spent the early part of her life in Warsaw. Her many good qualities endeared her to all who knew her and her sudden death will come as a distinct shock.

In addition to her husband and children four brothers and two sisters are left to mourn her death. They are Thomas, of Highland Grove, John and Samuel of Peterborough, Henry of Montreal, Mrs. Clements, Warsaw, and Mrs. Calder, Peterborough.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 1.15 o'clock from 464 Bonacord St. to the Warsaw cemetery for interment.

BLESSINGS IN DISGUISE.

The zinc-smelting industry shows how the high tariff imposed by the Payne-Aldrich law, which has brought about the tariff tension, between the United States and Canada, assists, or promotes Canadian development. Previous to this tariff imposing a prohibitory rate upon zinc ores sent into the United States, the smelting was done in that country. Now, it is necessary to provide some means of smelting the ores in Canada, and on Monday the Minister of Inland Revenue submitted a resolution to authorize the expenditure of $50,000 for investigating the processes used for the production of zinc in Canada. This is one evidence of the result of tariff hostility directed, or at least, affecting, Canada, throwing this country upon its own resources in the way of domestic development in a similar manner that tariff hostility impelled this country to seek closer and more profitable connection with the British market.

SLOW TO UNDERSTAND.

The Conservatives in Parliament are slow to understand that the Government's naval policy adequately voices the best sentiment of Canada in regard to the share this country should take in bearing the burden of imperial defence. They seem still to fancy that their complex collection of naval policies continue to have some standing. On Monday a Conservative member oblivious, apparently, of the lessons of the naval debate, asked whether the Government or the parliament of Canada had received any petitions asking for the creation of a Canadian navy. The answer of Sir Wilfrid Laurier set forth plainly that the people are not so obtuse as the Opposition take them to be, and that the Government had not lost its sense of its responsibility. Sir Wilfrid said tersely:

"No petitions praying for the creation of a Canadian navy have been received by the Government, nor by parliament, as neither the Government nor Parliament had to be reminded of such an obvious duty, as both the Government and Parliament have already expressed their determination to attend to it."

This is a frank recognition of the responsibility of the Government, and of Parliament. According to the British principle of government, it is just such things that the Government and Parliament are constituted to do. It would be just as reasonable to expect the people to petition the Government, to perform any of the ordinary routine acts of Government it is expected to perform.

ADVERTISING CANADA.

A London (England) despatch tells us that the Allans have had to remove the furniture from their Liverpool shipping offices to make room for dealing with the clamouring multitude of immigrants, who are seeking passage to Canada by their lines. An extra steamer, the Grampian, sailed from Liverpool yesterday (Wednesday), with 1,650 passengers. The Dominion Government has spent thousands and thousands in advertizing Canada; the harvest is being reaped, this country as a consequence is reaping the harvest for this sowing of money. But Canada is getting a splendid advertisement that is costing her nothing. The tariff situation created by the United States and the controversy now raging around the question, is bringing Canada's name and importance before the whole world in a more striking way than has ever been done before. Day after day the United States newspapers are full of Canada, of her resources, and of the value of her trade, and millions of the United States people who never before heard of Canada, except as a geographical quantity, are being informed of her importance as a trade factor, and of the vastness of her material and home-providing capabilities. Where, heretofore, Canada has been a negligible quantquantity; she is now sought and besought. Our neighbours, who hewed out the tariff club as a weapon to smite other countries in the matter of tariff relations, have found that, in Canada's case, it is a boomerang, whose use will do the United States far more harm than it will do us. The United States press is teeming with articles, showing the greatness of Canada's trade and its importnace to their country. The British press, the French press, the German press found daily editorial leaders upon the tariff situation between the United States and Canada. Incidentally this country, its resources, its capability of sustaining an immense population and furnishing prosperous maintenance and happy homes, is being "brought into the limelight." In the United States Canada, in her relation to the tariff situation, has become a factor in politics. In a bye-election held on Wednesday in Massachusetts, the Democratic candidate gained a great victory in a Republican sctronghold and he regards his success as a popular condemnation of the Republican party's treatment of Canada in the matter of the tariff. All these things combined constitute a splendid advertisement for Canada, all the more important because this country has had no part in its origin. We were threatened with a tariff attack; we did nothing to provoke it and we felt that it did not comport with our dignity and self-respect to take any steps to repel it. We had only to sit firm and if we were unjustly treated we felt that we had a four-fold defence — the righteousness of our cause to justify us in the eyes of the world if we should be compelled to resort to our three other weapons—the 33 1-3 surtax, the prohibition of pulp wood export and the increase in the British preference as a compensation for our loss of the United States trad- e do not want to use these weapon- we are just as anxious as our neighbours and other nations to prevent trade interruption. But we must protect our material interests and maintain our self-respect. Meanwhile we are getting the benefit of an unsought but still immensely valuable advertisement of our country. We are receiving now from the United States and from across the water a large stream of immigration to people our untilled places, to develop our grain growing resources and give an impetus to the industrial and commercial interests of the country, and the publicity Canada is receiving will do much to swell the volume of inpouring population.

ONTARIO'S AUTOCRAT.

(Ottawa Free Press.)

Down in Washington they have an old autocrat in congress in Speaker Joe Cannon. He has ruled the members with a rod of iron in the shape of soft pedal scheming.

Over in Toronto they have another autocrat in the legislature in Sir James Whitney, who rules with a rod of iron in the shape of cold-blooded arrogance.

In Washington Speaker Cannon is getting his bumps. He has a band of determined insurgents against him, who, if they do not overthrow him, are at least making life uncomfortable.

In Toronto trouble is brewing in the solid Tory ranks who sit behind Premier Whitney. They are insurgents now who haven't had nerve enough to make more noise than a rumble. But the trouble is coming, and the form of autcratic government, introduced by Sir James Whitney into British institutions, will end.

CANADA'S GOOD EXAMPLE.

(Canadian Gazette, London, Eng.)

Canada is also setting a good example, as is apparent to anyone who examines the annual report of the Department of Trade and Commerce of Canada. This report has always been noted for its scope and completeness. It contains the fullest information regarding the trade development of Canada, and the department has now added to the usefulness of its returns by issuing the rather bulky first part of the report dealing with Canadian trade in five separate parts, thereby facilitating reference and aiding the study of special aspects of the trade. The second of these five parts deals fully with the trade of Canada with France, Germany, the United Kingdom, and the United States, and this little volume in itself will prove a most valuable guide to the many people who, in view of recent tariff developments, will doubtless be desirous of investigating the trade relations of Canada with these countries. Another improvement deserves special mention. In recent years there has been a great demand from traders and politicians for statistical information in regard to the grain resources of Western Canada. To meet this demand a special grain report has been issued by the department in the last two years. This is now embodied in the large report as the fifth of the volumes above referred to, and the 34 tables which it contains considerbaly supplement the information previously available on the most important branch of Canadian development.

Oxford Beats Cambridge.

Putney, Eng., March 24.—The Oxford crew won the championship eight-oared boat race with Cambridge yesterday by three and a half lengths in 21 minutes 14 seconds, official margin and time.

Oxford rowed true to form yesterday, and won the 67th struggle easily on the official course from Putney to Mort Lake, a distance of 4 1-4 miles, and after the first mile there was never any question as to the result. At the first mile, the lighter Cambridge men were a quarter of a length ahead, but they had shot their bolt in this early spurt and began dropping behind.

Twelve Days In Woods.

Sault Ste. Marie, March 24.—A Finlander who was found wandering aimlessly in the woods between North Chippewa and Batchewana Bay was brought to the Soo last evening. He had been looking for work in the camps and lost his way, remaining in the bush alone for twelve days, living on animals caught in traps of Indians. His feet will likely have to be amputated, as they are badly frozen.

Century Heat.

Winnipeg, March 24. It was very warm here yesterday. At St. John's Observatory the thermometer, it is reported, recorded 70 in the shade and 100 in the sun.

A report from Glenboro, Man., says that at noon a thermometer recorded 105.

Gen. Bell In Wreck.

Washington, D.C., March 24.—Maj.-Gen. J. Franklin Bell, chief of staff of the United States army, was badly, but probably not dangerously wounded, and Mrs. Herbert J. Slocum, wife of Major Slocum, of the 7th Cavalry, was almost instantly killed early yesterday in a collision of their automobile with a trolley car on the Tennallytown road, in the northwest suburbs of this city. Gen. Bell had one rib broken, a bad scalp wound, and severe bruises. The chauffeur was uninjured.

Gen. Bell absolved the trolley car motorman from blame for the accident.

Blunder Costs $10,000.

Calgary, March 24.—A short time ago Mayor Jamieson and City Clerk Gillis went to Ottawa to arrange the sale of city debentures, money realized to take up two civic notes held at local banks. Through a blunder the bonds were not negotiable, when sent to London, Eng., and the notes here had to be renewed costing the city over $10,000 in extra interest. The clerk will likely be asked to resign.

Ordered to Leave Town.

Franklin, N.H., March 24.—To prevent a strike and possible rioting among the employes of the International Paper Co. here, the City Council yesterday summoned before it John H. Malin, president of the International Sulphite Pulp and Paper Mill workers, and requested him to leave town. The Council also ordered the city marshal to keep Malin under surveyance.

Columbus' Fleet.

The entire fleet of Columbus was worth only $3,000, and the explorer's salary was $300 a year.

Volcano Ashes.

The ashes, so called, from volcanoes are simply lava that is finely pulverized.

The Coquito.

Like the cocoanut, the coquito (little cocoanut) is used for extracting oil. The coquito grows wild in great abundance and is a small nut about two inches in diameter and about four inches in circumference.

The Dead Sea.

The daily average of 6,500,000 tons of water is received into the Dead sea from the Jordan. There is no outlet, and the level is kept down by evaporation only, which is very rapid because of the intense heat, the dry atmosphere and the dry winds which are constantly blowing down from the gorges between the mountains.

The Kiss.

An American humorist once said that "the only way to define a kiss is to take one." Oliver Wendell Holmes called a kiss the twenty-seventh letter of the alphabet—"the love labial which it takes two to speak plainly."

Substitute For Mucilage.

Few know that a cold boiled potato rubbed on a piece of paper for a few minutes will form a moisture of the consistency of glue and is a satisfactory substitute for mucilage in case of an emergency.

Density and Rarity of Air.

If a well could be dug to the depth of forty-six miles the density of the air at the bottom would be as great as that of quicksilver. By the same law a cubic inch of air taken 4,000 miles above the earth's surface would expand sufficiently to fill a sphere 2,000,000,000 miles in diameter.

Mud Wasps.

Mud wasps manifest great ingenuity not only in building their nests, but in placing them in localities where they will not be injured by rain or predaceous animals.

Taxed Beards.

Beards were at various times taxed in England. Henry VIII. graduated his levy according to the status of the wearer, the sheriff of Canterbury, for instance, having to pay 3s. 4d. for his beard, and Elizabeth fixed the same sum for every beard of over a fortnight's growth.

Kadieuo Indians.

The Kadieuo Indians of Paraguay are skilled potters.

The White Shark.

The most dreaded and ferocious shark now in existence is the great white shark of tropical waters. It is the man eater par excellence. Specimens have been captured which measured forty-two feet in length. Whether it has done so or not, this frightful creature would certainly have no difficulty in literally swallowing a man whole.

Badly Matched Ears.

No pair of ears, scientists say, are ever perfectly matched; neither are they set exactly alike upon the head. In some cases the ears are so different that they might more approximately belong to different individuals.

Cork Oak.

The outer spongy bark of the cork oak, which grows in the south of France and Spain, constitutes the substance known as cork. This outer bark is periodically stripped off the tree, soaked for a time in water and the surface subsequently charred to close the pores. Some species of elm also produce cork.

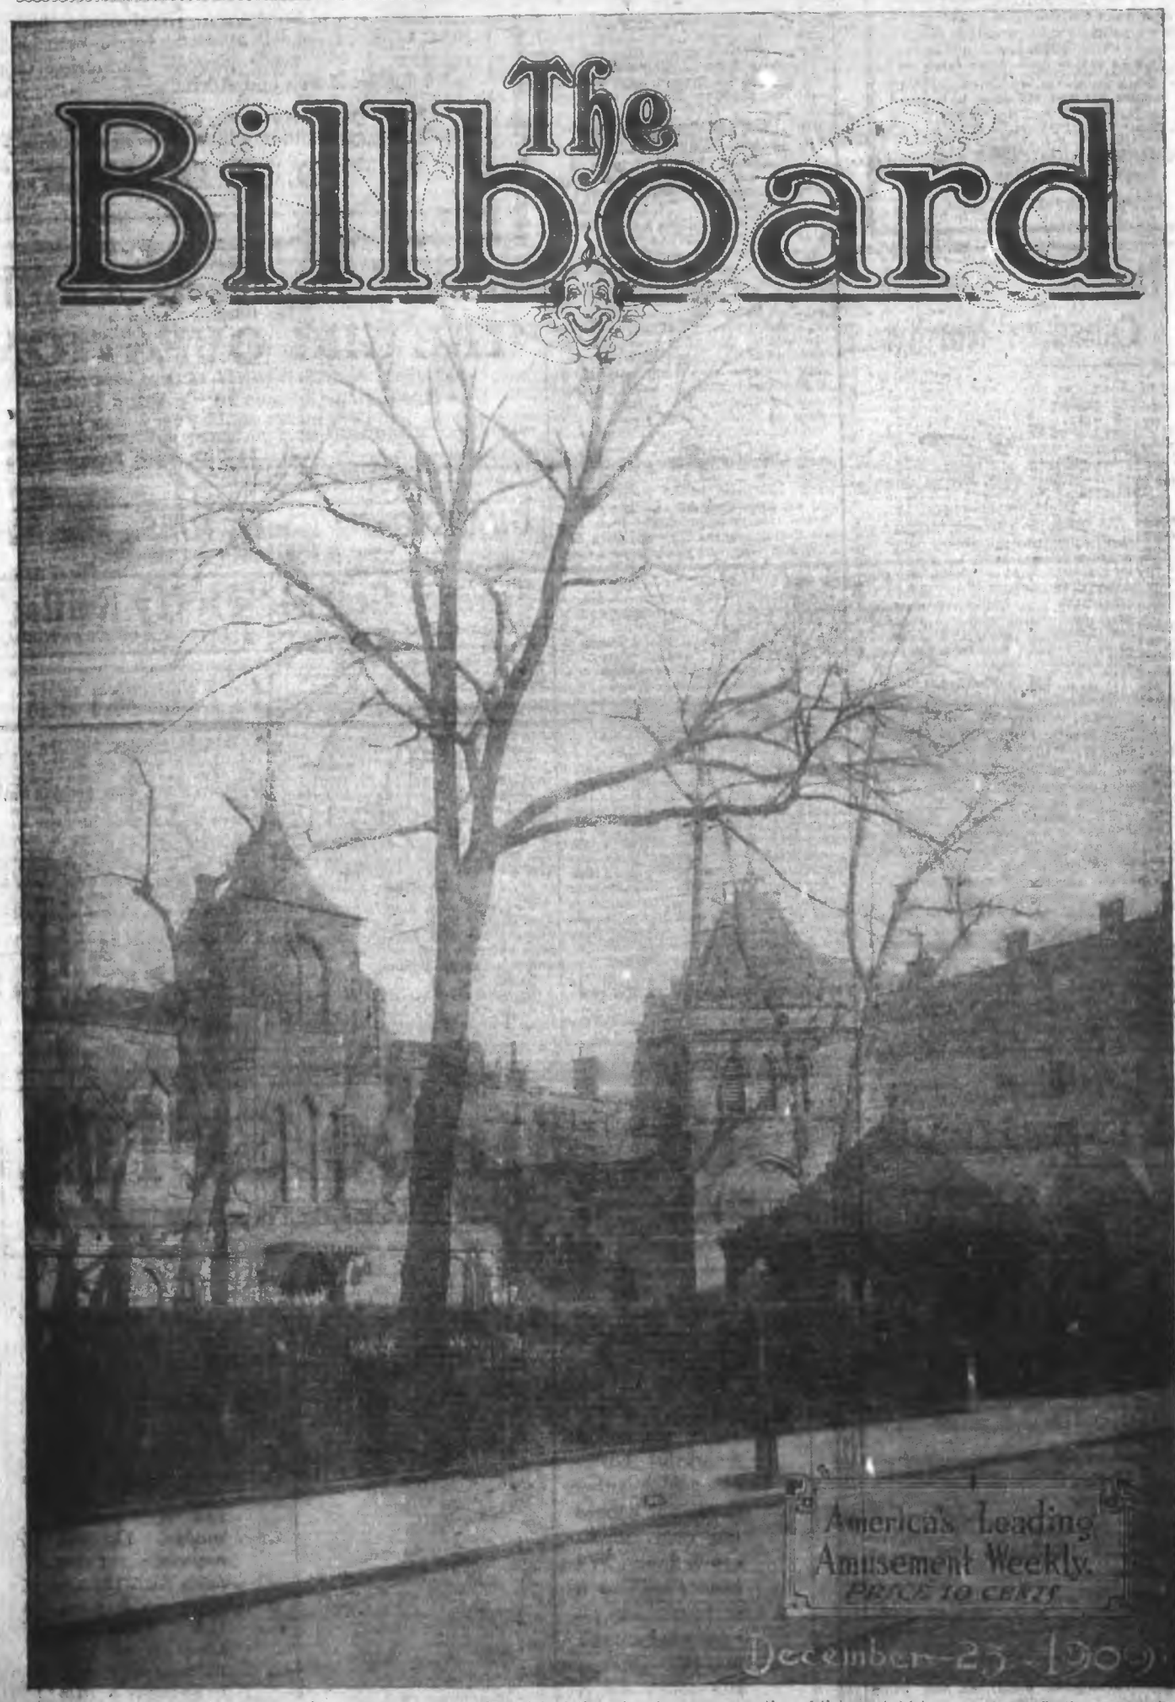
DOINGS IN THEATRICAL WORLD---UNDER THE WHITE TOPS

"Love's Bouquet," a song hit in "Fluffy Ruffles" with Florence Gear, coming to "The Grand" next Tuesday, March 29. Plan open Saturday morning.



"The Little Church Around the Corner."

The illustration appearing in this issue, which is reproduced by courtesy of the "Billboard" depicts the Church of the Transfiguration (Protestant Episcopal) situated on Twenty-ninth street, New York. To thousands it is better known under the title of "The little church around the corner." Many have doubtless wondered how this edifice came to be known by such an odd name and for the benefit of Examiner readers the following account is given, as related by the late Dr. Houghton, rector of the parish:

George Holland, a popular comedian, well known to the last generation of theatre-goers, died on December 20, 1870 and the clergyman to whom his family first applied declined to bury the deceased because he had been an actor. He advised the applicants to apply to the rector of the "little church around the corner." Dr. Houghton, when appealed to, readily consented and the funeral services were conducted in his church on December 22nd. Touching the incident, Dr. Houghton continued as follows: It drew towards the church to which my life had been given, a world of kindly, tender feelings, and it opened wide for personal ministration and usefulness such a flood as few of you can imagine. From the prison, and the gambling house and the house of ill repute the messenger has hitherto come that might not have elsewhere gone. God's blessing has rested upon this our parish and church by reason of the effort made to make the most of the greater opportunity thus offered for ministering to those who had need.

The sixtieth anniversary of this church was celebrated on Sunday, March 6. There were no special services in commemoration of the event, as the Rev. Dr. Geo. Houghton, who succeeded his father as rector, was at the time on a bed of sickness in the south. There is possibly no church in America for which the members of the theatrical profession cherish so great an affection as for "The little church around the corner," where the right of the profession to a full measure of sympathy, respect and consideration from their fellowmen was so quietly, yet so clearly demonstrated.

AN EASTER SONG IN THE EXAMINER

The Examiner is pleased to be able to announce that on Saturday it will publish the words and music of a beautiful Easter song: "Now all the Bells are Ringing," composed by G. Waldo. The publication of music by a Peterborough newspaper is an unusual feature, and one that it is believed will be appreciated by Examiner readers. It is only through special arrangement with the well-known New York publisher, Leo Feist, that the song will be given to the public. Easter songs, at least good ones, are very hard to secure, but the publisher says that "Now the Bells are Ringing" is the best number of its kind that he has ever heard, and has more than usual merit. Those who are unable to secure copies of the Examiner containing the words and music of the song may secure the song itself at the Peterborough Music Company's store, where it will be placed on sale.

C. P. R. PICTURES THAT ILLUSTRATE THE BEAUTY AND WONDER OF CANADA'S HERITAGE

A good many Peterborough people have seen the moving-picture entitled "From Coast to Coast," which is being shown at the Crystal theatre just now, and which is certainly well worth seeing, as it gives one a better idea of the greatness of Canada than could be gained from months of reading. The film is undoubtedly one of the finest that has ever been shown here and is an advertisement of the wonder and beauty of the Canadian Rockies that could not be told in words. Incidentally the pictures indicate the magnitude of the Canadian Pacific Railway, as the scenes are all taken along the route of the C. P. R., and the Company furnished a special train for the purpose. The pictures indicate in no uncertain manner what the C. P. R. has done for the Canadian Northwest.

The pictures open with a glimpse of the white flyer, Princess Victoria, and her triangular run from Seattle to Victoria, showing the inspection of the baggage, the pleasing and satisfied appearance of the travellers as they place their baggage on the bench and the rapidity of the handling by the custom officers is indeed a feature itself.

A glimpse of the new C. P. R. hotel Princess at Victoria and the harbour and parliament buildings gives one an idea of what may be seen from the dock. Then the trip across to Vancouver, the Princess Victoria passing her sister ship the Princess Charlotte in Georgia Bay, at a speed of 23 miles an hour. Next we see the Princess Victoria coming through the first narrows at Vancouver opposite Stanley park. The landing at Vancouver and the boarding of the Imperial Limited for Montreal.

The next films show the world's famous Fraser river, the grandest and most beautiful canyon in the world. If you can just imagine yourself sitting in the train as you sit in your seat at Starland and see the scenery as the train rushes up grade. The old suspension bridge across the Fraser, the Caribou trail running through the canyon into one tunnel and out of another and on the opposite side, sometimes at the water's edge, sometimes thousands of feet up on the mountain side. The bridge in to the Twin tunnel, North Bend, and then along the famous Thompson River, passing the Imperial Limited westbound, and then across the Columbia River into Revelstoke.

The next pictures show one of the waterfalls and then its disappearance into the mountain side, coming forth a rushing torrent from the other side. Now in the very heart of the Selkirk, thousands of feet above the sea level, and amid mountain tops and glaciers. Then passing into one snowshed after another, miles and miles of them, with now and then a glimpse of the snow and ice covered mountain peaks. The train slows up and stops at Glacier, the tourists and passengers pile off, smiling and well satisfied with their trip, to take a look at the great glacier peak of 2,700 square miles of ice.

All aboard and the train whizzes past through tunnels, canyons, over bridges and stops at Lake Louise, showing the Chalet, the C. P. R. hotel, and Victoria glacier in the distance, with flying clouds passing over the tops.

Banff and a day stop over to wander through the largest national park in the world, to see the largest herd of buffalo now in existence, the greatest fishing pool, the launches on the lake, the swimming pool. All aboard and you get a glimpse of the mad rushing Bow river as it tosses over the falls.

The Three Sister mountains and then all off at Calgary. And away to the wheat fields surrounding the city. Here we see a forty horse combined harvester passing through one of Alberta's great wheat fields, cutting, threshing, sacking the grain. And then back to Calgary with a panoramic view of the city.

The film ends with a run of Calgary's fire department against time, the coupling of a hose to a water plug and then turning on of the water.

These motion pictures are the clearest and finest ever shown and their story of the great northwest and of Calgary and Alberta is an advertisement that is without doubt the greatest ever invented.

THE SCIENCE OF MOVING AROUND MODERN CIRCUS

By J. P. Fagan.

The daily transportation of a big circus from town to town seems a colossal feat to the untutored mind of the average man, and, in fact, it is one, but it has been reduced to such a science by showmen, that it is looked upon by them as nothing out of the ordinary.

The arrangements for the movement of the vast pageant over the railroads have been completed weeks in advance of the exhibition, and it involves an enormous amount of expense for the circus.

The railroad companies have no uniform basis of rates for the movement of circuses over their lines, as they contract as private carriers. The United States Supreme Court has so decided that they are therefore not amenable to the Interstate Commerce Law, and in their contracts circuses are made to assume all responsibility in regard to accidents, etc. The shows own all of their own equipment, and for this movement the railroads furnish only the engines and their crews, and this circus train has the right of way over everything on the track but the fast passenger trains.

The first section of a circus train is made up immediately after the early evening dinner and is usually ready to leave the town in which they are exhibiting for the next day's stand about 10 p. m. It is called the Flying Squadron, and it consists of about twenty cars, made up of the cook tents and the horse tents and a sufficient crew of workmen.

It is one of the duties of the twenty-four-hour man to meet the Flying Squadron upon its arrival at the next stand, and to guide the boss canvasman and the lay-out man to the show grounds, so when the balance of the show arrives the lot is laid out, horse tents and cook tents erected, and breakfast ready for the ever-hungry "circus children."

The second section is known as the "cage train," and the huge cages of animals and the justly noted fine stock are loaded before the close of the evening performance. Each and every cage and wagon is numbered, and has its own special niche on the flat cars; they are gotten on to the flat cars by means of a "run" and horses called "pull-up" teams" are used to pull them into position.

The master of transportation, whose duty it is to load and unload the trains, must be a very competent man, and know without hesitation not only the place for each cage and wagon, but for every piece of paraphernalia that goes to make up the big show. The men who assist the master of transportation in loading and unloading the trains are commonly known as "razor-backs." While this section follows the Flying Squadron, it is never unloaded before the last section.

The third and last section gets away about midnight, and is made up of the big top, side show and the sleepers of the performers and the private cars of the proprietors and managers. This section also carries the dining cars, so in cases of long runs, or delays from accidents, the people are sure to be well cared for. A great many shows own and operate their own dining cars, but quite a number of them rent these cars to private parties. This section also carries the important baggage, seat, canvas and pole wagons that go to make up the attractive white city, that on the morrow will again dazzle the eye and delight the hearts of hundreds.

The expedient manner that this huge amount of equipment is torn down and packed away for shipment (about 80 carloads in all) and then the thoroughness and agility that is displayed in placing it in position again at the next day's stand, especially the erection of the cook tents and the short time that it takes this experienced army of men to have a meal palatably cooked and ready to be served to this vast caravan attracted the attention of the Commissary Department of the U.S. Army, and members of this department were appointed to travel with one of the big shows for a couple of weeks, to observe how this was accomplished in such a speedy and perfect manner, that Uncle Sam's great army might profit by it.

Indeed, this transportation of the circus quite equals many of the wonderful acts of the big top, and the proverbial small boy is not the only interested spectator "when the circus comes to town."

MONEY-MAKING!

During the Past Week

We have frequently advertised the fact that money can be made in New York stocks by careful operation.

Some of the newspapers have seen fit to criticize our advertisements, classing them as a get-rich-quick proposition.

We do not wish our readers or clients to misinterpret our advertisements, but what we do wish to impress upon the public is the fact that the losses in New York stock buying and selling are occasioned by the lack of sufficient capital to protect market operations.

There are thousands of dealers in New York Stocks.

It Is Perfectly True

That if you try to get rich quick, you are pursuing a very bad policy, for there are very few sure opportunities by which you can gain a fortune in a short time.

These opportunities are chiefly limited to mines and patents, and in them there are as many failures as successes, but they are the only enterprises known whereby large fortunes can be made from a few hundred dollars.

We Believe

What we advertise, for we have seen judicious operations on the New York stock market produce very substantial profits.

However, sufficient cash capital must be at command, or disaster is almost sure to follow. And on this point any broker will tell you that a twenty-five point protection on a stock is considered amply sufficient for this class of business.

Another Fact

We want to make clear is this: We do not recommend from day to day operations, but advise investors to wait for a decided market factor before operating.

The idea of our system of syndicate investment is not a new one, but our methods are clean, and any of your business that you entrust to us will be attended to strictly along the most conservative business lines.

And we state that, in our judgment, you will make at least 50 per cent. per annum on your money.

An Important Point

We wish to call your attention to the fact that you can always withdraw your credit balance if you are not satisfied with the operations of the syndicate.

We Are Also Explicit

As to where we make our profits.

One-eighth commission each way amounts to $12.50, and if we have a sufficient number of syndicates operating we will be quite satisfied with our commissions for our profits.

We propose to build up a large New York stock clientele.

We Are Spending

A large appropriation to advertise ourselves. We want your business. Other brokers and financial houses may object to our way of doing business.

All that we can say is that so long as we run our business strictly on an honourable basis, and our clients obtain fair dealing, the opinions of others and the way they run their business are of no interest to us.

We Know That,

Given the opportunity, we can demonstrate our ability to make money for you in such a manner as to obtain your good will, and through the good will of our clients that we hope to build up a very large business in New York stocks.

There is only one way to obtain your good will and keep your name on our books, and that is by making money for you, for you will not long remain a client if by our proposition your bank account is constantly dwindling away instead of increasing.

We Believe The Facts

Relative to the financial conditions of the country are of interest to the general public, and it will be our aim and object to keep our clients informed from time to time.

If you do not wish to do business with us today, send in your name and address so that we may put you on our mailing list.

We've Been Advertising

Extensively in the daily press over a year.

We feel that we have made a moderate success.

We are putting our earnings into city property in the shape of an office building. The property will stand as a security to our clientele.

If You Have Money

To invest, let us know about it, as there are constant opportunities in the money-making line that are brought to our notice from day to day.

We Want Your Business

And that of your Friends.

SEND US YOUR NEW YORK OR COBALT ORDERS

If you do not desire to trade on the Syndicate plan, let us open an account with you. Then judge us by the results—not by what other people in the same line may say about us or our methods.

LECTURE BY MR. HERBERT BOOTH WAS A TREAT

The Martyrdom of the Early Christians Graphically Portrayed in Word and Picture.

AN ARTISTIC REVELATION

A lecture on "The Ancient Christians" was given last evening in St. Paul's church by Mr. Herbert Booth, under the auspices of the Children's Aid Society of that church. The lecture was highly interesting and the lives of the early martyrs were placed vividly before the minds of the people through the agency of the large number of illustrations. The ignominious deaths that St. Paul and St. Stephen suffered were magnificently pictured.

Three illustrations showed the cruelty of Nero, the infamous Roman Emperor. The first and second pictures showed Nero preparing for the burning of Rome, and the populace running to seek safety. The third showed Nero stabbing himself with his dagger.

Mr. Booth explained the life and death of our Lord, impressing upon the minds of his listeners the necessity for each of them to take up the cross as our Lord Himself had done. The lecturer referred to those who suffered death at the hands of the gladiators in the Coliseum. The victims were brought in and placed in the centre of the arena, then the lions that were kept for such spectacles were allowed to tear the victims to pieces on the sandy floor of the amphitheatre. These victims went to meet death because they refused to renounce Christ, the Saviour of mankind.

During the course of Mr. Booth's lecture he brought before the minds of his hearers the catacombs of Rome, where so many early Christians lived and were finally buried.

The life of the Redeemer was beautifully explained and illustrated, showing that the greatest of all men suffered a death of greater torment than any of the early martyrs.

The lecture was closed by an illustration of our Lord, the words: "Will you follow Christ?" encircling His head.

The choir furnished appropriate hymns and music during the entertainment.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES HAVE MADE GREAT PROGESS

Agricultural societies in the Province of Ontario, have made marked progress during the past four or five years. Upwards of several thousand dollars have been expended in enlarging grounds and equipping them with suitable buildings for exhibition purposes. Each succeeding year shows a steady increase in entries. In 1909 the entries in horses were 455 more than in 1908, and the entries in sheep, about 350.

At the last annual meeting of the Fairs Association held a week ago, it was decided to divide the Province into twelve districts. A local Fairs Association will be organized in each distirct, which will be represented by a director on the executive board, governing the Provincial Association.

Heretofore the members of the Provincial Executive were elected at the annual meeting of the Association, and the feeling had gone abroad that some parts of the Province were not getting equal representation. The new arrangement now in effect, gives every part of the Province a director.

Agricultural Societies of the Province of Ontario receive an annual grant of $70,000 from the Ontario Government. Our Societies think they are entitled to more money and at our last annual convention, a deputation waited on the goverument and asked that the grant be increased to $100.00. Another matter discussed at the convention was the proposal to provide an insurance fund from which societies having to contend with wet weather on days of their exhibition could draw a certain amount. In recent years some agricultural societies have suffered to a great extent as a result of having wet weather on fair days, therefore it was considered that if some sort of insurance could be provided that would safe-guard societies against wet weather losses, it would be a great benefit to all concerned. To put the scheme on a sound financial working basis, it was considered that at least $12,000 would be required, and it was proposed to withdraw this amount from the annual grant provided by the Government. This insurance fund of $12,000 would provide for about 75 per cent. of the loss suffered by societies in wet weather. The average amount of the gate receipts for three good years previous to the year that was bad would be used as a basis for figuring the amount of insurance in the event of the allowance being paid. The Society would receive the difference between the bad year and the average of the three years stated.

All Agricultural Societies throughout the Province of Ontario are provided with expert judges who are appointed by the Ontario Government. The Societies are expected to pay $5.00 per day for each judge employed. The fairs are arranged in circuits, consequently the judges lose very little if any time in going from fair to fair. At a great many of our fairs horse racing and other amusement play an important part, while some of our fairs located at a considerable distance from towns and railroads, are run on a purely agricultural basis.—R. B. Faith, Secretary Eastern Ontario Fairs Association.

Early Spring In The Canadian Northwest

Winnipeg, March 23.—"Speaking of early springs in the Northwest," said a former resident of the prairies, "I remember one somewhat similar to the present season. It occurred just ten years ago, and was the mildest that I ever saw.

"I was out on the cattle range of southwestern Alberta at that time and remember some Indians coming in to a ranch and asking for a meal. The redmen tied up their ponies, and, after dining to repletion on the rancher's good bacon, they arose to go. Then one of them took nine wild ducks eggs which had been mysteriously secreted in his coat pockets, and tendered them in payment for their entertainment. It was only the 9th of April, a most extraordinary early date for wild fowl to be nesting."

Lakes Frozen Up.

Last year when the writer was travelling west the spring was very cold and backward. Even the ducks and geese seemed to have miscalculated and arrived just a little ahead of time from the regions to the south. On all the big sloughs and lakes one could see these winged voyageurs standing about on the ice, apparently wondering why it had not broken up. What open places there were were thronged with birds.

No Crop, They Thought.

All the farmers talked gloomily. Practically no seeding had been done, and later on when the landscape should have been green with young wheat blades, the fields continued brown and barren. But just when all hope was abandoned the sun shone, the air grew balmy, and a succession of warm rains fell. The elements seemed to have conspired to work a miracle. Everything was lovely, the crop sprouted, and well, the bumper yield of last year will go down in history.

Fall Wheat Killed.

As yet it is too soon to do much predicting as to the coming crop. But a great acreage is to be sown. Out in the fall wheat country of Southern Alberta, throughout which so much of last year's crop had been winter-killed, men farming tracts of hundreds, and sometimes several thousands of acres are expecting to recoup their last season's losses.

Steam Plowing.

Reports of steam plowing in full swing come from the country around Lethbridge. Apparently a great deal of wild land is being broken. Unfortunately there is such a scramble to get work done on the prairie that settlers don't wait till the proper time of the year to do their breaking. June is the season for turning the sod. In that month the grass is green and lush and soon decays and is absorbed by the soil, acting as a fertilizer.

Bad Farming.

Possessors of new land — especially Americans—are inclined to set such rules at defiance in their haste to scoop in the dollars from the venture. But nature refuses to be coerced, or the dried-up grass of late summer fail to supply the soil with one of its most needful constituents, and the result is that the "hurry-up" farmer only gets about half a crop.

Splendid Display Of New Lines Of Goods Made By Local Lock Co.

The Peterborough Hardware Co. have on exhibition in their north window a line of new goods that have been gotten out by the Peterborough Lock Manufacturing Co. It represents a few of the many new designs and finishes they are bringing out for the spring trade. The designs shown are in the Colonial Greek and early English school of architecture and in finishes most appropriate, dull brass, plain brass and verde antique predominating. There is also shown nickel finishes in sand, oxidized and relieved, also many other sand and oxidized finishes suitable for the design to which they are applied. The Company is putting forth its best efforts to meet the demand for up-to-date hardware and expect within a short time to have a line of locks and trim that will equal if not surpass any now made in Canada, and on a par with goods brought in from the States. The Company has just finished a new up-to-date plating room that includes the most modern methods for finishing goods, also adding new and special machinery for producing cast and wrought metal hardware. They are increasing their floor space by some thousand square feet to meet the increasing business which the new goods will certainly demand.

Dates Arranged For The Annual Militia Camps

Ottawa, March 23.—The military units of number four district will go to camp on June 13. The 42nd regiment, the 56th regiment and the 59th regiment, all infantry of this district, will go to Kingston, as well as number 2 Field Ambulance of Ottawa.

There will be an artillery and cavalry camp at Petawawa. The 5th the Princess Louise Dragoon guards will go to Petawawa as well as the 2nd Field battery, the 23rd Field battery, number 3 company Canadian Engineers and number 5 company Army Service corps

There will be no camp at Rockliffe under the present arrangements. At Kingston there will be the dismounted corps of number 3 district as well as those of number four.

The camp at London will open on June 13, and the one at Niagara on June 14. There will be an infantry camp at Three Rivers opening on June 24, and a cavalry camp in the eastern townships, at a place not yet decided, on June 13. The infantry camp at Levis will open on June 21, one for all arms at Sussex, N.B., on June 28 and an artillery camp at Aldershot, N.S., on June 28. The cavalry and infantry camp at Aldershot will open on Sept. 13. The annual training for all arms will be held at Brandon, Man., on June 28, and at Charlottetown, P.E.I., on the same date.

There will be a cavalry camp at Calgary on June 14th.

The artillery camp at Petawawa will last 16 days, while the other branches of the service there will train for 12 days. The other camps will last 12 days.

The number of soldiers going into annual training this year will be slightly larger than ever before, it is expected.

THE VALUE OF TURPENTINE

When all else fails the physician recommends his wealthy patient to take a trip to the turpentine groves as a cure for throat and lung troubles. The turpentine of commerce cannot very well be used but by adding linseed Dr. Chase succeeded in getting up the most effective treatment for throat and lung troubles that was ever discovered. It is known as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

ENGLISH FOOTBALL CAMPAIGN

England by conquering Scotland at Edinburgh in the last of the Rugby Internationals this year won the championship. They were hardly deserving of the honors, for they were outclassed in the game against Ireland at Twickenham, and on the same ground Wales were mastered in a quagmire. Ireland again capture the "wooden spoon," not having a victory to her credit. The Welshmen hold second place, having defeated both Scotland and Ireland.

In the first division of the English League Aston Villa still crign supreme, and although they could do no better than draw against Everton and Bristol during the week, their nearest rivals did not improve their positions. In fact, Notts County dropped badly at Preston N. E. by 4-0. Aston Villa are now six points ahead of Liverpool, and the chances of the Birmingham team losing hold on first place are very remote. They have yet to meet Middlesboro, Bury, Preston, North End and Newcastle United at home, and Liverpool, Middlesboro, Tottenham and Notts County away. They should win all of the home games, and away should account for Tottenham and at least draw to Middlesboro. Both Liverpool and Newcastle United keep gathering points, but have little chance of winning brackets, as their away programme is rather severe and the United at present are thinking more of winning the cup than the league.

BOLTON WANDERERS.

At the other end of the table Bolton Wanderers are in a precarious position and as they have only two more home games to play they will require to show marked improvement in their play in the game away to steer clear of the "bottom two." The "Spurs" also are in a serious position.

In the second division Leicester Fosse went under to Birmingham, and this defeat means a lot to them at this stage at Derby County won their engagement against Blackpool and Manchester City put up a creditable performance in drawing with West Bromwich A, who have been easy games remaining at home to be played and there now seems little chance of Leicester Fosse overtaking them. Derby County, with a view of strengthening the forward line, signed Halligan, of Leeds City, but he has been somewhat disappointing. He is a very fast forward, but more of an individualist, and his style does not fit in with the others. He came originally from Belfast Celtic. Leeds City are in a bad way, and they will likely have a hard fight to keep clear of the "wooden spoon."

In the Southern League Brighton and Hove Albion have come on wonderfully of late and with Queen's Park Rangers are the two likely teams to fight it out for premier place, the Rangers being slight favorites.

Next Saturday the semi-finals of the cup take place. Everton meet Barnsley at Leeds, and Newcastle play Swindon at Tottenham.

THE FINAL

On form Everton and Newcastle should figure in the final. Swindon are a clever side, but Manchester City should have beaten them in the previous round. Barnsley are not in the same class as Everton, whose recent performances have given their supporters great hopes of the team winning the cup on the 23rd of next month. The former game ought to draw a huge crowd as Newcastle are always welcomed to London when Swindon will have a large following and although the gate receipts may not be so good at the other match, the four teams share alike in the semi-final receipts.

The attendance and receipts in the fourth round were as follows:

	Attendance.	Gate.
Coventry City v. Everton	19,000	£1052
Newcastle v. Leicester Fosse	52,544	1803
Swindon v. Manchester City	15,000	911
Barnsley v. Queen's Park	23,574	780

Everton have figured in the semi-finals six times, viz., 1893, 1897, 1898, 1905, 1906, 1907 and as both J. Sharp and J. D. Taylor are retiring from the game this year they are anxious to win the cup as a fitting tribute to the years of service that these two players have served the club.

NOTES

Glasgow Celtic have given up the idea of playing games in the States in May. They and Falkirk are at present running neck and neck for the Scottish League honors.

Bache Hall and Wallace of Aston Villa, received invitations from the E. F. A. to take part in the South African tour, but all three declined.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

In cold weather put the clothes pins in a pan and set in the oven until they are hot. Then the fingers will not suffer when hanging out the clothes, especially if the clothes are rinsed the last time in warm water.

To thoroughly clean a porcelain sink, take equal parts of chloride of lime and a good soap powder, rub well and then follow with lemon juice and salt. Let this remain on for several hours, and all rust spots will disappear.

A clever device for letting the oil drip slowly from the bottle when making a salad dressing in this: Cut two grooves in the cork on opposite sides: one groove admits air, while the other permits the oil to run slowly and evenly.

OUR $15.00 SUITS

ARE PAR EXCELLENCE

$15.00

"You've capped the climax of suit value giving" a delightful customer said the other day. She echoed our own honest cenviction. We cannot see how it is possible to secure a better suit for the money. We know for a certainty that it can't be equalled in this vicinity.

$15.00

$15.00

The tailoring is superb and the garments themselves are correct in design, material and colouring. All are in the newest spring modes. Do not associate these suits with the average at $15.00, they are not. Only a willingness on our part to sacrifice a little extra profit in order to obtain extra goodness, is responsible for their low prices.

The Wonders Of Selenium Described By Professor

"A non-metallic element, the by-product from the manufacture of sulphuric acid from iron pyrites, in fine crystalline form, opaque to light and of a dull grey colour, selenium was discovered by Berzelius in 1817, and derives its name from the Greek word selene, meaning moon."

Direful words these, reminiscent of undergraduate hours in the laboratory of countless shattered test tubes and of innumerable acid-stained freshmen fingers. William J. Hammer, a consulting electrical engineer of New York, and at one time an associate of Edison, told the students of Stevens Institute, Hoboken, recently all about this selenium. Selenium is of infinite variety as to its uses. Its most curious property lies in the fact that the selenium cell is a non-conductor of electricity in the darkness, but as soon as it is exposed to the light it is a very valuable conductor indeed.

'Phone Over Beam of Light.

Mr. Hammer explained how it was possible to telephone over a beam of light by using the selenium cell. Ernest Ruhmer, a chemist, now at work in Berlin, utilizes the fact that the selenium cell is a conductor when exposed to light and so arranges his method of receiving and transmitting messages that he can talk at night with a man twenty miles away over the beam of an arc light.

Then this element can be used as a burglar alarm. The burglar of the future may be surprised, says Mr. Hammer, when he turns his bulls-eye lantern on the combination of an alluring safe. For on the front of the safe there will be a selenium cell, and the moment the light strikes it a system of relays will be put in action and the cell will sound the alarm. Detecting gases and smokes in mines and turning on sprinklers that will put the fire out is another potential use of selenium.

Photographophone.

But what Mr. Hammer thinks is the most remarkable use of selenium is the discovery of Ruhmer's whereby a beam of light is photographed on a moving picture film and sings beautifully. This is the photographophone. The lecturer said that he noticed a man laboriously turning a crank the other day that opened the iron blinds on tall buildings, and he promptly substituted in his mind the selenium cell for the Irishman, and now has a scheme whereby the rising sun opens the blinds on factory buildings.

Some day a hostile gunboat may come sneaking up, say the St. Lawrence River, with its searchlight prying along the shore for possible fortifications, and the light will hit a selenium cell attached to a cannon, which immediately goes off and sinks the enemy's ship. Then all we will have to do will be to come over from Quebec next morning and collect the wreckage for souvenirs.

And the Lights Went Out.

Just at this point in the lecture the lights in the hall in which he was speaking went out. The students there make their own electricity in the institute, and at half-past five in the afternoon all the lights die out. So Mr. Hammer packed up his slides, and the wonderers at modern science were forced to postpone the presentation of their schemes for a selenium cell alarm clock, which the rising sun automatically sets off, at the same time shocking sleepers into acute wakefulness by a system of relays attached to the iron bedstead.

Toronto Will Not Bother With Hat Pin Problem

Toronto, March 23.—Unlike Chicago, the adoption of legislation to prevent women wearing long hat pins extending three or four inches from their hats, is not looked upon with favour in Toronto. The danger of such pins is recognized, but it is thought that if the wearers of these pins were shown that they were a menace to the public health they would sensibly forego them.

"Chicago ladies may be so persistent wearers of hat pins that are liable to put out any person's eyesight or inflict a dangerous gash, that the by-law the City Council passed in that city was necessary, but I don't think such is the case in Toronto," one man said.

Controller Church advocates an educational campaign. Resolutions declaring hat pins of unusual and dangerous length illegal and their owners liable to a fine would be too coercive in his opinion. Anyway he believed there would be difficulty in enforcing such a by-law.

"The matter was brought up before the Board of Control once," he said "and it was ascertained that the City Council had the power to pass such a by-law, but the matter was let drop." Controller Church realized that long hat pins are a continual menace, but said complaints have not been numerous in this city. "An educational campaign would have the desired effect, I am confident," he said.

Ald. McCarthy would prefer making an appeal to the goodness of heart and common sense of Toronto ladies, who wear long hat pins, before resorting to legislation to prevent the use of such spearlike hat fasteners. "I don't believe one lady in Toronto would wear a long hat pin if they thought someone would run even the risk of losing an eye," he said.

He believed if the city press pointed out to the Toronto women that long hat pins were dangerous and it was beyond a joke to wear them with uncovered points, they would not do so.

"The women wear big hats and have to use long hat pins, but the points shouldn't project," Ald. Jas. McCausland said. He recognized the common danger to an unfortunate public through the sharp points of lengthy hat pins extending for several inches beyond the crown of the hat.

Cures Any Cough in Five Hours. NEW PRESCRIPTION HERE.

Here is given the most effective cough prescription known to the medical world. It is a mild laxative, too, and this is what a body needs when suffering with cough and cold on the lungs. A cough or cold indicates poisons in the system, causing inflammation and congestion. Nearly all cough syrups relieve, but make the trouble worse by their constipating effects. This prescription not only relieves quickly, but it cures any cough that is curable. Get one-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardiol and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Mix in a bottle. Take for acute cough or bronchitis twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times daily. Give children less according to age. A few hours treatment will cure and heal the throat and lungs of all but consumptives. Cut this out and give it to some friend who may need it to be saved from an early death by consumption.

CHURCH SERVICES

ST. LUKE'S.

The Lenten service was taken last night by the Rev. Dr. Langfeldt in the absence of Rev. C. W. Holdsworth, of Havelock, who was to have been the special preacher, but could not come. Dr. Langfeldt exhorted the people to observe Good Friday in a godly manner and not to give themselves to frivolities unbecoming to godly people and the solemnity of the day.

The lecture to-night will be by Rev. H. J. Keith, on "India" illustrated by limelight views.

Good Friday will be observed by the "Three Hours Devotions," commemorating the Saviour's suffering on the Cross. The service will begin at 12 o'clock and last till three. Dr. Langfeldt will give the addresses, and Rev. Mr. Keith will take part in the devotions. The offering will be for the evangelization of the Jews. Every twenty minutes' opportunity is given for the people to leave or to come to the service.

At eight o'clock his Honour Judge Huycke, will give a lecture on "The Holy Grail."

The Easter communion will be celebrated on Sunday at seven and eight and at noon. The friends of St. Luke's are requested to contribute flowers for decorations for the Sanctuary for Easter.

BOWLING

Claire Gutterson continues to lead in the contest at the P. B. C. Alleys, and is high both in the singles and in the best three games for Class A bowlers. His high single is 230, and his best cross alley score is 628. Claire has been hitting the wood in great style this week and his scores will take some beating. However, there is a keen contest all along the line. Martin, Cairns, and others, making high scores. In the Class B contest H. Moncrief is high in the singles, with 221, while R. M. Glover leads in the best three games, with scores of 193, 165, and 176, a total of 525. There will be some tall rolling to-morrow.

Dressed For the Occasion.

A rubber mask adorns his nose.
Large goggles hide his eyes,
Two wingless things are on his toes
As down the street he flies.
A rubber coat envelops his form,
Great gloves his two hands hide,
A rakish hat is on his head—
In fact, he's "dressed to kill."

Blood For Bread.

Hunger! To what lengths will it drive men! Here is a passage from "Force," a tale of Napoleon's days describing how ten veteran hussars under a young officer, after two days without food, fought like fiends for a loaf of bread stolen from a woodman:

"He trembled with covetousness, but he did not move. He was starving, but he was an officer.

"The foremost rider speared the loaf up with his saber, clutched it and began to eat. The others quickly closed in on him. He was gripped from behind and half strangled. The bread fell into the mud. The men then began to fight in bitter earnest, and their sabers flashed dimly in the falling rain. One of them reeled under a saber stroke and fell back on his horse.

"He (the officer) flung himself in the melee and was thrown from his horse. As he crawled along the mud out of the way of the trampling hoofs he put his hand on the bread. His fears at once vanished. He bent over his prize, hiding it from view of the struggling soldiers, and lowered his head and got the loaf under his teeth and ate it."

Nature's Handiwork.

The down upon the peach or plum is so delicate and so thickly set that one cannot touch the fruit with a needle's point without breaking the tender stalk, and yet the dew of the night covers the whole surface of the fruit and disappears in the morning, leaving the gossamer growth more orderly and beautiful than before. The dew covers every leaf of the giant oak, and the mighty tree drinks in the refreshing moisture to its thirsty heart through millions of pores, and the iron trunk that has withstood a thousand storms is made stronger by the gentle strength of the dew. The silent fall of the dew is caused and controlled by agencies of the most tremendous power. The same power which shakes a whole continent with its subterranean thunder is the same as that which encircles the finest filament of thistledown with a coronet of dewy gems so small that they do not bend the delicate stalks with their weight.—London Globe.

A Hector Outhectored.

A publisher's reader at a literary club hectored a group of novelists

"You chaps," he sneered, "must always be coining new words. Good English isn't good enough for you. In the last half dozen manuscript novels I turned down there were such horrible neologisms as 'he hoarsed,' 'she parroted,' 'they shrilled,' 'he glimpsed her,' 'it supremed,' and so forth. Faugh!"

"Let me inform you," cried a novelist defiantly, "that your remark shows a pitiful ignorance on your part of our mother tongue. As for 'shrilling,' Tennyson writes:

"'With petulant thumb and finger shrilling "Hence!"'

"Chapman, the great Chapman, is an authority for 'parroting.' 'Glimpsing' has been used by Howells and Lowell, and 'supreme' as a verb may be found in Shelley's letters." — Washington Post.

Death Certificates For Dogs.

The veterinarian was bandaging the leg of a French poodle when the telephone rang, so he asked the visitor to take the message.

"Please tell the doctor," said a woman at the other end of the wire, "that King Charles is dead and we would like a death certificate right away."

The visitor transmitted the news of royalty demise, then added something about the "tomfoolery of getting a death certificate for a dog."

"It may be tomfoolery," said the veterinarian, "but a lot of people with pet cats and dogs are guilty of it. If a real King Charles was dead and I was making out a certificate to file with the board of health I should take no more pains than I shall for that family that has lost a dog. His age and the date of death will be recorded, and the disease that carried him off will be described in detail. Of course the owners of valuable animals are most likely to ask for death certificates, but very often the possessor of an ugly little cur that has crept into his affections wants one too."—New York Sun.

How to Hit.

With one swift, straight right to the jaw the little man had knocked the big fat bully out completely. Now he was boasting modestly about the matter.

"I learned how to hit," he said, "from Gentleman Jim Corbett. Gentleman Jim claims that in street fighting if you land one clean right you win. But few men know how to hit out straight and clean. They swing. And a swing is no good because it can so easily be dodged.

"To hit out with the right straight and swift—this is how Jim taught me to do it. You step forward with your left foot toward the enemy. You hit straight out with your right arm as hard as you can, at the same time shoving your body forward and pushing off with the ball of your right foot as though you were going to shove the whole earth from under you.

"That is how to land a straight right. It is easy, and it wins every time."

The Lure of the Arctics.

Polar life brings strange revelations. A man who is a model of amiability at home is a savage in those high latitudes, where Mother Nature and humanity seem bent on revealing their crudest characteristics. When a man goes to the arctics first he dislikes it. If he is caught there one winter he vows to himself that he will never repeat the adventure. Yet when he gets back home he discovers that the "white silence" has a compelling fascination. I have never known a man who could resist the chance to go again, even at a financial loss. After twenty years of experience, if another opportunity came to me, it is doubtful whether any consideration would prevent my taking up the work again. Once the charm of those long months of daylight, the mysterious deathly silence of those long nights, the white glare of that brilliant moonlight across trackless wastes of snow and ice, has been felt a man is unable to resist the siren call of the north that has become more to him than family, home, friends or money. Gladly he takes his life in his hands and fares forth again into those frozen seas.—Captain Edwin Coffin of Ziegler Polar Expedition in National Magazine.

Bear Ague.

"Speaking of 'buck fever,'" said a survey official, "reminds me of 'bear ague.' Never heard of it, eh? Well, I first encountered it in Wrangel narrows, Alaska, a number of years ago. We were on the old surveying steamer Patterson.

"Just as we rounded a point of land not more than 200 yards distant a big black bear was seen on the beach looking at us. Eight men took up rifles at once and were about to shoot when I told them to wait and fire all at once in a volley when I gave the order. They all took careful beads on the beast. 'Ready, fire!' I shouted.

"There was a rattle of musketry as the eight pieces were discharged, and every one looked to see the animal's death throes. There was the bear running up the hill as lively as a jack rabbit. Not a shot had hit him. Bear ague, that's all. Every man's hand was trembling so he couldn't hit a house. Buck fever's nowhere alongside of it."—San Francisco Call.

Her Vocal Selection.

A wedding was recently held which was of the fashionable kind, and there were all sorts of preparations and frills. Among the "features" was a song by a baritone singer of considerable local renown, and just what he was to warble was a matter of considerable discussion.

A little sister six years old of the bride took much interest in the program. "Sis," she said, "I want to sing at your wedding."

"No, dear; you can't sing," was the rejoinder.

"But I can, and I want to," she pleaded.

"What would you sing?" her father asked her.

"'Heaven, Look With Pity!'" was her rejoinder, and her father hasn't got over it yet.—Kansas City Journal.

Some harps have been discovered in Egyptian tombs the strings of which in several instances were intact and gave forth distinct sounds after an estimated silence of 5,000 years.

Beggary.

King Cophetua, as the story runs, had wed the beggar maid and was suspecting nothing when to his considerable uneasiness he discovered that his wife was worth $10,000,000 in her own right.

"What faux pas have I been unwittingly guilty of?" exclaimed his majesty, for he was very scrupulous.

The queen tapped his cheek roguishly. "In Pittsburg, where I was brought up," she explained, "a girl who has only $10,000,000 is to all practical purposes a beggar."

And if he thought with regret of the ideals of a former age it was too late to insist on them.—Puck.

The Midnight Oil.

A hush is over all. The noisy town,
Wearied of strenuous work, is gone to rest,
To sleep, childlike, upon its mother's breast,
While silence, like some huge and somber crown,
Upon the peaceful night comes brooding down.
Anon there echoes from the neighboring dark
In answer to gay roisterers the bark
Of honest watchdog. In a shabby gown,
With locks unkempt, the room in disarray,
All heedless of the rapid flight of time,
Working while others sleep in broken chair
That mournful creaks to his frail body's sway,
And fingers moving to a merry rhyme,
The poet darns his socks, his only pair.
—Judge.

Up to Date Domestic.

Having recently engaged an eighteen-year-old colored girl to do housework, a New York woman was adjusting the various questions of privileges.

"You will have Monday and Thursday nights off, Miss," the mistress of the house said.

"On'y Monday 'n' Thursday nights?" the other exclaimed, rolling her eyes. "My Lawd, Mis' Blank, dat won't do nohow. Dat ain't enough. You see, ma'am, I's a debbytante!"—New York Sun.

Weatherby's Ride.

Swift as a shot in his automobile
Weatherby sped, with fate at the wheel.
Swift as a rocket the first mile was run.
Fifty-three seconds the second was done.
Lo, but the third was e'en faster than that!
How the wind whistled through Weatherby's hat!
Then on the fourth they literally flew.
Sudden a roadhouse hove into view.
There they slowed down and went in for a "wink."
Thus was Weatherby driven to drink.

A King's Economy.

An example of George III.'s economies is so curious as almost to suggest that it must have betokened approaching insanity. He actually let out the cream colored horses used for his state coach to a jobmaster, who "thinks from the great receipt of custom that they will draw him into an easy fortune."

LABOUR REPORT FOR FEBRUARY

Mr. J. Arthur Sharpe, correspondent to the Labour Gazette, reported as follows:

Conditions have been satisfactory during February and labour generally well employed. While the building trades were rather quiet, as is usual at this time of the year, the iron industries and electric workers were very busy. The Canadian General Electric Company is making preparations to enlarge its plant; the increase in business demanding larger quarters. The Peterborough Lubricator Company is very busy, having received a large order from London, Eng. E. H. Mann & Company have taken over the plant of the Mann Lumber and Cheese Box Company and are in full operation sawing lumber for farmers. St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society have bought the Richard Hall property and will spend about $5,000 fitting it up for a club rooms for the Society. The price paid for the property was $12,000. A profit of $9,705.70 is shown in the report for 1909, of the water system. This is a slight increase over the preceding year. The water works are owned by the city. The rate of taxation this year will be twenty-one mills as the general rate, with an extra mill for Separate School supporters. The trouble between the Typographical Union and the publishers has been settled and the men have gone back to work at an increase in wages.

Condition of Local Industries.

Agriculture.—The farmers are busy getting out lumber and cord wood, caring for stock and marketing produce.

Lumbering is active, with conditions favourable.

Manufacturing is active, some of the factories working night and day.

Condition of Particular Trades.

Bricklayers, masons, lathers and plasterers found trade dull. Carpenters and factories for woodworkers were busy. Those usually employed at outside work were quiet. Plumbers, gas and steamfitters had plenty of work. Painters were fairly active.

Metal, iron and brass moulders had steady work. Machinists were busy as were electric workers and linemen. Metal polishers, buffers, platers and brass workers were active. Blacksmiths were busy. Tool makers also were busy.

Carriage and waggon makers were busy. Pattern makers were active and coopers busy.

Printers, pressmen, electrotypers, etc., had a fairly good month.

Journeymen tailors were a little quiet the first part of the month, but reported plenty of work later.

Bakers, confectioners, butchers and meatcutters were active. Cigar makers reported business improving.

Leather workers were very busy.

Barbers reported trade fair.

Railway and street railway employes had a busy month. Freight handlers, teamsters and expressmen had a good month.

Unskilled labour was fairly well employed.

Miller's Grip Powders cure.—Wm. Madill, druggist.

SPECIAL EASTER SERVICES AT ST. ANDREW'S TO-MORROW

Rev. E. D. McLaren, D.D., of Toronto, and the Rev. E. W. Halpenny, B.A., Will Give Addresses.

SPECIAL MUSIC

The Easter services in St. Andrew's church will be of a very interesting and inspiring character. In the morning the Rev. E. D. McLaren, D.D., of Toronto, will give a vivid description of conditions in Canada at Easter time, 1910, and in the evening the Rev. E. W. Halpenny, B.A., late of Indianapolis, Ind., will give an Easter message from the text, "Here am I, Send Me."

The musical service is noted elsewhere.

In connection with Rev. Mr. Halpenny the Ontario Sunday School Leader says:

A Carleton County farmhouse was the birthplace of our General Secretary—the east and the farm make a good combination, as his successful life has shown. Up till the age of twenty-two Mr. Halpenny's life was spent in Eastern and Northern Ontario, until sixteen mostly on the farm, then three years in high school, and three years on mission fields as a probationer. There followed the college years at McGill University and the Wesleyan College, Montreal, with a year at the Hartford School of Religious Pedagogy, located at that time at Springfield, Mass. His training and ability fitted him especially for Sunday School leadership, and after finishing his course at the Wesleyan College he spent over three years in charge of the work of the Quebec Sunday School Union.

But the American brethren had an eye on this young Canadian and urgently called him to their side of the line. On April 2nd, 1903, Mr. Halpenny assumed the office of General Secretary of the Indiana Sunday School Association. Here for nearly seven years he laboured with joy, with zeal, and with such success that in many ways the work of that State grew to double its former achievements. Since 1903 Mr. Halpenny has been identified also with the Summer Training School at Winona Lake, Ind., first as Acting Secretary, then Secretary of the Board of Directors, and for the past two sessions as Dean. During the session of 1910 Mr. Halpenny continues as Dean.

Naturally, the Indiana brethren felt stunned when the Ontario call came to Mr. Halpenny. Only a fine, broad Christian spirit guided them and him, we believe, and on January 1st he took up his position as General Secretary of the Ontario School Association. Of his vigour and ability and enthusiasm, his broad training and fine, genial Christian manliness, we need not speak further. Our Sunday School constituency will greet him with every good wish not only for a Happy New Year, but for a period of fruitful service in his native province. The greetings will include Mrs. Halpenny, who is the daughter of the Rev. Aquila Lucas, for thirteen years General Secretary of New Brunswick Sunday School Association, and for the past three years International Worker for the West Indies and South America, and the two children.

REV. E. W. HALPENNY, B.A., of Indianapolis, U.S.A., Who Gives the Easter Message in St Andrew's to-morrow Night.

WEALTHY MAN VICTIM OF STRONG ARM WOMAN

Special to The Examiner.

New York, March 26.—Magistrate Corrigan in the West Side Police Court yesterday sent to the workhouse for an indeterminate sentence Kate Fisher, thirty-three years, of No. 215 West Twenty-Fifth street, and Blanche Evans, alias Moran, thirty years, of No. 266 West Thirty-eighth street.

The two women, who are known to the police, were arrested late Friday night by Detectives Peabody and McConaghy of the Central Office, charged with attacking and robbing John D. Crosby, who described himself as a wealthy manufacturer of Schenectady, living at the Hotel Belmont.

According to the detectives, the women attacked Crosby at Forty-second street and Fifth avenue, in front of the new Public Library, a favourite haunt of women of the class. One of the women dropped her purse and muff. Crosby, who was near, stopped to pick them up. As he did so he felt a hand slip into his hip pocket, taking his wallet, containing $21. A scuffle followed, and Peabody and McConaghy, who had been trailing the women, arrested them.

Yesterday morning, when they were arraigned in the West Side Court, Crosby did not put in an appearance and the detectives were forced to reduce the charge from larceny to disorderly conduct. Both women have been arrested on several occasions, but the police have been unable to secure aconviction.

At the Hotel Belmont it was said yesterday that no person of the name of Crosby was registered there. Neither did his description fit any of the guests, so far as the clerk could recall.

The two women worked precisely the same plan by which Warner M. Van Norden was robbed of $28,000 in front of the Waldorf-Astoria recently.

Fifth avenue has become a rendezvous for women of the type, and they are skilful in picking out visitors who have in the parlance a "call." Men who have dined late and well in Broadway restaurants are easy victims of the "strong arm" women.

Shortly after the robbery of Van Norden the Fifth Avenue Association, composed of merchants on that thoroughfare, met and passed resolutions demanding that the avenue be more properly policed and kept clear of the women preying upon "easy marks."

The avenue was watched more closely for a time, but recently the vigilance has ceased.

From Farm and Dairy.

The Oklahoma Experiment Station has in press a bulletin on "Tree Culture," by Professor Morris, of the horticultural department. While the bulletin treats of many features, such as the best trees to plant for shade or post and pole production, perhaps the most timely and useful advice is that relating to planting which is as follows:

"The trees should be set a little deper in the soil than they stood in the nursery row, or where previously grown. The soil must be worked in underneath the large roots and tamped about them. The top of the tree should be leaned slightly to the southwest. This enables the tree to resist the hard south winds and before the end of the first season the tree will be standing in an erect position. It is a good plan to shake the tree several times while tamping the dirt around the roots and to pour water about the tree in order to bring the soil in contact with every bit of root surface. After the water has been poured on, another inch or two of dry soil and good surface should be thrown about the tree to prevent baking."

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

"Oscar!" he cried, and repeated very softly, "Oscar!"

The man was deeply moved, and tears sprang into his eyes. Armitage laughed, holding him at arm's length.

"None of that nonsense! Sit down!" He turned to the door, opened it and peered into the hall, locked the door again, then motioned the man to a chair.

"So you deserted your mother country, did you, and have borne arms for the glorious republic?"

"I served in the Philippines—yes."

"Rank, titles, emoluments, Oscar?"

"I was a sergeant, and the surgeon could not find the bullet after Big Bend, Luzon, so they were sorry and gave me a certificate and $2 a month to my pay," said the man so succinctly and colorlessly that Armitage laughed.

"You have done well, Oscar; honor me by accepting a cigar."

The man took a cigar from the box which Armitage extended, but would not light it. He held it rather absentmindedly in his hand and continued to stare.

"You are not dead—Mr.—Armitage, but your father"—

"My father is dead, Oscar."

"He was a good man," said the soldier.

"Yes; he was a good man," repented Armitage gravely. "I am alive, and yet I am dead, Oscar. Do you grasp the idea? You were a good friend when we were lads together in the great forest. If I should want you to help me now"—

The man jumped to his feet and stood at attention.

The man jumped to his feet and stood at attention so gravely that Armitage laughed and slapped his knee.

"You are well taught, Sergeant Oscar! Sit down. I am going to trust you. My affairs just now are not without their trifling dangers."

"There are enemies—yes?" and Oscar nodded his head solemnly, in acceptance of the situation.

"I am going to trust you absolutely. You have no confidants—you are not married?"

"How shouldst man be married who is a soldier? I have no friends. They are unprofitable," declared Oscar solemnly.

"I fear you are a pessimist, Oscar, but a pessimist who keeps his mouth shut is a good ally. Now, if you are not afraid of being shot or struck with a knife, and if you are willing to obey my orders for a few weeks we may be able to do some business. First, remember that I am Mr. Armitage. You must learn that now and remember it for all time. And if any one should ever suggest anything else"—

The man nodded his comprehension.

"That will be the time for Oscar to be dumb. I understand, Mr. Armitage."

Armitage smiled. The man presented so vigorous a picture of health, his simple character was so transparently reflected in his eyes and face that he did not in the least question him.

"You are an intelligent person, sergeant. If you are equally discreet—able to be deaf when troublesome questions are asked, then I think we shall get on."

"You should remember"— began Oscar.

"I remember nothing," observed Armitage sharply, and Oscar was quite humble again. Armitage opened a trunk and took out an envelope, from which he drew several papers and a small map, which he unfolded and spread on the table. He marked a spot with his lead pencil and passed the map to Oscar.

"Do you think you could find that place?"

The man breathed hard over it for several minutes.

"Yes. It would be easy." And he nodded his head several times as he named the railroad stations nearest the point indicated by Armitage. The place was in one of the mountainous counties of Virginia, fifteen miles from an east and west railway line. Armitage opened a duly recorded deed which conveyed to himself the title to 2,000 acres of land; also a curiously complicated abstract of title showing the successive transfers of ownership from colonial days down through the years of Virginia's splendor to the dread time when battle shook the world. The title had passed from the receiver of a defunct shooting club to Armitage, who had been charmed by the description of the property as set forth in an advertisement and lured, moreover, by the amazingly small price at which the preserve was offered.

"It is a farm—yes?"

"It is a wilderness, I fancy," said Armitage. "I have never seen it. I may never see it, for that matter. But you will find your way there, going first to this town, Lamar, studying the country, keeping your mouth shut and seeing what the improvements on the ground amount to. There's some sort of a bungalow there, built by the shooting club. Here's a description of the place, on the strength of which I bought it. You may take these papers along to judge the size of the swindle."

"Yes, sir."

"And a couple of good horses, plenty of commissary stores—plain military necessities, you understand—and some bedding should be provided. I want you to take full charge of this matter and get to work as quickly as possible. It may be a trifle lonesome down there among the hills, but if you serve me well you shall not regret it."

"Yes, I am quite satisfied with the job," said Oscar.

"And after you have reached the place and settled yourself you will tell the postmaster and telegraph operator who you are and where you may be found, so that messages may reach you promptly. If you get an unsigned message advising you of—let me consider—a shipment of steers, you may expect me any hour. On the other hand, you may not see me at all. We'll consider that our agreement lasts until the first snow flies next winter. You are a soldier. There need be no further discussion of this matter, Oscar."

The man nodded gravely.

"And it is well for you not to reappear in this hotel. If you should be questioned on leaving here"—

"I have not been here—is it not?"

"It is," replied Armitage, smiling. "You read and write English?"

"Yes; one must to serve in the army."

"If you should see a big Servian with a neck like a bull and a head the size of a pea, who speaks very bad German, you will do well to keep out of his way unless you find a good place to tie him up. I advise you not to commit murder without special orders. Do you understand?"

"It is the custom of the country," assented Oscar in a tone of deep regret.

"To be sure," laughed Armitage, "and now I am going to give you money enough to carry out the project I have indicated."

He took from his trunk a long billhook, counted out twenty new one-hundred dollar bills and threw them on the table.

"It is much money," observed Oscar, counting the bills laboriously.

"It will be enough for your purposes. You can't spend much money up there if you try. Bacon, perhaps eggs; a cow may be necessary—who can tell without trying it? Don't write me any letters or telegrams and forget that you have seen me if you don't hear from me again."

He went to the elevator and rode down to the office with Oscar and dismissed him carelessly. Then John Armitage bought an armful of magazines and newspapers and returned to his room quite like any traveler taking the comfort of his inn.

Chapter XI

THE TOSS OF A NAPKIN.

CAPTAIN Richard Claiborne gave a sumptuous supper at the Army and Navy club for ten men in honor of the newly arrived military attache of the Spanish legation. He had drawn his guests largely from his foreign acquaintances in Washington because the Spanish spoke little English, and Dick knew Washington well enough to understand that, while a girl and a man who speak different languages may sit comfortably together at table, men in like predicament grow morose and are likely to quarrel with their eyes before the cigars are passed. It was Friday, and the whole party had witnessed the drill at Fort Myer that afternoon, when nine girls to listen to their explanation of the maneuvers and the earliest spring bride for chaperon. Shirley had been of the party and somewhat the heroine of it, too, for it was Dick who sat on his horse out in the tanbark with the little whistle to his lips and manipulated the troop.

"Here's a confusion of tongues. I may need you to interpret," laughed Dick, indicating a chair at his left, and when Armitage sat down he faced Chauvenet across the round table.

With the first filling of glasses it was found that every one could speak French, and the talk went forward spiritedly. The discussion of military matters naturally occupied first place. Then they fell to talking about individuals, chiefly men in the public eye, and as the Austro-Hungarian embassy was in mourning and unrepresented at the table the new emperor-king was discussed with considerable frankness.

"He has not old Stroebel's right hand to hold him up," remarked a young German officer.

"Thereby hangs a dark tale," remarked Claiborne. "Somebody stuck a knife into Count von Stroebel at a singularly inopportune moment. I saw him in Geneva two days before he was assassinated, and he was very feeble and seemed harassed. It gives a man the shudders to think of what might happen if his majesty Charles Louis should go by the board. His only child died a year ago—after him his cousin Francis, and then the deluge."

"Bah! Francis is not as dark as he's painted. He's the most lied about prince in Europe," remarked Chauvenet. "He would most certainly be an improvement on Charles Louis. But, alas, Charles Louis will undoubtedly live on forever, like his lamented father. The king is dead! Long live the king!"

"Nothing can happen," remarked the German sadly. "I have lost much money betting on upheavals in that direction. If there were a man in Hungary it would be different. But riots are not revolutions."

"That is quite true," said Armitage quietly.

"But," observed the Spaniard, "if the Archduke Karl had not gone out of his head and died in two or three dozen places, so that no one is sure he is dead at all, things at Vienna might be rather more interesting. Karl took a son with him into exile. Suppose one or the other of them should reappear, stir up strife and incite rebellion."

"Such speculations are quite idle," commented Chauvenet. "There is no doubt whatever that Karl is dead or we should hear of him."

"Of course," said the German. "If he were not the death of the old emperor would have brought him to life again."

"The same applies to the boy he carried away with him—undoubtedly dead, or we should hear of him. Karl disappeared soon after his son Francis was born. It was said"—

"A pretty tale it is," commented the German, "that the child wasn't exactly Karl's own. He took it quite hard—went away to hide his shame in exile, taking his son, Frederick Augustus, with him."

"He was surely mad," remarked Chauvenet, sipping a cordial. "He is much better dead and out of the way for the good of Austria. Francis, as I say, is a good fellow. We have hunted together, and I know him well."

They fell to talking about the lost sons of royal houses—and a goodly number there have been, even in these later centuries—and then of the latest marriages between American women and titled foreigners. Chauvenet was now leading the conversation. It might even have seemed to a critical listener that he was guiding it with a certain intention.

He laughed as though at the remembrance of something amusing and held the little company while he bent over a candle to light a cigar.

"With all due respect to our American host, I must say that a title in America goes further than anywhere else in the whole. I was at Bar Harbor three years ago when the Baron von Kissel devastated that region. He made sad havoc among the ladies that summer. The rest of us simply had no place to stand. You remember, gentlemen"—and Chauvenet looked slowly around the listening circle—"that the unexpected arrival of the excellent ambassador of Austria-Hungary caused the baron to leave Bar Harbor between dark and daylight. The story was that he got off in a sailboat, and the next we heard of him he was masquerading under some title in San Francisco, where he proved to be a dangerous forger. You all remember that the papers were full of his performances for awhile, but he was a lucky rascal and always disappeared at the proper psychological moment. He had, as you may say, the cosmopolitan accent and was the most plausible fellow alive.

THE IMPERIAL GUARANTEE & ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA

Head Office: 46 King Street, West — TORONTO

The Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Imperial Guarantee & Accident Insurance Company of Canada, was held at the Head Office, 46 King Street West, Toronto, on the 10th inst.

Mr. E. W. Cox, President of the Company, in reviewing the business of the year, made reference to the growing popularity of Accident Insurance, and its effect on the success of the business of the Company during the year. The amount of Insurance written was over $36,270,000 00 an increase of $1,240,000.00 over the business taken out in 1908. This is considered exceptionally satisfactory in view of the fact that the business of the Company is confined to Personal Accident and Guarantee Insurance.

The Gross Income for 1909 amounted to $319,741.76.

That being an increase over the year 1908 of $41,817.34.

The Assets now total $266,974.00, and, after allowing for Reserve for unearned premium calculated on the full Government standard, and all other liabilities, the surplus for the protection of policyholders has increased to $213,437.19.

The following Directors and Officers were elected:

Edward W. Cox, President. — Hon. F. T. Frost.
Noel Marshall, Vice-President. — R. Bickerdike.

"Sunkist" Oranges at Special Prices

All Dealers Are Supplied

Good Health Week Sale Begins Monday, MARCH 28TH

Tone up your system—it needs it. Your physician will tell you to eat oranges—lots of them at this time of the year. This entire community—every man, woman and child—should participate in this health celebration. Oranges are the trademark of good health. "Sunkist" is the name of the choicest oranges in the world.

Remember the date. Because oranges are purveyors of good health we are going to make Good Health Week the occasion for the greatest sale of oranges in history.

"Sunkist" Navel Oranges Are Seedless

"Sunkist" oranges are so lusciously fresh, juicy and delicious that you enjoy their medicinal qualities. Morning, noon and night is orange eating time. A "Sunkist" orange or two is delicious dessert after each meal and at the same time your "spring fever" is vanishing under the general toning up process aided by the orange juices.

That "Sunkist" wrapper is the guarantee of the choicest oranges that California produces. It is the voucher of thousands of fruit farmers that "Sunkist" is absolutely the best that careful cultivation can produce.

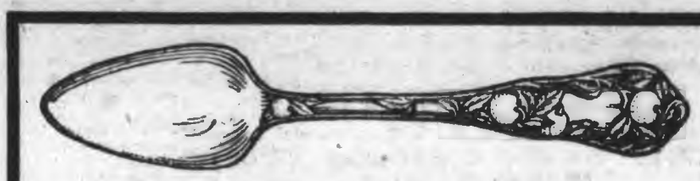
Get the Orange Habit

Here is the height of orange perfection. You never tasted another orange like "Sunkist." Tree-ripened, seedless, thin-skinned, exquisitely rich in delicious orange juices—those are a few "Sunkist" orange qualities. All these are health aids and you should take advantage of them. Get the Orange Habit and note your improvement in health. You will put your stamp of approval on Good Health week and "Sunkist" oranges.

"Sunkist" Oranges for Health All Next Week

"Sunkist" Lemons

possess the same high merits that have made "Sunkist" oranges famous. They are firm, full of snappy lemon juice. They, too, are choicest of all the lemons in the 5,000 groves of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange. That is why they bear the "Sunkist" wrapper.



Rogers' Orange Spoon Free For "Sunkist" Wrappers

Insist that your dealer gives you none but "Sunkist" oranges and lemons—in "Sunkist" wrappers. 12 of these wrappers and six 2-cent stamps to cover mailing, etc., entitles you to a handsome Rogers' Orange Spoon Free.

The same number of stamps and wrappers for each additional spoon. These spoons are Rogers full standard plate. You can easily get a full table set in a short time. Send wrappers and stamps to

DAMES AND DAUGHTERS.

Mme. Lidia Lipkovska, the Russian prima donna, has joined the National Progressive Woman Suffrage union in New York.

Mrs. Franklin, otherwise "Frank Danzy," has adjured novel writing and is at work upon a biography and catalogue illustre of Emma, Lady Hamilton.

Mme. Curie of Paris, who, with her husband, discovered radium, was elected an honorary associate member of the American Chemical society at its recent meeting in Boston.

Miss Elizabeth Moore, a Vassar graduate, has entered the agricultural department of the University of Missouri, at Columbia, and has announced her intention of becoming an expert farmer. She is a member of several clubs in St. Louis.

Mrs. Jane Morris of Sand Gap, Jackson county, Ky., is eighty-nine years old and has had a total of 580 descendants, of whom 468 are living and of whom 43 are great-great-grandchildren. As she is still vigorous and some of her descendants in the fifth generation are approaching maturity, she may see descendants in the sixth generation.

Miss Pearl A. Billings is said to be the youngest hotel woman in Chicago, perhaps in this country. Several years ago she inherited from a cousin the lease, furnishings and good will of the Newberry hotel. By good management Miss Billings has made it a success without a bar, a thing which the hotel men of Chicago told her would be impossible.

Palpitation of the Heart.

One of the first danger signals that announce something wrong with the heart is the irregular or violent throb. Often there is only a fluttering sensation, or an "all gone" sinking feeling; or, again, there may be a most violent beating, with flushings of the skin, and visable pulsations of the arteries.

There may also be experienced a smothering sensation, gasping for breath, and feeling as though about to die.

In all such cases the action of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills in quieting the heart and restoring it to its normal beat, is, beyond all question marvellous, as our thousands of testimonials will show.

Mrs. Martha Mason, Maribank, Ont., writes:—"Just a few lines to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I have been troubled with weakness and palpitation of the heart, would have severe choking spells and could scarcely lie down at all. I tried many remedies but got none to answer my case like your pills did. I can recommend them highly to all with heart or nerve trouble."

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Sporting Notes.

The New York Yacht club has 2,300 members.

San Francisco is to have a half mile motordrome.

The flag to flag automobile contest from Denver to the City of Mexico will start from Denver May 1.

Herrernon, the South African, and Gardiner of London, the two latest long distance runners to turn professional, will meet in a match race in London about Easter time.

Notre Dame college, for the first time in its history of athletics, has two foreigners making a strong bid for positions on the varsity baseball nine. Falomir, a Mexican, and Gambos, a Cuban, are almost finished products of the great American game.

The international chess congress will open at Hamburg on July 16. Dr. Lasker, Dr. Tarrasch, Carl Schlechter, A. Rubenstein, Geza Marcosy, Dr. Janowski and Frank J. Marshall will be invited to play in the grand masters' tourney, and eighteen lesser experts will play in a minor event.

Things Theatrical.

Carlotta Nilsson is to star in "The Conflict."

Douglas Fairbanks is to star in a play by Owen Davis.

Haddon Chambers is to write a musical comedy, called "The Best Girl," which Charles Dillingham is to produce.

It is said "The Virginian" may be revived, with the three Farnum brothers—William, Dustin and Marshall—in the cast.

There are 112 people, comedians and singers, in the cast of "The Silver Star," the great production in which Adeline Genee is dancing this season.

Henry B. Harris produced Sydney Rosenfeld's play, "Children of Destiny," in Syracuse, N. Y., recently. Orrin Johnson is playing the leading role.

Progress and Labor.

Automatic machines which clean 3,000 fish an hour are in use in the salmon canneries of the Pacific coast.

Of the $8,200,000,000 that the farms of the United States have yielded in 1909 the south's share is $2,400,000,000.

Coal mines of the United States gave employment to 680,439 men last year, nearly 10,000 more than the year before.

A dressmaking establishment in Boston almost entirely operated by electricity has an electric cutter capable of cutting out 200 thicknesses of cloth at once.

Electric Sparks.

A complete plant for curing meat by electrical processes has been erected at Cleveland, O.

Japan controls practically all the wireless telegraphy in the empire through its department of communications.

The wireless apparatus on the Cunard liner Caronia is the most powerful of any in steamship service, having a radius of 1,200 miles.

A new windmill apparatus for generating electricity for farm use has been perfected in England. A storage battery supplies the current when the wind is not blowing.

German Gleanings.

Marriage is now on the decrease in Germany.

In some parts of Berlin there are beer saloons which are patronized exclusively by women.

Fish is now one of the chief means of subsistence of the German people because of its comparative cheapness.

Germany forbids the use of boric acid in curing meats and requires that all meat pickled in salt or brine must contain at least 6 per cent salt in its innermost part.

Snow Drying.

Snow at a very low temperature absorbs moisture. Arctic travelers take advantage of this fact by spreading their wet clothes on the snow, and they soon dry.

Sea Kale.

The sea kale used as food in China comes, largely from the coast of Sakalin, where the leaves average one foot in width and forty-five feet in length.

Widows' Caps.

The widow's mourning cap dates back to the days of ancient Egypt. Egyptian men shaved the beard and the head as a token of mourning. The women, instead of cutting off the hair, concealed it with a close cap. The Romans, who were as a race clean shaven, shaved their heads in mourning and wore wigs.

Birds' Eyes.

Several birds—apparently the young of all those that nest on the ground—can see quite well directly they come out of the shell, but the young of birds that nest in trees or on rocks are born blind and have to be fed.

Roman Boxers.

A boxer of ancient Rome would have laughed contemptuously at the suggestion that he should use gloves in his boxing matches. To make his blows more effective it was the custom to hold in each hand a heavy ball of metal. With his fist thus weighted nearly every blow brought blood.

How Welshwomen Carry Their Babies.

The quaint old Welsh way in which Swansea women carry their babies attracts every one's notice when visiting that town for the first time. A big shawl over the right shoulder is drawn down to the left hip, where the two ends of the shawl are met and held together, forming a sort of pouch or pocket, in which the baby snuggles cosily and safely. Its weight is so supported by the hip and distributed by the shawl over the whole upper part of the body that there is no strain at all nor any tiring of the arms. This probably accounts for the upright carriage of the Welsh mother. Moreover, the method is comfortable for the child and so safe that in Swansea small boys swathed in their mothers' shawls are seen carrying the family's latest baby.—London Chronicle.

Dean Swift's Complaint.

It is no new thing, this complaint which one hears of the high cost of living. Writing to Stella from London in the year 1710, Dean Swift remarks: "I lodge in Bury street, St. James, where I removed a week ago. I have the first floor, the dining room and bedchamber at 8 shillings a week; plaguy deep, but I spend nothing for eating, never go to a tavern and very seldom in a coach, yet, after all, it will be expensive."

Knew of One.

Traveler (delayed in Drearyhurst by washout)—Are there any objects of curiosity in this village?

Uncle Welby Gosh—Well, I reckon I've got as much curiosity as any objick you'll find. Where are you goin', mister, an' what do you foller fur a livin'?—Chicago Tribune.

Got the Time.

A man was so cross eyed that he put his hand into another man's pocket and abstracted therefrom a watch. He wanted to learn the time. The judge told him it would be three years.

MODERN OFFICE BUILDING A WORLD IN ITSELF

IN the Great Skyscrapers, Housing Thousands of Persons, Can Be Found all the Necessities of Life, Not Overlooking Man's Spiritual Welfare—Perfection of Community Organization

"JAMES, I'm going out for half an hour or so."

"Out, sir?" queries James, the new clerk, fresh from father's store. He observes that his employer is without hat or overcoat and he is surprised.

"Not outside, but around the building. I've got some shopping and general business to attend to."

To go "out" is an expressive term. It suggests that a man is placing himself in touch with the world at large. To go "out" in a modern office building is to venture from one of the countless body cells that go to make up its vast organism and circulate through others of his cells. The only difference in an office building is that he is placing himself in touch with a perfect, compact chunk out of the world at large.

Possibly you pass your working day in an office building. Probably you think you are perfectly familiar with that institution. Of course. But are you? It is a compendium of business, an epitome of commercial and professional enterprise. It is complete, including within its walls every essential and many non-essentials of modern existence.

An occupant of an office building can call the turn on the residents of high Olympus. Without leaving the four walls he can find, first, every facility offered by any first class hotel, and then opportunity to cultivate or patronize literature, investments, religion, "isms," art, recreation, inventions, medicine, law, banking, speculation, psychics, health, decoration, science, general information and all branches of commerce, wholesale or retail. At one elbow a telephone links him with home friends and immediate interests. At the other a pail of cable blanks represents potential hold upon Hong Kong and Finland. He can buy the contents of a house or a pair of socks, squander a fortune or make it, attain wisdom or lose a tooth, all in person and without putting his nose out of doors.

An office building is a hive, but a hive where the bees gather and store their treasures and carry on their occupations without leaving the common shelter of the roof.

To begin at the root, down in the underground chambers where the office building has its respiratory system of pumps and engines and its circulatory system of boilers and pipes, there is a Turkish bath establishment. Having started thus with opened pores and freshened eye the investigator is ready to work up. He ascends to the natural level and is in the lobby. The lobby is part bazaar, part arcade and part railway station. This being a typical office building, there are some dozen of elevators sliding to and from its surface, running on regular schedules of express and local and bearing the busy thousands of outside bees that have affairs on hand with the bees of the hive.

Toward the front is the side entrance to a bank. The bank occupies the cornerstone position, which is eminently just and proper in a commercial and business community. Almost every occupant of the building must have intimate relations with the bank and here it is in the same house with its depositors. Along the side, adjoining the bank, is a row of shops fronting on the street as a concession to the larger public, but doing most of their trade through their lobby entrances. Trunks and leather goods are next to the bank, establishing a suggestive connection of ideas. Here is the place to get money and here the place to get something to carry it away in.

Shouldering the trunk store is a candy shop. The thought of this wily merchant is obvious. If one is going a-journeying one may as well pack a box of sweets in the valise. For another thing, the candy store is always just opposite the elevator, where the homeward hurrying throng may note and be reminded of certain small but hungry candy eaters. To walk straight out of the elevators is to walk straight into the temptation of sweets.

Next in the row is a barber "parlor." Usually it is a matter of pride or loyalty with the occupants of an office building to have their chins scraped and their locks trimmed by the operator on the premises. It is a bad barber who cannot command his own local trade. Even the office boys wander in with lofty air to sacrifice the first, invisible down at a ruinous cost of twenty cents, when they could achieve the same result elsewhere for a dime. It is a matter of honor that the building barber be given their custom.

Adjoining, in order, are a shoe shop, a haberdasher, a cigar store and a tailor. The investigator will observe that with the exception of the candy store, and possibly the bank, there is nothing here to attract the patronage of the fair sex. But this is the lobby, where everything is rush and hurlyburly. Women do not do their shopping on a landing stage, and it is moreover a fact that office buildings have little to offer to feminine trade, in spite of the stenographers.

Over on the opposite side, behind the elevators, is a side door. Not just any side door, but the side door, the naughty kind that everybody hears about during a reform campaign. The shrinking investigator does not enter, but he can see the long, shiny bar and the glittering glasses and is thereby wiser. At the back of the lobby is a large restaurant, where there is music during the luncheon hours, covering the twin points of gastronomic and aesthetic joy for the office building occupant. A passage leads to a drug store and a clothing establishment at the other corner of the structure.

Clinging like fungi about the pillars or in corners of the wall is a growth of minor enterprises, booths and stands, whereat newspapers, magazines, flowers, fruits and the like trivialities of commerce blossom forth. One place of vantage is taken up by a public telephone exchange and a row of sentry boxes, another has the blue and white sign that announces telegraph and cable service. Through and between and among these the crowd hurries, pauses and hurries again ceaselessly from early until late.

The first floor presents a very different set of attractions. Here is a luxurious billiard parlor just off the elevators, where the occupant passes an idle hour or nails his clerk, who has some such intention himself. Spite of the high tension and fast pace at which business is driven in an office building there are always the wiser ones who manage to salt in a session with the ivories for the good of eye and health. Across the hall is the entrance to a furniture firm with a display room that covers something like half an acre or thereabouts. A large part of its trade, as in the case of many other occupants, is drawn from the building. It supplies office furniture of every conceivable kind, but stands ready to meet orders for the home or club.

On the second floor the dignitaries of the place are usually assembled. Here is one of the large branch offices of a big life insurance company, the headquarters of a fire insurance company, a gas company and a title guarantee company. Swarms of clerks and stenographers centre here betimes in the morning and along about noon the elevator stops at the second floor to let off sleek, pursy gentlemen of important and frowning aspect.

Above this point precedence ceases, if it can be said to exist below, and the great, bewildering variety of the office building runs on without rhyme or reason from floor to floor and corridor to corridor. Lawyers do not herd with lawyers nor publishers with publishers. To pass along any hall at random and inspect the gilded lettering on the frosted doors is to drop from mortgages to brewing association and to climb from corsets to ethical culture. Many strange and commonly unsuspected ways in which some persons earn their livelihoods are revealed to the investigator in roaming the office building. And there is available something or somebody to minister to every legitimate freak or fancy of human conception.

The employer of James, we will suppose, has dropped into the little gymnasium of a weight reducer and spent his ten minutes on sundry weird machines and exercisers. From there he had passed to the office of the foundry company in which he has an interest, called to see his lawyer about a pending suit, paid his subscriptions to two trade journals, visited an underwriting firm, purchased a Persian rug and opened negotiations with a diamond importer. Finding himself with some minutes to spare he walks into the room of a stock brokerage concern and watches the blackboard. He is excited on noting that X. Y. Z. had fallen off ten points. Horrors! Overcome by the shock he staggers. To a friend who catches him he gasps "Doctor."

The friend, fearing an apoplectic stroke, supports him out into the hall and helps him to a door on which a physician's name appears. The sick man still has strength to shake his head vehemently. The friend understands that an allopathist is not wanted and stumbles on further to where a homoeopathist's sign is seen. Again the man holds back. The friend struggles on until he sights the door of a Christian Scientist and tries to prop the patient against it. Another refusal. In despair the friend resumes the journey and tries two more varieties, finally landing with an osteopath, where the man consents to remain.

Restored later, when he learns that X. Y. Z. has recovered the lost ground he celebrates by ordering some fine gloves made for his wife, then continues his round. He stops to see how the new colored glass window for his church is coming on, chats with an acquaintance who is running a little bundle of gold and silver mines, hears that the theosophist on the sixth floor is drawing many followers, leaves a specimen sent him from Arizona with a firm of assayers, calls at a realty office to learn the latest figure placed on that lot, places an advertisement for Chicago and St. Louis papers with an agent, notices a pretty girl who is entering the office of a theatrical company and another closing the door of a vocal instructor, and winds up at the rooms of a business club. He decides that a five months' trip around the world is what he needs and leaves an order with Somebody's Tours to make him up two books of tickets so he won't have to bother about transportation while he is away. Finally, having worked late that night, he is unable to get home and goes up to the little bachelor hotel department on the top floor, where he gets room and bath.

The office building, which stands for all this and so much more besides that the recounting would be wearisome, is itself a machine that requires expert guidance. It is a public character and as such has a reputation to lose. It is capital and as such must be watched and nursed. It is a community and as such must be governed. A recent incident which took place in a downtown office building is of interest.

The chips were clicking merrily and the cards were flirting from the dealer's hand with a precision that spoke eloquently of that gentleman's long practice. The third man to the left, with a long, solemn face and keen eyes, glanced around the room approvingly. Three other tables held their quota of seekers after truth as exemplified by the royal flush.

"Neat scheme of yours, this," he observed, "with the gold mining company as a blind."

The dealer nodded. "Smooth friend got the place for me. Always some way of putting it over," he said.

"They watch office buildings pretty close, don't they?" asked the third man, picking up his hand.

"Naw," said the dealer. "Once you get by the superintendent you're all right."

The solemn faced man glanced at his cards, tossed them aside with a yawn and rose. "I'm going after a cigar down stairs," he announced, and started for the door into the hall.

"Hey, not that way," the dealer called after him. "We've plugged that up. Go the way you came, through the outer office."

But the other seemed not to have heard. He crossed to the door and laid hold of the knob.

"It's locked," called the dealer again. But apparently he was misinformed. The knob turned, a smart pull brought the door open and shook out the cotton crack stuffings. There was a shuffle of feet, a flashing of brass buttons and the dealer started up with a frightened yell that brought his clients white and trembling from their chairs. Too late. In the doorway stood a lieutenant of police with a squad of men behind him. Some few of the players made ill advised efforts to slip away through the adjacent offices, but were quickly corralled.

The calmest figure during the brief hubbub was the solemn faced individual who had opened the door. He stood among the policemen while the lieutenant was arranging the transfer of the prisoners to the patrol wagon. The dealer noticed him and thrust up close, snarling, "So it was you who gave us away, eh? Who the devil are you, anyway?"

"Me?" said the solemn faced man, innocently. "Oh, I'm the superintendent of the building."

Thus, in traditional dramatic style, enters the belated hero of this yarn. And he deserves a curtain call before he gets any further if for no other reason than because, though one of the most important persons in metropolitan life, he has hitherto passed unnoted and unsung. The janitor is famed in "butterick," story and evil jest. This man is more powerful and a lot more respectable than any hundred janitors and many times more interesting.

An office building, bearing out its analogy with a city in itself, has its own officials and departments. A large building has sometimes as many as two hundred employes—engineers to run the huge heating, lighting and pumping plants, firemen, special policemen, elevator force, hall cleaners, vacuum plant operators, window washers, carpenters, painters, letterers, electricians, experts of various kinds and degrees. Above them looms the superintendent.

The superintendent of a modern office building is a kind of sublimated Cerebus. He lies in wait at the portal of the premises he is hired to guard and he is not to be lured to sleep with cakes of honey or cakes of anything else. He is a combination watch dog, renting agent, detective, walking gentleman, financial expert, censor, committee of public safety, Nemesis and tyrant. To live in his community the applicant must show himself as commercially spotless as the Himalayan snows; to remain he must prove himself as solid and upright as the Bank of England. At least, such is the guiding theory.

A stranger appears at the office of the superintendent and demands to know whether there is available room for rent.

"What firm or who for?" asks the superintendent, dispassionately.

"Chicken Feather Extract Company," says the other.

"What references?"

"This and 'Tother banks."

The superintendent takes many notes—the nature of the business, machinery if any, noises if any, previous location, space wanted, what goods to be on premises, names of company officers and still more references.

"We will let you know," he says.

Within the next few days he makes or directs an investigation. Either personally or through an assistant he looks up the applicant from all possible angles. No enterprise with a questionable standing or a questionable purpose is considered. The office building must be kept as free from financial as from social reproach. This governor is on the ground to see that the "lid" is nailed fast.

If the applying firm comes through every test it is invited to step up and sign a steel ribbed, rock bottomed, iron clamped lease which leaves it neatly in the narrow path of rectitude, with the promise of being thrown out for cause.

But surveillance does not end here. The superintendent of a high class office building holds his position through his ability to keep the good name of the place unsmirched. If there is anything suspicious going on he is going to know it, if he has to "gum shoe" himself.

Like any other community, the office building is tempting to vice in many forms. Swindlers and gamblers are the enemies that the superintendent is ever on the watch for. A faro game may be in surreptitious operation behind an investment company, or a pool room behind a suburban development firm. He frequently finds it difficult to know where to draw the line with companies that use the mails exclusively. But he is alert to throw them out a step ahead of the post office authorities.

An office building presents a rich field. Men employed within it are usually well to do, it lies in a prosperous district and its miles of corridors hold promise of safe retreats where the hard working sharper may ply his trade in peace. Then there are the dignity and the stiff front to which a large and busy structure contributes. If it were left to the nimble witted gentry to choose their quarters they would flock to the big office buildings by thousands. They get in even now, and it is only at the expense of ceaseless vigilance that their swarms are headed

BADLY CRIPPLED WITH LAME BACK

Could Not Walk Straight

Very few diseases can cause you as much pain as a Lame Back. Sitting down is torture—getting up pretty nearly kills you—walking is agony. Even when you lie in bed, that nagging pain keeps up its ache, ache, ache—and when you roll over or try to get up again, well, it brings tears to your eyes.

Mr. Mackenzie, an old resident of Elmsdale, Nova Scotia, knows what it is to have a Lame Back—and he knows, too, what to take to cure it and be free of pain and suffering.

"I was badly crippled up with pains across the small of my back. I could not walk straight or lie comfortably in any position that I would place myself.

I was recommended to try Gin Pills, which I did, and I received immediate relief after taking four doses, and by the time the first box of Gin Pills was finished they had made a complete cure.

I can with pleasure recommend Gin Pills to any person troubled as I was."

GEO. M. MACKENZIE.

Gin Pills cure Lame Back because they cure the Kidneys. Lame Back is just another name for Sick Kidneys. Hard work and old age strain and weaken the kidneys. These important organs need help, and the acute pain in the back is a sign that they are being overworked.

Give your kidneys the help they need. Get Gin Pills and take them regularly. In a very short time, you will be free of pain, the kidneys will have gained new strength, and the Bladder be in excellent condition. Dealers everywhere have Gin Pills at 50c. a box—6 for $2.50.

We don't ask you to buy Gin Pills but to try them at our expense and only buy them after they have proved their value.

HOME FOR SICK CHILDREN.

Cleveland Cottage at Lakewood Turned into Tuberculosis Preventorium.

The old Grover Cleveland cottage at Lakewood, N. J., has been converted into what is called a tuberculosis "preventorium" for children, and, unknown to the outside world, it has been running as an experiment since last July. It is only recently, however, that it was decided to make the institution permanent and to enlarge its scope.

The institution has been established to give treatment to children of the tenements who have been infected with tuberculosis and to restore them to health by taking hold of the disease in its earliest stages. The work has been made possible largely by the generosity of Nathan Straus, who made a gift for the purpose of the old Cleveland cottage, which be owned and which for years the late president rented. The cottage stands in the pines and is surrounded by eight acres of land. Besides giving the cottage, Mr. Straus donated a majority of stock in the Lakewood hotel, in which he has been interested, the proceeds from which will be applied to the running expenses of the preventorium.

Steps to open the Cleveland cottage were begun last May, when Mr. Straus told a group of persons interested that he would aid in the fight on tuberculosis. Under the personal direction of Mrs. Cleveland the house was slightly remodeled, the porch being arranged so that six beds could be put upon it, while fourteen beds were put in the interior. These quarters were set apart for girls, accommodations for twenty boys being provided in an open air camp a hundred feet long near the cottage.

It is the idea of the preventorium to give such speedy relief that the patients may be turned away cured after four months or so of treatment. While the institution is now cramped for space, it is hoped that by next summer sufficient funds will have been received to permit enlarging the accommodations so as to treat 400 patients at one time.

Persian Perfumes.

The records left by the Phoenicians, Assyrians and ancient Persians show that among all those nations the use of perfumes was very common.

Dickens' Burial.

Dickens was buried in Westminster abbey in the presence of only about a dozen people. His funeral was practically a secret one. This was by his own wish, for in his will he expressly stated, "I emphatically direct that I be buried in an inexpensive, unostentatious and strictly private manner."

Rubber Plants.

The trees and shrubs which produce rubber grow in a narrow belt of the world, within 5 degrees north and south of the equator.

Microscopic Life.

The first organized living forms are extremely minute and can only be recognized by powerful microscopes. A filtered infusion of hay, allowed to stand for two or three days, will literally swarm with living things, many of them not exceeding the forty-thousandth part of an inch in diameter. And yet, minute as these animalculae are, they are thoroughly alive. They dart about and digest, shooting out their jellylike substance to seize their food.

"Caught Cold."

Had a Distressing, Tickling Sensation In The Throat.

Mr. Albert MacPhee, Chignecto Mines, N.S., writes: "In Oct., 1908, I caught cold by working in water, and had a very bad cough and that distressing, tickling sensation in my throat so that I could not sleep at night, and my lungs were so very sore I had to give up work. Our doctor gave me medicine but it did me no good so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup and by the time I had used two bottles I was entirely cured. I am always recommending it to my friends."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup combines the potent healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with other absorbent, expectorant and soothing medicines of recognized worth and is absolutely harmless, prompt and safe for the cure of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Croup, Sore Throat, Pain or Tightness in the Chest, and all Throat and Lung Troubles.

There are many imitations of "Dr. Wood's" so beware and get the genuine when you ask for it.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25 cents. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Canada's senate consists of eighty-seven members, nominated for life by the governor general. They must all be thirty or over and possess at least $4,000 worth of property. They are paid $2,500 per annum.

Being Into a Safer Business.

It was Cassidy's first morning as newspaper carrier. From side to side of the avenue he hurried, dropping the moist-sheets in vestibules and running them in the space between the door and sill. Finally he came to a house that was separated from the sidewalk by an urn studded yard. Cassidy opened the iron gate and walked up the stone path. He knelt in the vestibule and started running the paper under the door. An upper window was raised, and a woman's voice called:

"Is that you, Harry? You are awful late. I hear the milk carts rattling."

Cassidy thought it best to remain quiet. The voice continued:

"You needn't think I'm coming down at such an hour! The idea of you, a married man, coming home at such a time! Lost your key, as usual? Well, catch this one."

A heavy piece of brass shot two stories. There was a heavy fall, and the vestibule resembled a press room.

Some one found Cassidy smoking his pipe in the "accident ward."

"Going back to the carrier route?" they asked.

"Niver once more," responded Cassidy. "Ol'm goin' back to wur-ruk in th' quarry. Thor's no fallin' kaes thor, only dynomited rocks."—Chicago News

As Expanded.

A diminutive specimen of juvenile femininity ycleptMiss Muffet had placed herself in a sitting posture upon an article of household furniture ordinarily termed an ottoman or hassock, ministering to the gratification of her gustatory organs by ingurgitating the coagulated portion of bovine lacteal fluid mingled with the watery serum of the same which remains after the coagulated portion has been segregated and withdrawn.

Happening to glance downward, she observed that a specimen of the genus aranelda, class arachnida, remarkable for its ability to produce filaments of extraordinary tenuity from its own interior, had taken a position upon the ottoman or hassock in immediate proximity to her.

Which, totally unexpected incident aroused her apprehension to such an extent that she immediately, not to say precipitately, arose from her sitting posture and departed from the locality, leaving the intruder in undisputed possession of the apartment.—Chicago Tribune.

An Easy Job.

In antebellum days Colonel Moore of Kentucky owned a large number of slaves. One day one of the field hands, named Jupe, was guilty of some negligence and was sent to the woods at once to cut down and split up a black gum tree, practically an impossible task. Jupe cut down the tree and labored hard to split the tough wood, but in vain. In the meantime a thunderstorm came up, and Jupe sought refuge under a brush heap. Directly the lightning struck a large poplar near by, splitting it into kindling wood. After the storm had passed Jupe crawled out from his place of security and after taking a careful look at the remains of the poplar tree, which were scattered all over the woods, said: "Mr. Lightnin', I wish you had just tried yo' han' on dis black gum. Any blame fool can split a poplar!"—Cleveland Leader.

TOOK "FRUIT-A-TIVES" JUST IN TIME

184 CHAUDIERE ST., HULL, QUE.—December 24th, 1909.

"For the past twelve years, I had painful attacks of Dyspepsia. Finally in March, 1908, I suffered such tortures that I was compelled to stay in bed. I could not digest my food and everything I ate caused the most agonizing pain in my stomach. I also had a fearful attack of Constipation and at times, I had no movement of the bowels for two weeks. My feet were constantly cold. Three doctors attended me for two years and gave me all kinds of medicines but did me no good. My weight came down to only 80 pounds and every one thought I was going to die. Finally I had the good fortune to buy "Fruit-a-tives" and as soon as I began to take them, I felt better. I persisted in the treatment and to my great joy and to the astonishment of my friends, I improved. Now I feel very well, weigh 115 pounds and this is more than I ever weighed, even before my illness. I attribute my cure solely and entirely to "Fruit-a-tives" and can never praise them too much for they saved my life. To all who suffer from Dyspepsia and Constipation, I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" as being a miraculous remedy."

MADAME ANDREW STAFFORD.

MADAME ANDREW STAFFORD

When you read such a letter, you think that "Fruit-a-tives" is indeed a wonderful remedy, yet the action of "Fruit-a-tives" is so simple that a child can understand it. "Fruit-a-tives" is made from concentrated and intensified fruit juice and the finest nerve tonics, and acts directly on the liver, causing sufficient bile to flow, which regulates the bowels and cures Constipation. "Fruit-a-tives" also acts on the stomach, producing an abundance of gastric juice and so strengthens the stomach muscles that complete digestion is assured. "Fruit-a-tives" also regulates kidneys and skin, thus purifying the blood and building up the whole system. Without exaggeration, it may be stated that "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Constipation. 50c a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. An Encouraging Message

I have a message of hope and good cheer, of encouragement and inspiration to every suffering woman. I have endured the torture due to female troubles and the consequent despondency and mental agony almost to the point of despair, and I have been restored from this condition to a state of vigorous health, and to the happy, exhilarating frame of mind which accompanies physical well being. This change has been brought about wholly by the use of ORANGE LILY.

In addition I have had the privilege and pleasure of inducing multitudes of other suffering women to give ORANGE LILY a trial, and have received thousands of enthusiastic acknowledgments of the blessings it has brought to them. The following is a sample:

Truro, N. S., April 5, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah,—Your very kind letter was received yesterday. In reply to your question about my health, I am thankful to say that I am very well. As I have never given you a statement of my case you may be interested in it.

For several years I have suffered untold agony. This suffering was continuous, but I would have violent attacks every few weeks, each attack lasting several days. The first Sunday in November, I felt the pain increasing and so did not go to prayers. The rest of the family did go, and soon after the forcing down pains seized me and I had to remain on the floor until their return. I was in great pain all night and was very sick for a whole week.

Then Mrs. L. came to see me and told me of your wonderful medicine. I got my husband to send for it right away, as I was too sick to write myself. (My doctor could do nothing for me.) I have used 5 boxes of ORANGE LILY, have had three months of good rest, and am now well, never better in my life. I have not had the old pains since. I often ask my husband if it is myself that is going around and doing my own work. I can scarcely believe it. It brings tears of joy to my eyes. I could shout it to all the world. I cannot speak enough in its praise.

Your friend, MRS. E. H. F.

Receiving, as I do, dozens of such reports each day, I feel impelled to make known to my suffering sisters the merits of ORANGE LILY. It differs from other so-called remedies in that it is not taken internally. It is a strictly local treatment, and is applied directly to the affected organs. Its curative elements are absorbed into the congested tissues, expelling the stagnant foreign matter which has been irritating the membrane and oppressing the nerves, and a growing feeling of physical and mental relief is noticeable almost from the start. It is a positive, scientific remedy, and even if you use no more than the Free Trial treatment you will be very materially benefited.

FREE TRIAL OFFER

I want every reader of this, who suffers in any way from painful monthly periods, irregularities, leucorrhœa, inflammation or congestion of the womb, pains in the back, etc., to send me their addresses, and I will forward at once, without charge, 10 days' treatment. If your case is not far advanced it may entirely cure you, and in any event it will do you much good. I am so earnest in making this statement, and so positive that it is true, that I trust every sufferer who reads this notice will take advantage of my offer and get cured at home, without a doctor's bill. Address, enclosing 3 stamps, MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont. 9

PETERBOROUGH, January 29th, 1910

W. H. HILL, Esq.,

Manager Sun Life Assurance Co., of Canada

PETERBOROUGH, ONT.

DEAR SIR,—About five years ago my late husband took out $1,000.00 insurance in The Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada, on which he only paid the first three premiums. Shortly after his death, which occurred on the 6th inst., although I was under the impression that his policy had lapsed, I called at your office to inquire if anything could be done whereby we might get something out of it. You can imagine my surprise and genuine gratitude to learn that, owing to your non-forfeiture privilege, the policy was still in force at his death, and that I was entitled to the full thousand dollars, less only the two unpaid premiums and interest.

This seems to me such extraordinary and generous treatment that I wish to add my expression of most sincere thanks and appreciation to the many others your Company must receive.

I also wish to acknowledge and thank you for your courtesy and promptness in procuring for me a cheque to-day covering the policy, and to state that if my endorsation of the already mentioned feature of your policies is of value you are quite at liberty to use it.

Gratefully yours,

MARGARET LONG,

POULTRY ON THE FARM

From Farm and Dairy.

Wilbur Bennett, Peterboro Co., Ont.

The greatest success can be made of poultry in connection with the average farm. Poultry can be made more profitable than it generally is. In order that Farm and Dairy readers may inform themselves on how to secure some of these possible extra profits, is the purpose of this article.

The average farmer unlike the poultry specialist is not dependent upon poultry for his living. It is therefore not so easy to put the farmer out of the business. He does not need to keep so many hens. From 50 to 100 are sufficient for the average farm and if properly cared for, they will give more profit than three times that number that are indifferently looked after. For this number of birds, there is no need of resorting to artificial means of incubation. Through being able to avoid artificial incubation, the farmer has the greatest advantage over the specialist, who requires chicks in great numbers and therefore must hatch by artificial means which if continued injudiciously lowers the vitality of the stock and brings about the failure of the specialist's business.

BREED FROM HEN-HATCHED CHICKS

Those farmers who use the incubator will do well to follow the advice "Never breed from a fowl that has been hatched by machine." It may not seem to make any difference for the time being, if one starts with good vigorous stock; but in the end, failure is inevitable, therefore make broilers, roasters or laying stock of your machine hatched chicks, but never use any of them for breeding stock. The breed to hatch is more a matter of if one procures the best possible strain choice than anything else, that is, of their favorite. I would advise one of the medium breeds for an all purpose fowl, meat, eggs, etc.

The feed for the farmer's fowl must largely depend on that which is available. On most farms, there is generally a lot of food that would be wasted, were it not for the fowl. Wheat is by all means the best of grains; corn is good for a change. Fowls also require green food. This can be supplied in the form of clover and roots. Meat in some form is also required. Green bone is preferable. Grit shell and plenty of water should be before them at all times. Whole grain should be fed in a litter; ground feed should be fed in a dry mash.

HOUSING AND PROFITS

Hens do not require an expensive house. The house should be dry, free from draughts and provided with windows of glass or cotton on the south side, these to let in plenty of sunlight and fresh air. A straw loft proves very efficient in keeping the house free from moisture

The profits to be derived from a business depends much upon the quality of the article produced and the market obtained. Strictly new-laid eggs, those that are not over at least a week old, shipped to a reliable dealer in Montreal or Toronto, in case lots should average at least 25 cents a dozen the year round. Where a single producer cannot fill a case in the desired time, it is well to adopt the co-operative system with some other producer in order to make up the required number. Broilers should fetch 30 to 40 cents a pound in May or June; good roasters or fowl 10 to 15 cents a pound., later in the season. Where one batches and raises his chicks by the natural means, the cockerels reared with the pullets will more than defray the expenses of the whole brood, thus leaving the pullets in the fall a clean sheet for their account when they will begin to fill the egg basket and if properly cared for make profit for their owner.

HOW TO SECURE FIRST-CLASS SEED OATS

From Farm and Dairy.

Henry Stubbs, Peterboro Co., Ont.

To secure best results from good seed, it is required that the best of ground, prepared in the best way be ready to receive the seed. One cannot receive the best results unless his land is well supplied with humus and nitrogen and the other main elements, potash and phosphoric acid, necessary for plant growth. Worn out land will not give the best of seed for the next year's seed, no matter how good the seed you sow. We shall take for granted that there is on the average farm, one or two fields in a richer state than the rest of the farm; this is where to sow choice grain for the next years seed.

Then what about the working of that field? Anyone travelling through the country in seed time, and watching the work given in preparing the seed bed, will see that on about 75 per cent. of the farms, all the fields receive is a stroke of the cultivator; then it is seeded and harrowed. To complete the job the stones are pressed out of sight by a roller. This puts the seed in the land in good shape—at least some are of this opinion.

Perhaps I am knocking too hard at our own door but the practice as I have stated is the rule, not the exception. We have heard and read time and again about the different ways of working our land to increase crops, but very few follow those ways. This is another question however to the one on fanning mill selection, that I am to write about, but it is of very great importance for if one does not strive to grow good seed, the fanning mill will have a hard job to grade it.

To the person who tries his best to have the seed bed in the best of shape, then I say by all means, "sow the best. How can we get the best? There are several ways, but the one easiest for the farmer, is through the best use of the fanning mill. Instead of just blowing out the dust, chaff and straw by passing the grain once through the mill, repeat it three or more times. Then notice the difference.

If it is seed oats you are cleaning, after passing the grain through several times, take the wheat screen and place it where the riddle was, next the hopper. It will be about one and a half feet too long, but tack on a shingle on each side to prevent oats from going over the side. Then before you turn them through shut off all the wind, place a box at end of screen to receive the big oats as they run over it, while the small ones drop through. Do not allow too much feed, nor give the screen very much slope. If you clean your oats in this way you will be surprised at the excellency of the sample that you will have for seed.

DEMONSTRATION FARMS

From Farm and Dairy.

In North Dakota and Minnesota, demonstration farms have proved to be a most popular means of carrying expert instruction to farmers on their farms. The work was started in 1906 with six demonstration farms in different sections of the state of North Dakota, sufficient funds to establish and conduct them having been placed at the disposal of the State Experiment Station by the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railways—J. J. Hill when it is willed to be personal. The State Legislature, the following year, provided funds to start six more. Now there are 20 demonstration farms in North Dakota. The State of Minnesota has now taken up the work and this year will have 19 demonstration farms in operation on which during the entire forthcoming season the farmers will be instructed in the latest and most modern methods in cropping the tracts set aside.

It is a matter of common knowledge that individual farmers here and there in various sections of the country have in a short period of years doubled the quantity of crops from their land and this has not been done by increasing the area under cultivation. Nor has it been done at the expense of fertility. The quality and quantity of the crop has been increased and at the same time the land has become more fertile for further production. How was it done? Merely through the use of selected seed and properly prepared soil, a suitable rotation of crops and protection against insects, weeds and disease.

These private farms are not always accessible to those who would go and learn. These farms and the methods practiced thereon are not public property, and those who might benefit from visits to them would feel more or less hesitancy in availing themselves of such opportunity. With demonstration farms more or less under Departmental control, it would be quite different. Anyone would be free to go and take advantage of the practical object lessons that would be available, hence the value of demonstration farms.

HOW TO CARE FOR HARNESS

From Farm and Dairy.

It often happens that a farmer is obliged to use the same harness on different horses. If he makes the change in a hurry 10 chances to one he does not readjust the harness to the second horse. If a harness is taken from a large horse and then used on a small horse without readjustment there is not only danger of injuring the beast, but the harness is sure to suffer as well.

Another thing that is very injurious to the harness is to pile the heavy parts on top of the bridle after it has been hung on the hook. The safest thing is to have a separate hook for the bridle, for this is the part of the harness that should be cared for best. A stranger always notices this first, and a bridle that is fastened together with pieces of wire advertises the driver as a shiftless fellow.

The ideal way to care for harness is to build a harness room where the leather can be kept free from moisture. A good way to build this is to line it with building paper. There should be plenty of room. If it is impossible to have a harness closet, the pegs should be as far away from the manure as possible, for the gases and dampness arising from manure piles rots the leather faster than anything I know of.

OIL HARNESS TWICE A YEAR

Every harness should be well oiled at least twice a year, so that it will be in shape to give the service that is expected of it. The oil works its way to the surface, and when the harness is exposed to a rain this oil is washed away. If the oil is not removed from time to time the leather will soon dry out and crack.

I don't believe in washing a harness. Washing does little good unless there is soap used in the water, and most soap has lye in it, which is hard on the leather. The oil soaks into the harness much more easily if it is dry than if it is damp. Of course the harness must be cleaned, but this can easily be done without moistening it.—G. H., Middlesex Co., Ont.

MAPLE SUGAR MAKING

From Farm and Dairy.

Mrs. W. Sayer, Wentworth Co., Ont.

Sap in the first place should be strained twice before it is boiled; as it goes into the tank and as it passes to the evaporator. While it boils, take the scum off with a skimmer. If you would have a clear syrup of the highest quality, the syrup should be drawn from the evaporator two or three times a day.

After the syrup is taken off and while still hot, put it through a felt strainer into tin cans holding 20 to 25 gallons and allow it to stand all night. The following morning pour it carefully into pails. If the evaporator is used, settlings do not appear until near the end of the season.

We clarify all our syrup in a boiler filled over half full. While the syrup is cold in the boiler, we add three-quarters of a cup of cold milk. This brings the scum to the top, and before the syrup starts to boil it is skimmed off. The syrup is then strained through plain white flannel and is ready for use.

NA-DRU-CO

Reliability

When you buy clothes or groceries, meat or furniture, you can judge for yourself the quality of what you are getting.

When you buy Medicinal or Toilet Preparations you buy on faith. Tooth-paste may look good—have an agreeable flavor—whiten the teeth beautifully—yet eventually destroy them. A medicinal preparation may be pleasant to take or very much the opposite without giving you any clue as to whether it is a safe and effective remedy.

No one cares to risk experiments along these lines—everyone wants to know for a certainty that the medicinal and toilet preparations he buys have been compounded by expert chemists and are backed by responsible men.

The Law's Protection

The laws of every Province in Canada, expressing the will of the people, protect you so far as doctors' prescriptions are concerned by demanding that these must be dispensed by physicians or duly qualified druggists.

NA-DRU-CO TRADE N D C G MARK
ONLY OUR PRODUCTS BEAR THIS TRADE MARK

To protect you in the matter of household remedies and toilet articles we have brought out the NA-DRU-CO line of about 125 Medicinal and Toilet Preparations. Each of these preparations is compounded by our own expert chemists, and is guaranteed by one of the largest wholesale drug firms in the world, the National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited.

The formulæ from which these NA-DRU-CO preparations are made are the gems from the formula books of the 21 wholesale drug houses now united in the "National". Each formula has undergone years of study and practical tests and has demonstrated its superiority for the particular use for which it is intended.

The ingredients used in NA-DRU-CO preparations are the best and purest that we, the largest buyers of drugs in Canada, can procure. Nothing is left undone to make NA-DRU-CO preparations absolutely reliable.

The phenomenal demand for Na-Dru-Co Tooth Paste, for example, proves that people appreciate the scientifically compounded tooth paste which keeps the mouth and teeth in perfect condition.

Ask Your Physician or Druggist

To put this absolute reliability of the NA-DRU-CO line beyond doubt or question, we are prepared to furnish to your physician or druggist, on request, a complete list of the ingredients in any NA-DRU-CO preparation. Ask these men, who are men of standing in your community, and in whom you place implicit confidence, all about NA-DRU-CO remedies.

Moreover, if after trying any article bearing the NA-DRU-CO Trade Mark you are not entirely satisfied, return it to the druggist from whom you bought it and he will hand back your money.

If your druggist hasn't the particular NA-DRU-CO preparation you ask for in stock he can get it for you within two days from our nearest wholesale branch.

HOW TO CONTROL MOISTURE

From Farm and Dairy.

Moisture has been talked over, worked over, worked in and worked out, also paid out in fines for violating the 16 per cent. limit. What I wish we could do is to arrive at some system with which we could all get 15 to 15¼ per cent, with no danger of exceeding the limit or hurting the texture of our butter. While we know the incorporation of moisture in our butter to be dangerous and should be left entirely alone, the temptation is too great, we cannot help trifling with it. It is like the women—we know that they are dangerous and to be left alone, yet we cannot help sticking around them until we finally get hooked up with one of them for life, and we will get hooked up for some time by the Government if we are not careful how much we trifle with the incorporation of moisture in our butter. Unless we are careful and sure it is best to leave moisture alone and work for quality and a better raw material for there is a great field for work and experiment. Quality first, then after we have obtained a perfect mark or near it, we can consider these other things.

As we are forced to meet strong competition and as the other fellow can by securing 15 to 15 1-2 per cent. moisture pay more than we can, it is up to us. I have tried my hand at getting near the legal standard of moisture, 15¼ per cent. I worked and experimented and tried out different systems and suggestions from time to time and had lots of trouble at times, too. My first experience in getting moisture was an accident and the amount of butter turned out from the same amount of cream I usually had was so much larger that I began studying and experimenting, sometimes with good results and sometimes with bad. At that time we had heard little of the moisture test or the systems for sale of incorporating moisture. I knew not how much moisture my butter contained. Later I secured a Gray's Moisture test and since then I have used most of the rest.

There are a number of ways of incorporating moisture, but I want to tell you, brother buttermakers, that you do not want to try them without you have a good moisture test and test each churning so that you know where you are at all the time. It is not good policy to trifle with the Revenue Department. One buttermaker told me he had a hard time keeping under the 16 per cent. moisture limit without using any methods of trying for moisture. I can say I never had any trouble that way. I heard of one way of getting a large over run, both moisture and curd; that is, to draw off one-half the buttermilk after butter breaks, add warm water and churn until butter gathers in large lumps, then put rolls in motion and work as many times as you wish.

Another way to secure moisture is to churn exhaustively or so butter comes in about one hour to one hour and a quarter in firm, hard granules, then add warm water and work the butter in the water until you have the desired amount of moisture content. The butter having gathered in a firm hard body first will return to the same after standing. I churn at a temperature so as to get an exhaustive churning then add one and one-half tubs of fine, crushed ice and churn five minutes longer. Then you have butter in firm hard granules and have incorporated all the water necessary and more as a test from these monocles of butter will show them to contain 17 to 18 1-2 per cent. and even 14½ per cent. after standing over night. So if you do not work it out again and have a quick dissolving flaky salt and wet it a little so it will not take water from your butter, you will have plenty of moisture without trying any moisture systems, and you will not have an excessive amount of curd or salt.

My advice to you brother buttermakers is to be sure you are right and within the limit, and unless you are sure, leave moisture entirely alone.

TO CONTINUE WHEY BUTTER MANUFACTURE

From Farm and Dairy.

From the manufacture of whey butter at the Warsaw factory during the past season a sum of $700 was realized. At the annual meeting held recently the patrons seemed pleased to have had the butter so handy and fresh for summer needs. The demand for it among the patrons last year was so keen that it was scarce in the later months.

The whey was not all separated, as the capacity of the tanks for holding it on some Mondays was scarcely sufficient. The skimmed whey gave satisfaction. Some who used it could see no difference in the results of feeding it from previous seasons. It was therefore decided to continue to manufacture on much the same basis as during 1909. The butter was of satisfactory quality to unprejudiced minds. Its manufacture did not become the means of causing a higher yield, as the fat in the whey was, if anything, below normal, nor should it increase in an honest handling.

The causes of high yields are to be found in poorly cared for milk, which causes the process of manufacture to be hurried, which cannot be done without serious waste in the retention of the casein and fat. It seems unfortunate that these occasions of greatest loss usually occur on Mondays, when the whey is so abundant and all the work inclined to push, or the fat waste could be recovered greatly by separating the whey. The waste casein, however, must still go to make eight-cent pork, instead of eleven-cent cheese. Much of the milk delivered at our factory is now kept almost perfectly, but we still get a can or two for each vat in hand, which gives the injurious hurry and loss to all.

Mr. E. Hawthorne was again elected salesman and treasurer for the patrons. Mr. Chas. Calder did splendid work in the manufacture of both butter and cheese and the entire season's work was quite gratifying to all concerned.

The dairy industry furnishes a very helpful source of income, as there is a good deal of land in this locality, not so good for crops, but which can be grazed cheaply. The good land can of course be used for growing corn, roots and hay to tide over the poor grazing periods. We have altogether too few silos, but the few we have are appreciated by their owners. Our dairy interests would be benefitted by more silos.—Stewart R. Payne, Secretary for Warsaw factory.

Just A Word to The Front Row

If every man and every woman would begin now to use Newbro's Herpicide and teach the children to use it, the front row of the next generation would not be bald headed and none of the ladies would be wearing false hair.

Falling hair means trouble. The dandruff germ is there and will in a short time ruin the best head of hair that ever grew.

Too many people, finding they need a hair remedy, allow themselves to be duped into buying and using something said to be just as good or very much like Newbro's Herpicide.

Why do it? Such a remedy is but an imitation, a substitute. Herpicide is the original dandruff germ destroyer. Insist on having genuine Herpicide and take nothing else.

Newbro's Herpicide saves the hair

The results from the very beginning are often astonishing. The hair will cease to fall and instead of being dull and dead, takes on the sparkle and luxuriance of true hair beauty.

Herpicide possesses a delicate fragrance which appeals strongly to persons of taste and refinement.

The Herpicide Co., Dept. L., Windsor, Ont., willl send a nice sample and booklet to any address upon receipt of ten cents in stamps or silver.

One dollar bottles are sold and guaranteed by all druggists. Applications may be had at the better barber shops and hair dressers. See Window Display at

Here's the Truth, Madam, About Brown Breads

A prejudice, you know, is an imaginary truth entirely surrounded by falsehood.

Which reminds you of the Brown Bread prejudice, the Whole Wheat idea and the Food Fads.

If, Madam, you will kindly introduce us to the brilliant individual who started the fallacy that Brown Bread is sounder, more substantial, more sustaining than White Bread made, say from FIVE ROSES flour, we will gladly undertake to put him right.

For, you see, we deny the allegation and, if necessary, would face the—er—"alligator".

This is the how of it, Mistress Housewife.

Brown or "Graham" Bread is made from Graham Flour.

Which, of course, is just common flour with the Bran added—lots of it, from 25 to 100 per cent. maybe.

Now, Bran is nothing but the woody fibrous husks of the wheat berry which are utterly indigestible in the human food tube, and therefore absolutely useless as nutrients.

Just about as nourishing, you see, as powdered brick bats: might as well eat an orange plus the skin, a banana plus the peel, a cocoanut plus the shell.

* * * *

So that, Madam, if YOUR brown bread contains 25 to 80 per cent. bran, worse than useless as food, it's a very costly fad.

Aren't you paying too much for your whistle?

Then think that white bread made from FIVE ROSES flour contains no waste at all, being 100 per cent. pure nutrition.

Moreover, the sharp, horny particles in bran-charged flour (Graham) tend to irritate the alimentary tract.

Witness the result of many scientific tests:

"Any attempt to eat brown bread three "times daily without intermission way "quickly resulted in setting up a diar- "rhoea with well-marked disturbance "of the stomach. This was one of the "many valuable contributions to science "of Sir Lauder Brunton who established "the fact of this cumulative irritating "effect and even gave to the resultant "irritation the title of "BROWN "BREAD GASTRITIS".

* * * *

We tell YOU this, Madam, lest you lend too ready an ear to the calumnies against White Flour.

For we make FIVE ROSES, and from it YOU can make bread infinitely more substantial, sounder, tastier, more vitalizing, more digestible and healthful than the very best of brown or whole wheat breads.

Ay, Madam, and infinitely cleaner—for it's impossible to purify the low-grade flour and bran in brown bread like we clean FIVE ROSES.

FIVE ROSES breadstuffs will leave you better off both in health and pocket-book.

Our word on it.

THE BUSINESS FARMER

From Farm and Dairy.

A. Hector Cutten, Colchester Co., N.S.

Few things attract the eye of a traveller quicker or make a more lasting impression than a well cultivated farm. As one passes the convenient and pleasantly located farm house, the well cared for outbuildings, the up-to-date model barn, well painted, the nicely plowed fields with furrows straight, even and true; the root fields so well cultivated that weeds have met with extermination, he admires them. He also takes stock of the well fed, well cared for flocks and herds in the pastures, the good, neat, substantial fences, or, as in many districts now, no fences at all, but grain or hay growing to the wheel track, and naturally says "This is good farming; this is improving the land; this is making the world better."

THE OTHER PLACE.

As the traveller passes along he comes to another residence. The house shows signs of neglect; it has never seen paint—if it has it is past the memory of any who know it; the barns have loose boards; the roof is leaky; if there is a window in the stable it has an old salt bag stuck in it for want of glass; the gates are off the hinges, or hanging by one; the fences are lined with briers, thistles and weeds of all kinds; the potatoes are choked with weeds and the potato bugs are in their glory undisturbed; the highway in front is lined with apple-tree branches, old boots and barrels, empty tin cans and long-nosed hogs. The traveller does not call this farming. He does not call it anything. He does not know what to call it. He merely wonders who lives—pardon—stays there, and drives on. And mistake not, the traveller seldom passes through a farming district without comment. He criticises freely, he condemns the latter picture, and is just as ready to bestow praise on the former.

In a city every merchant, tradesman or professional man hangs out a sign to tell who he is, or the nature of his business. In the country it is different. There are no flaring signboards over the farm gateway to announce that farming is carried on there. It is not necessary. The farm and everything thereon proclaims to the world the nature of the business conducted there. But there are a lot of so-called farmers who need a signboard. Webster's definition of "farming" is, "to cultivate" and of "cultivate," "to improve."

A GIGANTIC ANNUAL WASTE.

Are we "cultivating" and "improving" as we should? "Careful inquiry and observation extending over the entire state forces the inevitable conclusion that as much nutriment in the form of fodder is wasted every year as actually finds its way into the digestive systems of the farm animals of the state." Such is the report of an experimental farm director of one of the Western states made some few years ago.

Let us pause for a moment and consider the significance of this statement, if true. It is easy for the unthinking farmer to dispose of the statement by saying it is not true, especially so as regards Nova Scotia. But if we were to count in dollars and cents the mismanagement in dairy, beef, sheep or in mixed farming, and the unproductive acres, it would amaze us what an array of figures would be footed up against us.

There seems to be enough advice afloat from good and reliable sources, but we are slow about accepting new methods that take us out of the old ruts that have proved good in their day, but are entirely inadequate to the needs of the modern business man—did that cause a jolt? The farmer is not generally known as a business man, and no doubt to some the term seems far-fetched. We say a farmer is a business man when he accepts and adopts new, approved plans and methods that will pay, along with good business methods that have already been in vogue for many years on the farm. He buys as cheap as he can and sells to as good advantage as possible. His word is as good as a bond, and his advice and influence is respected in the whole community. Such a man is a good business man (farmer). The farmer is to blame for this distinction between men engaged in mercantile pursuits and those engaged in tilling the soil. The difference is only imaginary and the only way to remedy the imagination is by not only not "looking backward," but upward and onward, in earning the title and wearing it with a professional pride.

UNCONSCIOUS DISTINCTION.

We listened a few weeks ago to an eloquent sermon by an able and devout divine. In one part of his discourse he remarked: "Whether the man be a business man, a farmer or, etc., etc." It was said unconsciously and unintentionally and in all probability passed unnoticed by the entire congregation, and I believe that one-quarter of the short course students attending the agricultural college at the time were worshipping there that evening.

Many farmers spend more money every year for cigars, tobacco and whiskey than they do for books, farm papers and periodicals. Then who is to blame if the farmer is not generally known as a good business man? A judicious investment in this latter line will bring in far greater returns than one may at first expect. No man can make a success at anything nowadays unless he invests in printers' ink, and the amount of work accomplished in his toil will be far greater for the moments spent in papers and books devoted to farm work.

PAY THE LAND ITS DUE.

There are lots of farmers who do not pay the land for the crop it gives them year after year. They take all they can, but never put back a cent's worth in the way of fertilizer. Then they wonder why the land doesn't grow as good crops as formerly. The great wonder is that the land does as well that has labored so long for not even board and clothes. You may steal $10 from the land in the spring, but it will cost you $20 by the fall, and the sooner we are honest and pay what we owe in this line, as in any other, the better.

Those who are lukewarm in their own interests will find it far more congenial if they would take of their coats occasionally and help sustain the institute work, the farmers' clubs, the exhibitions or any other means by which the farmer may gain knowledge without the slow, tedious, sometimes expensive "actual experience." Every business farmer should be progressive and alive to the demand of the times; by so doing he can bring up the standard of the farmer, and be able to wear with distinction and pride the title of "a good business man."

EARLY CHICKENS PAY BEST

From Farm and Dairy.

The hen on your farm pays. You have no doubt about it. You don't give her much attention, do you? Well, don't it strike you that a thing that pays when receiving little or no attention, must be a gold mine when properly looked after? If you have never thought of this matter, do so now.

Suppose you batch a batch of chickens on March 15th, and keep them warm for a month and a half. They have not cost you more than a cent each for feed and are good lumps of chicks. Now, these chicks are large enough to eat any kind of feed and the grass is the greenest and food the most plentiful just at this time of the year; as a result the chicks grow very fast, in fact twice as fast as summer hatched chicks. When the harvest arrives they are full grown, and if given the run of the fields, will fatten with no other attention. They are ready to sell and have cost you the nearest to nothing of anything on the farm. Chickens raised in this way bring from 60 cents to $1.00 a pair, without any more trouble than putting them in a box and taking them alive to your dealer.

Now you know that it is the exception to have a pullet which is hatched after May 10th lay before the next spring. Did you ever ask yourself why? This is the reason—they do not attain their full growth before the cold weather comes, and then the food you give them goes to keep them warm. They have not had time to attain the laying habit, and if this is not attained before the cold weather sets in, it will not be before the following spring. It costs a lot to feed a hen that does not lay. You might just as well feed one that does. The pullets raised early will start to lay in October, at latest, and if kept warm and clean, will lay all winter, and it is then that eggs are the highest price.

SPRING BLOOD IS BAD BLOOD

How to Get New Health and New Strength in the Spring.

Even the most robust find the winter months trying to their health. Confinement indoors in often overheated and nearly always badly ventilated rooms — in the home, the office, the shops and the school—taxes the vitality of even the strongest. The blood becomes thin and watery, or clogged with impurities. Sometimes you get up in the morning just as tired as when you went to bed. Some people have headaches and a feeling of languor; others are low spirited and nervous; still others have pimples and skin eruptions. These are all spring symptoms that the blood is out of order. Many people rush to purgative medicines in the spring. This is a mistake. You can't cure these troubles with a medicine which gallops through your system, and is sure to leave you weaker still. What you need to give you health and strength in the spring is a tonic medicine and the one always reliable tonic and blood-builder is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills not only banish spring ills but guard you against the more serious ailments that follow, such as anaemia, nervous debility, indigestion, rheumatism and other diseases due to bad blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new, rich blood which strengthens every nerve, every organ and every part of the body. Try this medicine this spring and you will have strength and energy to resist the torrid heat of the coming summer.

Mr. Geo. W. Johnson, Hemford, N. S, says: "A couple of years ago when I came home from a lumbering camp where I had been employed my blood was in such a condition that my whole body broke out in boils—some six and eight in a nest These were so painful that I was confined to the house and for three months was treated by my family doctor. I got no better; in fact the sores began to eat into my flesh, and at times were so offensive that I refused to sit at the table with my family. A friend asked me one day why I did not give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial and I decided to do so. I got six boxes and before they were all gone the sores began to disappear and my system was much strengthened. I continued using the pills until I had taken twelve boxes when every boil and sore had disappeared, and I have since enjoyed the very best of health.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PETERBOROUGH SATURDAY MARCH 26 1910

PETERBOROUGH TO GET THE BIG HARDWARE CONVENTION

Niagara Falls, Toronto and Guelph Were All After the Plum But Peterborough's Deputation Was Successful in Bringing the Huge Gathering This Way for Next February---Between 600 and 700 Delegates.

Peterborough has gained the big Hardwaremen's Convention. The deputation which waited upon the Executive of the Association at its meeting in Toronto yesterday was entirely successful in its object and Peterborough will be the next meeting point of the Association in February of next year.

The deputation from here consisted of Ald. Duffus, chairman of the Reception Committee, Ald. Phelan, of the same committee and Mr. Harry P. Morgan of the Peterborough Hardware Company.. They had stiff opposition in their task as Niagara Falls, Toronto, and Guelph, were all after the convention, and made strenous efforts to capture the plum.

The Executive of the Association held a meeting in the Queen's Hotel yesterday to settle the question of where the next convention was to be held, and the Peterborough deputation waited upon the meeting. They were given an attentive hearing and strongly pointed out the advantages offered by Peterborough for such a purpose. They pointed out that this city could give the required accommodation as regards hotels and halls, that it was splendidly situated geographically, for a convention, and that in every way it was adapted for the purposes of the Association.

At the conclusion of their remarks the Executive promised that they would deal with the subject at once, and the deputation withdrew. In a short time they were called back and officially notified that the convention would meet here next year.

The gathering in this city means a big thing for Peterborough. It is expected that between six and seven hundred delegates will be here for the convention. The various wholesale firms and manufacturers of hardware articles will all be represented and will make exhibitions of their wares. This exhibition is one of the big features of the gathering.

DRUMMOND'S BRIDE ALSO WEDS WITHOUT KNOWING IT

Now She Wants to Get a Divorce and Marry Her Former Sweetheart, a Young Clergyman.

A MATRIMONIAL MIXUP

Special to The Examiner.

St. Louis, March 26th.—The second Mrs. Charles R. Drummond, formerly Miss Charlotte J. Bente, whom Drummond, a member of themillionaire family of that name, says his subconscious self married while his real self was unaware of the ceremony has left St. Louis to escape the psychic influences which her relatives say controlled her as well as Drummond at the time of the midnight wedding. A relative said to-day that the young woman had gone to the home of an uncle in Barnes, Kan., and would remain there until either she or Drummond obtained a divorce. Then, the relative said ,a renewal of her romance of a year ago with a young minister, a former pupil of her father in Concordia Seminary may be expected.

This young minister the Rev. Herman Dubberstein, is stationed at Deerfield in Western Kansas, near the Colorado line. This town is several hundred miles from Barnes, where Mrs. Drummond is visiting.

Within two weeks after her midnight marriage to Drummond, or to Drummond's subconscious self, she wrote to the young minister, telling him o f the marriage, declaring that she was not herself at the time of the ceremony and asking if the minister would forgive her and when she was free would marry her.

The answer telegraphed by the minister was: "Yes, if you go home to your parents; that is the one condition.

BAD KIDNEYS CAUSE OF BLADDER MISERY

Backache and all Distress From Your Out-of-Order Kidneys Will Vanish.

No man or woman here whose kidneys are out of order, or who suffers from backache or bladder misery, can afford to leave Pape's Diuretic untried.

After taking several doses, all pains in the back, sides or loins, rheumatic twinges, nervousness, headache, sleeplessness, inflamed or swollen eyelids, dizziness, tired or worn-out feeling, and other symptoms of clogged, sluggish kidneys simply vanish.

Uncontrollable urination (especially at night), smarting, discoloured water and all bladder misery ends.

The moment you suspect the slightest kidney or bladder disorder, or feel rheumatism pains, don't continue to be miserable or worried, but get a fifty-cent treatment of Pape's Diuretic from your druggist and start taking as directed, with the knowledge that there is no other medicine, at any price, made anywhere else in the world, which is so harmless or will effect so thorough and prompt a cure.

This unusual preparation goes direct to the cause of the trouble, distributing its cleansing, healing and vitalizing influence directly upon the organs and glands affected and completes the cure before you realize it.

A few days' treatment of Pape's Diuretic means clean, healthy, active kidneys; bladder and urinary organs —and you feel fine.

Your physician, pharmacist, banker or any mercantile agency will tell you that Pape, Thompson & Pape, of Cincinnati, is a large and responsible medicine concern, thoroughly worthy of your confidence.

IS SOME EATER

Latest Terrible Turk Does Some Marvellous Gastronomic Feats.

You have heard of prodigious eaters among athletes and wrestlers and I thought that Zbyzsko, the Polish wrestler now on the road with a show, had it all over his rivals in the ability to stow away a big order of food. But a despatch from Boston tells of a marvellous gastronomic feat by Cara Ezet, the lastest Terrible Turk to arrive in this country. This chap is twenty-seven years old and weighs 310 pounds. He says he has the backing of $10,000 for a match with Frank Gotch. It costs about $10 a day to feed him. He supervises the cooking of his food, too. Here is a description of one day's fodder.

For breakfast he eats the yolks of eighteen eggs, eighteen chops, six loaves of bread, and twelve cups of rice pudding. He does not drink tea or coffe. He eats four pounds ofq steak generally for his midday meal, while one night for supper he disposed of forty sandwiches. In a tournament at Constantinople last summer he threw eighteen men in five days, several of his opponents being disabled with broken arms and shoulders because of his enormous strength. He wrestles in his bare feet. He has thrown Mahmout.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The banquet celebrating the close of the membership campaign in the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A. will be held Monday evening next at six o'clock.

All new members with the boys who secured them will be the guests, and as over forty new members have been added, the attendance will be large.

The toast list will not be long so as to allow ample time for those who play basketball in the Peterborough-Toronto game to be ready in time.

RESULTS OF THE EASTER EXAMINATIONS

Florence Gear In "Fluffy Ruffles"

Merry Three Act Musical Comedy is Coming to the Grand on Tuesday Night Next.

How would you like to be no sooner employed in a position that is thoroughly congenial than you are discharged, and through no fault of your own, simply because the men will not keep away from you? This is what happens to "Fluffy Ruffles." Although her patience is often sorely tried, her ingenuity never fails her. She steps right from one engagement to another, her conquests becoming more and more pronounced as the ludicrous dilemmas in which she continues to find herself multiply. There are many new and amusing situations in "Fluffy Ruffles," the merry, three-act musical comedy, which will be presented at the Grand Opera House on Tuesday next, March 29. Clever Florence Gear, sweet of voice, as well as of face and figure, is "Fluffy." Miss Gear's delightful performance of "Marrying Mary" last season accounts for the pleasurable anticipations with which our theatregoers look forward to her appearance here this season in "Fluffy Ruffles." A large company of fun-makers, with the usual complement of pretty girls, is with Miss Gear. The seat sale opened this morning.

HORSE DROWNED

Bobcaygeon, March 24.—Mr. E. J. Broad, baker and confectioner, lost his valuable horse this morning. It appears that Matthew and Alfred Nichols were preparing for their spring trapping and were taking their supplies across Pigeon Lake, and Mr. Broad very kindly loaned them his horse. They had made the trip across with the supplies and Alfred was returning when between Big Island and the main land, probably getting too close to the channel of the river, the horse went through and was drowned. Mr. Nichols made every effort to save the animal, getting in twice himself, but to no avail. The horse was young and very valuable and will be hard to replace.

GAVE LECTURE

His Honour Judge Huycke Spoke on the Holy Grail at St. Luke's Church.

"The Holy Grail" was the subject of an interesting address delivered last evening at St. Luke's church, by his Honour Judge Huycke. There was a large number present and the remarks of the speaker were followed with the closest attention. His Honour referred to the origin and the history of the old legend of the Holy Grail, and imparted a great deal of information of a highly interesting character. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt conducted the opening devotional exercises and introduced the speaker. At the conclusion of the address a hearty vote of thanks was tendered his Honour. Mr. E. A. Peck, in a neat speech, made the motion and Mr. R H. Leary seconded it.

TWO CRIMINAL AND TWO CIVIL CASES BEFORE THE ASSIZES

Robert Henderson Will Stand Trial on a Charge of Murdering Margaret McPherson, Near Norwood---Mr. Justice Riddell Will Preside---Two Parties Suing to Recover Damages From Sawmill Firms, the Result of Accidents

The spring assizes of the High Court open before Mr. Justice Riddell on Monday at one o'clock. There are two criminal cases and two civil actions. Robert Henderson will stand trial on the charge of murdering Margaret McPherson at her home near Norwood on February last. A great deal of interest has been aroused in this trial throughout the surrounding country and the proceedings will be followed closely. The other is a charge of seduction on promise of marriage.

To Recover $3,000.

The first case is that of Edward Foley, of Havelock, who is suing Wm. West, sr., and Wm. West, jr., Portable mill owners, also of Havelock, for $3,000 damages for permanent injuries received while in the employ of the defendants. The plaintiff was on the seventh day of June engaged in operating an edger and was standing beside a machine which he was superintending and operating in the defendants' mill. While so doing, the machinery which operated the carriers drawing the sawdust from under where the plaintiff stood, broke, and a flying piece of the machinery struck the plaintiff a little above the ankle and broke his leg, which was badly hurt and torn, and whereby the plaintiff's foot was permanently injured incurring great pain and expense and preventing him from following his usual occupation. He further claims that the defendants were well aware that the machinery which caused this hurt to the plaintiff was unsafe and unfit for the purposes to which it was put.

The defendants deny each allegation of the claim and state that the accident was due to negligence on the part of the plaintiff. Hall, Medd and Davidson, solicitors for the plaintiff and G. A. Payne, of Campbellford, for the defendants.

For the Loss of an Arm.

Fred Cook, of Trent Bridge, is suing David and Bert Davidson, owners and operators of a saw mill near Oak Lake, in the township of Belmont, to recover $2,000 and costs, damages for the loss of his left hand, while in their employ. The plaintiff was removing the slabs and lumber from the saw which was being operated by Bert Davidson. Without any warning, the defendant, Bert Davidson, reversed the carriage and the plaintiff's left hand was drawn thereby into the saw, and by reason of there being no guard or protection of any kind about the saw the bones, muscles and cords of the hand were severely cut and mangled, so that he is now helpless in that hand and will never be able to use it. He claims the accident was due to negligence on the part of the defendants.

The defendants say that the plaintiff voluntarily exposed himself to risk and danger and the accident was caused by his own negligence and he might by reasonable care have avoided it. In the alternative they say the injury was the result of inevitable accident for which neither the plaintiff or defendants were to blame. Arthur Colville, Campbellford, for the plaintiff, Dennistoun, Peck and Kerr for the defendants.

WAS HONOURED ON THE EVE OF DEPARTURE FROM CITY

Mr. R. E. Goodenough Presented With a Case of Pipes and an Address by Matthews Co's Employees.

IS LEAVING FOR WEST

On the eve of Mr. R. Goodenough's departure Wednesday last, the employees of the Matthews Co. presented him with a case of pipes. The presentation was made by M. A. Webber, while Mr. G. Dryland read the following address:

Peterborough, March 22, 1910.

Mr. R. G. Goodenough, city—

Dear Friend,—It is with feelings of deepest regret that we learn that you are about to sever your connections with the firm you have so many years faithfully served and are taking up residence in the west. Our relations have always been of the most cordial nature, and, although in charge of an important department, you always had the time and inclination to lend a deserving fellow workman a helping hand. Your never failing courtesy and kindness to all with whom your duties brought you in contact shall always be remembered and in wishing you every success in your new home, we beg you to accept as a souvenir of the years we have spent together, this case of pipes, with the hope that in your "pipe dreams" your old comrades on the Otonabee and the good times spent together will form the subject occasionally of your contemplations.

Again wishing you every success, we remain on behalf of the employees,

R. Murduff,
F. McWilliams,
George Dryland,
A. Webber.

Mr. Goodenough made a suitable reply and assured his fellow workmen that he would never allow them to pass from his mind.

He left on Wednesday morning for Balgoney, Saskatchewan, where he will follow the occupation of farming.

A SUDDEN REVIVAL

Relatives Disturbed Supposed Dead Woman and She Came to Life.

Special to The Examiner.

Brookville, Ind., March 26.—Indiana's law forbidding bodies to be disturbed before a Coroner arrives nearly cost the life of Miss Olive Sanders, fifty years old, who resides eight miles north of here. Miss Sanders was missed by her sister, with whom she lives. Neighbors were called and the supposed dead body was found in a snowdrift in the barnyard. Coroner Clawson was notified, as was an undertaker.

Before their arrival friends insisted that the body should be removed to the house. Soon after being placed near the fire and the administration of stimulants, Miss Sanders revived and when the undertaker and Coroner arrived she was able to talk and informed the county official that his services were not needed.

IMPORTANT DEAL JUST CLOSED

Messrs. Alexander and Miller, 134 Brock St., have just closed an important deal by which they have received a substantial interest in one of Toronto's best fixture Manufacturing Co. This will place them on the jobber's basis of buying and will mean that they will be able to retail from 25 to 35 per cent. lower than ever before, and give them full control for this district of a very exclusive line of fixtures at small cost. They will start at once to handle an extensive line.

PLENTY MAPLE SYRUP

Was $1.35 and $1.40 Per Gallon—Other Prices.

The Easter market this morning was a very large one, the number of both vendors and buyers being great. Fowl was in great demand and was readily picked up at prices ranging from two to three dollars and a half. Chickens went at $1 and $1.25 per pair. Maple Syrup was in plentiful quantities and sold at $1.35 and $1.40 per gallon. Butter and eggs were selling at the usual prices.

ANNUAL MEETING

Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club Will Organize on Friday Next.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling and Tennis Club will be held Friday, April 1, at 8 p.m. the Dominion Bank Chambers. Members are particularly requested to be present, as election of officers for the year will take place and any persons who intend playing with the club are also asked to be present. The greens have wintered well and it is expected will be in the best shape they have yet been.—Dr. Marshall, Sec.Treas.

CONSPICUOUS IN A BALLROOM.

Flakes of Dandruff on the Collar and Shoulders of a Gentleman in Full Dress.

This is the thing you quite frequently see in the ball-room—a man's black dress-cut literary covered with dandruff.

It must be annoying to the wearer, and certainly not a pleasant thing to observe. But dandruff can be eradicated. It is a germ disease that will some day cause baldness.

Newbro's Herpicide kills the hair-destroying germ, and stimulates the hair to a rich, abundant growth; it does more—keeps the hair soft and pliant.

Furthermore, Herpicide is a most pleasant toilet accessory; of pleasing odour, and cooling to the scalp.

EASTER.

Easter is a type of the perpetual process of resurrection, that are going on every year in the world of nature and every day in the world of human action. tA night we lie down and become locked in the beneficent torpor of sleep; in the morning we rise to a new and refreshed life. Every year the earth sinks into the equally beneficent and necessary sleep of winter, when the processes of nature cease, when all things rest. For the moment in both cases, for the time being, it is death, but the seeds of life are only dormant; when the seasons complete their round, the awakening, the resurrection comes. The fetters of the streams are broken, the frost-bound earth is released, the buds push, the leaf unfolds, the flower blows and nature takes on its new life in all the glory of leafage and bloom, the promise of the harvest to come. The Easter rising, the Resurrection, is a type of a higher immortality, the thought that takes away the sting of death, robs the grave of its terrors and achieves victory over it. It is the type of hope that springs eternal in the human heart. Would we lie down peacefully and calmly at night and invoke the twin brother of death, if we did not feel, did not hope, that the morning would bring awakening, new strength and new courage? When we see winter stealing on, putting all nature to sleep, replacing all growth and beauty with a frosty beauty of its own, would we regard its coming with equal mind and even welcome the change if we did not feel that when the season of spring comes the earth and all that therein is, would waken to new life and new beauty, all the more grateful for the temporary suspension. When we lie down on the hard bed of death, when we see the great sleep overtaking us, could we regard it with equanimity, and, in cases when life has been uncommon hard, welcome it, if we had not the sure-built hope that the morning would dawn and that the life we lay down will come again in more glorious fulness and unchanging completeness. The first Easter when the Redeemer of the world broke the bonds of death and rose triumphant from the grave, the hope, the certainty of eternal life came to the world, the face of the world, the lot of humanity, changed as changes the face of nature when comes the resurrection of spring. The sun of righteousness rose and the work of redemption in its fulness was finished.

STAND BY THE CITY.

From time to time the Examiner has urged the duty of citizens standing by the city, standing up for the city and its interests. We all know that the city's best welfare depends upon the cooperation of everybody, the unceasing exhibition of interest, by word and deed. This interest is by no means confined to material affairs. We talk of a publicity commissioner to advertise the City of Peterborough and its advantages. But life is more than meat, and the body than raiment. We must round out the city more completely than in the matter of factories. The minds, the tastes, the culture of the citizens are elements in making the City of Peterborough a pleasant place to live in in other ways than the mere making of money. We are spending some $25,000 in erecting a public library, in the interest of the mental improvement of our citizenship. We owe a duty to a higher and more delightful form of culture, music. We have abundant musical talent in our city, and the reason that there is not more coherent and tangible evidence of it, is to be found in the past in lack of cooperation among the musical components of Peterborough. Now that the desired cooperation has begun, it should be encouraged. The Earl Grey musical and dramatic competitions to take place in Toronto in the first week of April, which promise so much for the higher forms of culture, have evoked a double response in Peterborough. Two organizations have, with a fine courage and laudable ambition, entered the contests, and will do their best, and that promises to be much, to bring glory and credit to Peterborough. And their success depends, to no small extent, upon both the moral support and material assistance of our citizens. The former will give the inspiration to effort, arising from appreciation of honest endeavour, and the second will give free play to honest endeavour untrammeled by prosaic considerations of ways and means.

These enterprises not only call for courage and ambition, but they involve great expense and great sacrifice in practice and rehearsal. The courage and the musical spirit supply the latter, but the former requires the cooperation and practical sympathy of the public. To provide means, the two organizations propose giving the people of Peterborough the first opportunity of hearing their respective presentations. Both should be greeted by strong houses. In patronizing these presentations the public will be doing good to the cause they represent, and do a double good to themselves—being recouped by splendid entertainments and creating the comfortable consciousness that they have assisted these organizations to bring glory and credit to Peterborough. They may not win the prizes, though they have a good chance to do so, but if they do not succeed in doing this they will succin advertizing the City of Peterborough. Shakleton sought the south pole; he did not succeed in reaching it, but his courage, his ambition, his plucky endeavour were recognized, and royal honours conferred upon him.

The two courageous and ambitious musical organizations may not win prizes, but they will do credit to Peterborough, and bring its name into a new prominence. We propose paying thousands of dollars a year to a publicity commissioner to advertize the material resources of Peterborough, but these organizations will give the city an advertisement from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

There needs something more than cheap power and good sites for factories, to make Peterborough a desirable place of residence—to attract population. There must be educational advantages, opportunities for culture and cultured associations. We have them in the form of splendid schools, and an excellent musical school, but if we show to the world by a possibly successful, and certainly creditable, participation in the Earl Grey competitions that we are an important musical centre we shall establish a claim to being a desirable home, which may be the turning point in a keen run for a site for some important manufacturing industry. This claim will be all the stronger if, in addition to being a musical centre, which the contest will demonstrate, we also show that we are a musical, cultured and harmoniously co-operative people, by standing solidly behind the enterprise of the organizations mentioned, and materially assisting them to bring credit to the city, and make it widely known over the whole Dominion. In this, as every other thing, the loyal citizen will stand by the city.

VANDAL SIGNS.

Assemblyman Merritt's bill, forbidding the painting of signs on fences and other property within a highway, is a good measure and ought to pass. The placing of advertising signs in fields is trespass unless the owner consents, and then it is, of course, beyond the law, though it destroys scenery and offends good taste. The highways should be protected from the invasion that goes on all the time, simply because no one has taken the trouble to stop it. There are better and more appropriate ways of advertising than either of these—or the disfigurement of railroad stations.—American Paper.

CULTIVATING SLIMNESS

Fat women must take this injunction to heart if they want to be in style for the new modes will not drape over a fat figure.

The fat has got to come off quickly but without harm, of course, and this means only one thing can be depended upon. Exercising or dieting are too slow. The fat woman who wants to wear a form-clinging gown must make an immediate trip to her druggist and get a case of Marmola Prescription Tablets, which will cost her about 75 cents.

Taking one of these after each meal and at bedtime should be enough to bring her to the "losing-a-pound-a-day" stage before even the first case is used up. It is hardly believable that such delightful results can be obtained without harm and for such a small sum of money, but then, fact is stranger than fiction.

Test the effect of these tablets by getting a case yourself, either from the Marmola Co., 833 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich, or from any druggist. They are made in exact accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription and, consequently, can not have any ill effects.

EUROPEAN PROGRAMME.

The 19th Withrow illustrated prospectus is the most attractive issued. The route is comprehensive with 400 miles of coaching and trips on eighteen superb mountain lakes. "INJUN" MADE HIM BITE THE DUST

Spokane, Wash., March 26.—Perhaps the most talked-of Indian in the West to-day is Parson Motanic, the giant Umatilla wrestler, who gave Frank Gotch the surprise of his life at Pendleton, Ore., a fortnight ago during the Jeffries-Gotch exhibition in that city. The big redman hurled sounding whack almost before the referee's champion to the mat with a referee's whistle had died away. Then instead of pursuing his advantage he stood gazing at his fallen adversary with a look of triumph, for, according to Indian rules, he had won the match.

The yell of applause which greeted the Indian's achievement stirred Gotch's mettle and he rushed upon his dusky opponent. Before seven minutes had elapsed he had fastened a hammerlock upon him and forced him to the mat. Here the Indian nature asserted itself. Although suffering great pain from the hold, Motanic, with all the stoicism of his race, refused to yield.

Sam Berger stepped from behind the scenes and attempted to persuade him that he was defeated, but it was not until the long strain and the great weight of his conqueror had forced his shoulders to the mat and the referee had slapped Gotch on the back, that he would submit. His arm was severely wrenched and he had met his first defeat, but he had proved his gameness.

Motanic's athletic abilities do not stop with wrestling. Although weighing almost 200 pounds, he is the champion sprinter of the reservation and persistently claims that he has run the 100-yard dash in nine flt, and no amount of argument will convince him he is not the champion of the world in that event. He has played in many games of football on reservation teams, and with his combination of great strength and great speed, has proved himself a formidable man.

British Bungling in Liberia?

Washington, D.C., March 26.—The report of one American commission to Liberia was transmitted to Congress yesterday by President Taft with a special message. After reviewing the internal dangers which threaten Liberia, as well as those which crowd upon her from the outside, the commission has made the following recommendations:

That the United States extend its aid to Liberia in the prompt settlement of her boundary disputes.

That the United States enable Liberia to refund its debt by assuming as a guarantee for payment of obligations under such an arrangement, the control and collection of Liberian customs.

That this nation aid in organizing and drilling competent constabulary or frontier police.

That the United States establish and maintain a research station there.

The reform program adopted upon the advice of Great Britain is condemned by the commission, and the causes are described in the report as the "bungling of British officials in 1909," which resulted in a frontier police officered largely by British. That feature, the commission declares, is impossible for the good of Liberia.

In summarizing the conditions there, the commission says, that help from the United States is demanded, as Great Britain and France are not in a position to give disinterested assistance. The whole situation is summed up as very helpless for the little nation unless the United States steps in and helps out.

Insurance Man Exonerated.

Atlanta, Ga., March 26.—A. H. Stockdell, former general agent of the Phoenix Fire Insurance Co. of Brooklyn, with headquarters at Atlanta, and who, following the revelations concerning the affairs of the company's home office, was removed from office because of an alleged shortage, was yesterday completely exonerated by the Phoenix officials of any charges of wrong-doing.

THE PAINS OF THE AGED
Are usually due to the tendency of the kidneys to wear out as age advances, giving rise to the accumulation of poisons in the blood and causing backache, lumbago, aching limbs and rheumatism. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are particularly prized by aged people because they can be relied upon to invigorate the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and so remove the cause of pains and aches.

Storekeeper Suicides.

Lindsay, March 26.—A distressing fatality occurred at Oakwood, when a well-known storekeeper, Alex. Cameron, committed suicide, shooting himself twice with a revolver, both bullets entering the mouth.

Cameron, who was about 45 years of age and married, has been in a despondent mood recently. It was while the family were out that he committed the rash deed. He had partly undressed and got into bed before the shooting. As he had locked the doors, his wife entered through a window, and thus came upon the horrible crime.

Emulsified Oil
When the doctor says you must take Cod Liver Oil he means Emulsified Oil and not the crude oil which is very heavy and hard to digest.
Scott's Emulsion
is the world's standard preparation of Cod Liver Oil; it is very easily digested and immediately absorbed, and will not upset the stomach like the crude or plain oil.

Gives Long Hat Pin a Boost.

Washington, D.C., March 26.—Washington women can jab hold-up men and mashers with long hat-pins all they want and no one in Congress will rise up to cry "outrage," according to Major Sylvester, superintendent of police of the District of Columbia.

"We have in Washington 16,000 more women than men," said Major Sylvester yesterday, in discussing the agitation against long hatpins. "Such predominance of the gentler sex can have but one result. Numbers of women are obliged to go about the streets at night without escorts, and numerous instances have come to the attention of this department where women, assailed by marauders at night, have used hat-pins with telling effect.

Does C.P.R. Plan Coup?

Milwaukee, March 26.—The Canadian Pacific Railroad Co. has acquired a block of property on the east side of Milwaukee, near Lake Michigan, for what is said to be a terminal, according to a story in an afternoon paper yesterday.

Options on the property are said to have been quietly obtained. The story cannot be confirmed here.

With the Milwaukee acquisition the Canadian Pacific would have from the head of the lakes a Chicago line with which Milwaukee would be directly connected. Surveys have already been made for a new route which was figured on as the outlet.

West Shore Railway Wage Scale.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 26.—Negotiations looking towards a new wage scale for members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors on the Lake Shore system were uncompleted last night after a long conference between a committee representing the two organizations and the railway management.

The men are asking an equalization of the wage rate on all eastern roads.

WOLF SKIN CROOKS JAILED.

Two Go to Penitentiary and Seven to District Jail.

Fort Francis, Ont., March 26.—For having purchased wolf skins and palmed them off as fresh captures in New Ontario woods so as to secure the Government bounty, nine men were sentenced yesterday by Judge Fitch as follows:

George Westcott, two years in Kingston Penitentiary; M. T. Cathcart, two and a half years in pen; Thomas Godin, Joseph Maxim, Robt. Horrocks and Thomas Kirkpatrick, three months each in the district jail, and a fine of $150, or a further term of nine months. Three Indians were let off more easily, McGinnis and Blackbird getting three months each and Baptiste four months.

Previous to the passing of sentence Westcott gave evidence in charges brought against Moses Finkelstein and Benjamin Levison, fur dealers, of Winnipeg, charged with complicity.

According to Westcott he visited the accused fur dealers, and seeing a pile of wolf skins, was told that he could make easy money in this district under certain conditions. Westcott, said he therefore arranged to take a number of wolf skins, those with good ears only, on the understanding that he got his money back, less $1 for rental. He took 19 skins the first time from Finkelstein, and paid $98 for them. Later, after he had used them to secure a bounty of $15 each, he returned them, less four skins, and got back $64.

Finkelstein declares he sold Westcott the skins, and did not rent them, but both men were committed for trial on June 7, under personal cash bail of $2,000.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The Railway Commission inspected proposed sites for the new M.C.R. station at Windsor.

Thirty thousand Easter lilies arrived at New York yesterday from Bermuda on the steamer Oceana.

Thirty-one new indictments against past and present councilmen were returned by the grand jury at Pittsburg yesterday.

One hundred and ten German miners, imported by the Dominion Coal Co. to take the place of strikers, arrived at Glace Bay.

A Turk, who had an arm and leg crushed by a train at Cleveland, bled to death rather than permit the injured limbs to be amputated.

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy has signified his intention of going to the assistance of those who are suffering from the eruption of Mount Aetna.

Catharine Manz, aged 16, of Massillon, Ohio, is charged with having poisoned her 10-year-old sister over jealousy because of her superior wardrobe.

The conductors and trainmen of the N.Y., N.H. & H. Railway have voted almost unanimously to strike if their wage and schedule demands are refused.

Chauncey W. Hammond, formerly of Oakville, is on trial at Detroit on a charge of stealing $17,000 from the E. M. F. Automobile Co. and the First National Bank.

William Martin, aged 38, while in the delirium of typhoid fever, threw himself from the third storey of the Edmonton hospital and was killed. A widow and four children are left destitute.

George C. Murray and Olive Tuck, both of Toronto, are under the arrest at Detroit, awaiting deportation. The U. S. immigration authorities there say the couple eloped from Toronto, where Murray deserted his wife.

Crushed by Wall.

Windsor, March 26.—John Langdon, aged 18, an employe of the Cadwell Silex Walk & Gravel Co., was killed yesterday afternoon by the collapsing of a wall of a ferry building which was destroyed by fire early yesterday morning.

The police department and firemen early realized that the walls were in a dangerous condition, and had roped off the street. Langdon was engaged in doing some work around the dock near the sidewall of the burned building. Without warning the wall toppled over on him. He was alive when rescued, but died in the ambulance.

Montreal, March 26.—Sir Edward Clouston, vice-president of the Bank of Montreal, has been appointed vice president of the Royal Trust Co., replacing the late Sir George Drummond.

The First Easter

In the end of the Sabbath, as it began to dawn towards the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre.

And, behold, there was a great earthquake: for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow:

And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

He is not here: for He is risen, as He said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay.

TO PROMULGATE TREATY.

Waterways Compact With States Is Soon to Be Settled.

Ottawa, March 26.—The Government will, in a few days, promulgate the waterways treaty with the United States, as drafted in 1908 and amended by the American Senate last year by the addition of a rider providing that the existing rights of riparian owners on the St. Mary's River at Sault Ste. Marie should not be affected.

For the past year the ratification of this amendment to the treaty has been held in abeyance pending action by the United States Government to implement its promise that the foreshore on the American side of the St. Mary's River should be expropriated by the American War Department, thus meeting Canadian objections that advantage might be taken of the rider by private interests to unduly acquire power rights there. This has been done.

The treaty provides for the control of international waters for power, irrigation and navigable purposes. It establishes a satisfactory arrangement for safeguarding the navigation interests of both countries on the great lakes and other international waters. It provides for the conservation of waterpowers, especially at Niagara Falls, and the maintenance of an adequate flow of water in all channels along the whole line of boundary waters. It preserves the scenic beauty of Niagara.

Existing power plants are built capable of using 54,500 cubic feet per second. The treaty prohibits any diversion for power purposes exceeding on the whole 56,000 cubic feet on the United States side and 36,000 feet on the Canadian side.

The treaty secure the right of vessels of both countries to the free use of all the canals, and it further provides for the adjudication of all future differences between the two countries, with respect to boundary waters, by means of a miniature Hague Tribunal, consisting of six members, composed equally of American and Canadian representatives.

Venezuela's Centenary.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

March 27, 1910.

Review.

Golden Text. Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom ,and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people. Matt. 4:23.

The following may be used as a new and complete lesson, or as a review of the twelve preceding lessons.

The date and title of each past lesson, where found, the Golden Text, and one question from each lesson follow.

Jan. 2.—John the Forerunner of Jesus. Matt. 3: 1-12 Golden Text. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the lord, make his path straight. Matt. 3: 3.

Verse 12.—What reason is there for the belief that men and women make their own hell or heaven?

Jan. 9.—The Baptism and Temptation of Jesus. Matt. 3: 13-17: 4: 1-11. Golden Text. In that he hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted, Heb. 2:18

Verses 13, 14.—What light have we to guide us in our decisions, which is superior to reason?

Jan. 16.—The Beginning of the Galilean Ministry. Matt 4:12-25. Golden text. The people who sat in darkness saw great light. Matt. 4: 16.

Verses 18-22.—How may a man of God recognize the call of God, to new work, when it comes through another man?

Jan. 23.—The Blessedness. Matt 5: 1-16. Golden Text. Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God. Matt. 5: 8.

Verse 3.—What in the last analysis, is the essential qualification for being a subject of the kingdom of God on earth?

Jan. 30.—Some Laws of the Kingdom. Matt. 5: 17-26, 38-48. Golden Text. Be ye therefore perfect as your father which is in heaven is perfect. Matt. 5: 38.

Verses 17-20.—How many persons can you recall from the scriptures or otherwise, who did the perfect will of God on earth?

Feb 6.—Almsigving and Prayer. Matt. 6: 1-15. Golden Text. Take heed that ye do not your righteousness before men, to be seen of them. Matt. 6: 1 (R. V.)

Verses 5, 6.—Why does Jesus so strongly recommend private prayer, and what are its advantages?

Feb. 13—Worldliness and Trust. Matt. 6: 19-34. Golden Text. Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you. Matt. 6:33.

Verse 19—What would Jesus have every man to consider as his chief treasure? See verse 33.

Feb. 20.—The Golden Rule—Temperance Lesson.—Matt. 7: 1-12. Golden Text. Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the prophets. Matt, 7: 12.

Verses 1, 2.—When men condemn others on mere suspicion, what is generally the real ground for condemnation?

Feb. 27.—False and True Discipleship. Matt. 7: 13-29. Golden Text. Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father, which is in heaven. Matt. 7: 21.

Verses 13, 14.—In what sense is the gate to eternal life narrow and the way to destruction broad?

March 6.—Jesus the Healer. Matt. 8: 2-27. Golden Text. Himself took our infirmities and bare our sickness. Matt. 8: 17.

Verses 6, 7.—So far as the records show, Jesus while in the flesh, healed all the sick ones that were brought to him, is that sufficient to prove that he will do the same to-day?

March. 13.—Two Mighty Works. Matt. 8: 23-24. Golden Text. What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him! Matt. 8: 27.

Verse 27.—Which would be of the greater benefit to mankind for God to run the universe, and the affairs of man, on fixed laws or by miracles? (This question must be answered by members of the club.)

March 20.—A Paralytic Forgiven and Healed. Matt 9: 1-13. Golden Text. The Son of Man hath power on earth to forgive sins. Matt. 9: 6.

Verse 2.—Of how much avail is the faith of one man on behalf of an 'her?

Lesson for Sunday, April 3rd, 1910. The Power of Faith. Matt. 9: 18-34.

"LITTLE EVA" LIVING YET

Original Heroine of Uncle Tom's Cabin Discusses the First Presentation of the Play and How It Was Received.

PHENOMENAL RUNS

Special to The Examiner.

Cambridge, Mass., March 26.—The original Little Eva of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" resides in this city, hale and hearty at the age of sixty-two. Mrs. Cordelia McDonald, who claims the honour of having created the winsome little heroine of Mrs. Stowe's book is an unusually attractive woman for her age. She resides at No. 22 Putnam avenue. Mrs. McDonald began her stage career at the age of four and retired when she was twelve.

"My father first produced 'Uncle Tom's Cabin," said she. "He was the manager of the Troy Museum, Troy, N.H., and staged the production himself, playing the part of St. Clair. The rest of the cast consisted of our family and some friends. My mother played Topsy and I was cast as Eva. We ran 10 nights at the Troy theatre, which was a rare thing in those days.

"Father then decided to take the production on the road in his repertoire. We went to New York and there made a record of consecutive appearances, playing 325 performances and not wearing our welcome out even then. We played in Boston and encountered an opposition production at the old Boston Museum.

"We next went South, appearing at Baltimore and Washington, and then went to St. Louis. In neither of the three cities, which were strongly proslavery, did we meet with any discourtesies. Our audiences passed over our reflections on slavery with a shrug of their shoulders, and came to see our performance to laugh and cry, and they did both, even in the hot-blooded South. With the starting of war talk, however, my father finally dropped 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' from his list of plays."

A MODERN MEDICINE FOR YOUNG CHILDREN

No sane mother would wish her self treated under the conditions of medicine or surgery of half a century ago. Why then should she give her tender little child the old-fashioned medicines that have not changed in half a century, and which more likely than not contain poisonous opiates that will not cure the child, but merely drug it into temporary insensibility. Baby's Own Tablets is a modern medicine prepared with all the care and skill of modern medical science. This medicine cures all stomach, bowel, teething and other ailments of childhood and babyhood. And the matter has the guarantee of a government analyst that it contains no opiate or poisonous drug. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PHILOMATHEAN SOCIETY

Will Present the Comedy, "Mr. Bob" in Collegiate Auditorium on April 11th.

The Philomathean Society of the Collegiate Institute are preparing a comedy, "Mr. Bob," in two acts, to be presented in the auditorium of the school, on Monday, April 11th. Those taking part and the roles they are playing, are as follows:

Aunt Becky—Miss G. Yenney.
Katharine—Miss Mira White.
Patty—Marjorie Mann.
Mrs Bryant—Miss Maisie Armstrong
Philip Royson—Mr. Roy Dixon.
Mr. Brown, a lawyer—Mr. John Hargtone.
Jenkins, a butler—Mr. A. Primeau.

This is a very amusing comedy and the young people are putting forth every effort to make it a great success.

ORANGES FOR HEALTH

For centuries physicians have recognized the medicinal value of oranges. The public is rapidly learning that the free use of this tasty fruit, especially in the Spring, has a tendency to purify the blood and give it renewed vitality.

There will be a special sale of SUNKIST Oranges all next week in every fruit and grocery store in this section.

CHASE AWAY THE TIRED FEELING

Dodd's Kidney Pills Will Do It Quickly and Naturally.

It is Caused by Sluggish Circulation Brought on by Deranged Kidneys Failing to Strain Impurities Out of the Blood.

Stayner, Ont., March 25.—(Special.)—In the Spring the Kidneys always need attention. They have additional work in straining the winter's accumulation of impurities out of the blood and if they are at all out of order, it is sure to tell on them. It is only a question of the best method of treating them and Ernest Colwell of this place adds his testimony to the great mass of proof that the one sure cure for sick Kidneys is Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Some time ago," says Mr. Colwell, "I had severe pains and soreness in the small of my back, and sometimes noticed a brick dust sediment in my urine, so of course I knew my Kidneys were affected. I procured some of Dodd's Kidney Pills, which readily cured the pains and soreness and restored the urine to its natural colour. I always recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Everybody needs medicine in the Spring, and the medicine they need is Dodd's Kidney Pills. They clear the blood of impurities and by giving the blood free circulation, speedily and naturally chase away that tired feeling. It is caused by sluggish circulation, and Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure it.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

In making over white silk or wool care should be taken that all loose threads are removed. If a made-up garment is in question all loose places should be carefully tacked and any repairs made that are necessary.

Make a strong suds of pure white soap and wash thoroughly through two or three suds. Do not rub soap on the material.

Use no bluing in the rinsing water, as is the usual custom, as it makes wool harsh and may ruin silk. Rinse at least twice.

The chief danger in washing wool is in the shrinking. This may be prevented by making each successive suds and rinsing water a little warmer than the one that precedes it.

Wring out most of the water lightly and pin on a covered line in the air or in a sunny room where it will not freeze in winter. Pin carefully in a number of places to prevent sagging and stretching.

Iron while the material is a little wet. Do not use too hot an iron, as it yellows both wool and silk and makes the latter like paper. Press on the wrong side, preferably with a cloth between iron and material.

So treated the goods will look almost like new. They ca nbe washed in this way again and again.

CHEESE SAUCE

Cheese sauce is composed of one cup of milk, two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one-eighth teaspoonful of mustard, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper, and one-fourth cup of grated cheese.

Put the butter, flour, mustard, salt and pepper into a saucepan; stir over the fire until it froths; add the milk and stir constantly until it thickens and boils. Stand over hot water or on a cooler part of the stove, add the cheese and stir until it is well mixed in.

This may be used to pour over cooked macaroni or cauliflower, or as the foundation of a dish o flaked macaroni and cheese. If the cheese is too new, the sauce will not be well-flavoured.

This may be converted into a Cheese Soup by adding one cup more milk and seasoning to taste.

FISH JELLY

Any variety of fish may be used and it should be steamed the day before using and broth taken for the jelly. Separate the fish into flakes while hot. For a pint and a half mould there should be a generous pint of the fish flakes. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and cook in it slowly without browning half an onion sliced thin, two branches of parsley and half a dozen slices of carrot. Add these vegetables, half a cup of cooked tomatoes and the thin yellow rind of a lemon to four cups of the fish broth, and let simmer twenty minutes. Strain and cool and then remove the fat. Add two level tablespoonfuls of gelatine, softened in one-half cup of cold water, a teaspoonful of salt, the crushed shell and slightly beaten white of an egg and two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Stir over the fire until it boils and let it boil five minutes, then let it stand on the back of the range for fifteen minutes. Strain through a double cheese cloth, let cool a little, add the flaked fish and fill the mould. When cool chill thoroughly in the refrigerator and at serving time garnish with slices of hard-boiled egg.

GINGER BON-BONS

Melt some fondant in a bowl placed over boiling water and to a cupful of it add half a cupful of candied ginger cut into small pieces. Stir the ginger into the fondant, then drop from the tip of a teaspoon on paraffine paper.

STUFFED TOMATOES

Cut the tops from large, firm tomatoes and with a small spoon scoop out the insides. Chop this pulp and to half of it, add as much minced boiled ham and two tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs; season to taste and fill the tomatoes with this mixture. Set in a baking pan and bake in a moderate over for about twenty minutes.

FAIRY SNOW

Put three supfuls of water into a saucepan, add the juice and grated rind of a lemon and two teaspoonfuls of sugar, and bring to a boil. Mix to a paste in a basin one and a half tablespoonfuls of corn flour with cold water, pour the saucepan's contents over it, and boil up, constantly stirring. Let this cool; then add the stiffly-beaten whites of three eggs. Wet a mould, pour in the mixture, and leave to set. The yolks, a teaspoonful of corn flour, and a pint of milk make custard.

OUR $15.00 SUITS

ARE PAR EXCELLENCE

$15.00

"You've capped the climax of suit value giving" a delightful customer said the other day. She echoed our own honest cenviction. We cannot see how it is possible to secure a better suit for the money. We know for a certainty that it can't be equalled in this vicinity.

$15.00

$15.00

The tailoring is superb and the garments themselves are correct in design, material and colouring. All are in the newest spring modes. Do not associate these suits with the average at $15.00, they are not. Only a willingness on our part to sacrifice a little extra profit in order to obtain extra goodness, is responsible for their low prices.

GENERALLY SPEAKING

(By F. M. D.)

The Plimsoll Mark.

The navigation season is at hand, and it goes without saying that our inland waters will again claim their usual tribute from the ranks of venturesome humanity. We all know that many fatalities occur through uncalculated agencies, but very many have taken place owing to foolhardy and reprehensible behaviour. The fool who rocks the boat and who is on a par with the idiot who points a gun, loaded or unloaded, at you, has been responsible for many and many a sad occurrence, whilst many a craft, overloaded with pleasure seekers, has been drawn into the maw of the smiling and treacherous element to which it was entrusted.

As day after day brings forth some new invention, ostensibly introduced for utility, but actually a menace to life or limb, our legislators are having a hard time of it making regulations fast enough to keep pace with the inventions. These regulations have had mostly to do with dangers on land, and it seems as if our lawmakers might, with advantage, turn their attention to one or two matters connected with the water.

We have all been familiar at some time or another with complaints regarding the overcrowding of boats, and it long ago occurred to the writer that it would be a most excellent thing if the Plimsoll mark were adopted for use in our inland marine service.

For years it has been used by England, and by almost every civilized country. Plimsoll, for more than twenty years, fought for the idea, beginning almost single-handed and winning at last by sheer courage and persistence. His scheme, in brief, was to have a load line painted around all sea-going ships, in order to insure the safety of the cargo, and of the sailors on board. Why should not such a plan be adopted on our inland waters? It would be to the advantage of shipowners and passengers alike, and would save the former from much worry and vexation in regard to complaints of overloading.

Stock Quotations.

It looks as if the United States will have to forego a few of the stock quotations which for so many years have done duty in pointing morals, or adorning the tales of its aspiring writers. Take, for instance, that well-worn one, "Murder will out." Whoever was responsible for such a saying must have lived in golden days when virtue was the rule and vice the exception.

A writer in the Chicago World makes the statement that 200 persons are being murdered, weekly, in the United States; that the police stand practically helpless, that no less than 98 out of every hundred murderers escape scot free, and that in Chicago alone, 118 murders, on an average, are committed every year. The State of Georgia had the infamous distinction of contributing 45 homicides to the roll last year—more than the entire record of the vast British Empire.

The furnisher of these statistics finishes his article as follows: "And now we discover that when our poets and our orators and our artists have finished telling of our greatness and glory, we have fostered wickedness and lawlessness as has no other nation in the world; that behind our boasted institutions of Government, the thug and the thief and the assassin are operating with a vigour and a freedom duplicated nowhere else in civilization."

Brawn vs. Brains.

It is a pet saying, especially with most of those who are not in possession of much physical strength that "brain is superior to brawn," and they argue in quite a fatuous way that in the race for a fortune or a competency brain has brawn beaten several different ways. Anyone who reads the daily papers and notes the salaries paid to baseballers, the prizes offered in all branches of athletics, the high prices at which hockeyists rate their services, and the princely sums for which men are willing to have their heads punched, must see that such an idea nowadays is entirely erroneous.

Conditions have entirely changed, and whilst brawn is basking in the sunshine of prosperity, brain is employing all the ingenuity it possesses, to keep out of the poorhouse. In connection with this phase of the question one finds oneself faced with the fact that many people regard those who are incapable, through honesty, of taking advantage of questionable means of enriching themselves as altogether lacking in sense. But this is a topsy-turvy world at best and perhaps some day by a turn of the wheel men will gaze at things from another standpoint. Sport will be relegated to its proper sphere and honesty, industry, intellect and worth will be accorded the recognition that is their rightful due.

Disraeli and Darwinism.

In looking through a delightful book lately, entitled "Collections and Recollections," giving anecdotes of men and women noted in the English public life of the past 70 years, I was reminded of one about Disraeli that I read many years ago. When Darwinism was an astonishing novelty, Disraeli made a speech on the subject before the Oxford Diocesan Society. "What is the question," he asked, "which is now placed before society with the glib assurance which to me is most astounding? That question is this: Is man an ape or an angel? I am on the side of the angels. I repudiate with indignation and abhorrence those new-fangled theories.' Carlyle was equally emphatic. He called the doctrine of evolution, "A gorilla damnification of humanity." Disraeli changed his views afterwards, but Carlyle did not. Emerson said in regard to it, "I would rather believe that we shall rise to the state of the angels than that we have fallen from it.

HER BABY HAD ECZEMA

Mrs. F. Clark, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to help her. The cure was thorough and complete and we give all credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment."

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

MADRIGAL CLUB REHEARSAL.

The Madrigal Club will rehearse this evening at 8 o'clock and a full rehearsal will be held on Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Dr. Vogt. will be at the Conservatory Music Hall at 9.30.

DR. VOGT COMING.

In connection with the visit of Dr. Vogt to Peterborough on Monday next the Amateur Operatic Company will rehearse to-night at 7.30, orchestra at 7 p.m.

On Monday night a full dress rehearsal will be held in the Grand Opera House.

The company must be on hand at 7 p.m. at the latest, as Dr. Vogt is taking the operatic entry at 8 p.m. sharp.

THE GIRL QUESTION.

"The Girl Question," Hough Adams and Howard's well known musical comedy was the holiday attraction at the Grand at afternoon and evening performances yesterday and pleased two largeaudiences with its witty lines and bright, whistleable music. There is nothing startling new in the situation or strikingly brilliant in the work of the principals but the audience managed to get a good deal of amusement out of the production and after all that is really all you can expect from a musical comedy. Willie Dunlay who will be remembered by his work here as Augustus Wright in the "Honeymooners" earlier in the season had an amusing line of slang which he got over the footlights in good shape in his part as Con Ryan a restaurant proprietor. The lion's share of the comedy fell to him and he got rid of it well. His support was only average, Miss Lillian Logan as "Joe" Forster, a waitress being perhaps the best of the cast. Some catchy music was scattered through the action, the favourite "Gee, Be Sweet to Me, Kid," proving the most popular. "Good-bye Pal" "There's No Place Like Home," and "I Hate to Work on Monday" were some of the others. Perhaps the hit o fthe evening was the Eddie Foy imitation which featured the song "The Imitation Craze." Several of the broilers had the Foy facial expression, mannerisms and walk to a nicety and their appearance was the signal for a round of hearty applause.

"The Girl Question" will perhaps not cause any conflagration in the neighbourhood of the babbling brook, but it passes away an evening enjoyably.

"THE CRUCIFIXION"

The fifth performance of the well known work, Sir John Stainer's sacred meditation, "The Crucifixion," was given last night in St. John's church before a large congregation by the choir, conducted by Mr. R. J. Devey, organist and choir master, assisted ably at the organ by Miss Maggie Flowers. Last night's rendering was splendid. The singers handled the various numbers without any apparent effort and finished in as good a voice as at the commencement.

The Rev. Canon Davidson led with the Good Friday prayers and St. Matthew's gospel account of The Passion, hymn 682, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," was earnestly sung by the whole congregation.

Mr. H. W. Morphet and Mr. George Chandler (tenors), Mr. Stacey, (bass), gave most excellent and expressive renderings of their arduous numbers. All were in good voice and sang splendidly. Mr. Jos. Halpany and Mr. A. Flowers did well in their parts for the choir and the men's voice parts were never given so well before in the church.

The unaccompanied quartette, "God so loved the world," was finely sung by Mrs. R. J. Devey and Mrs. W. Common, sopranos Mrs. Stewart and Mrs. Hinchcliffe, altos, the men soloists making up a double quartette more than ordinarily good

Mr. R. J. Devey conducted quietly, but effetcively. St. John's possesses a choir organization which must rank among the highest purely voluntary choirs in the country. May their good work long continue.

THE QUEEN'S

Toronto, the Queen City of Canada, has much of the beautiful. It is found in the many handsome churches, artistic public buildings, imposing offices, public drives, parks and gardens. Its government buildings are fine. Of hotels there are many; none, however, approaching the Queen's for perfect service, quiet comfort, and homelike surroundings, and the peculiar excellence of its cuisine. Its fame is far-reaching, and many remember with pleasure the hours spent within its hospitable walls. The charges are based on the American and European plan, and are as follows:

Rooms without bath (American Plan) $2.00 per day up; Rooms with bath (American Plan) $3.50 per day up; Rooms (European Plan) $1.00 per day up

Fred Whitcroft Says Northern Trip Put The Renfrew Team Out

Peterborough Hockey Star Home for a Few Days After a Strenuous Season With Edmonton and Renfrew.

SOME EXPERIENCES

Renfrew should have won the championship of the National Hockey Association," remarked Fred Whitcroft yesterday, in discussing the strenuous campaign that has just closed. Fred is visiting his home in Peterborough for a few days, on his way back to Edmonton, from Renfrew, where He has been since coming east with the Edmonton Cup challengers.

Speaking of the race for the premier hockey honours of the world, he said that Renfrew's trip north to Cobalt and Haileybury was the pricipal cause of the downfall of the Diamond studded seven that gave Renfrew so much advertising during the season just over. The Creamery town team won both their games in the north, but they came back pretty well all in after the strenuous trip, and were called upon to go up against the Wanderers. who, fresh and fit, after a week's rest. beat them in Renfrew, a feat they would have hardly pulled off had it not been for the shape in which the Renfrew team was.

Fred travelled in hard luck this season. Early after joining Renfrew he was injured by being slashed across the face at Haileybury, several of his teeth being knocked out, and a bad gash inflicted. To make matters worse he was attacked by blood poisoning, as a result of the injury, and was forced to drop out of the game when the campaign was in its hottest stages, and when his services were most needed. However, he saw all the games and is in a position to talk with effect upon the battles for the silverware.

Fred says that the Wanderers and Renfrew teams had a great trip to New York. "Whit" went down to the big town with the Wanderers although he did not play with them, and tells a pretty good story of a stunt pulled off there in which he figured prominently. "I went down to meet the Renfrew bunch when they hit New York," he remarked, "and when they came out of the station I waltzed up to Lester Patrick, Herbie Rowe and some of the rest with the glad hand extended. I wanted to make them feel at home, but much to my surprise they walked past me as if they had not seen me at all. I couldn't figure it out at all, but Fred Taylor and some more of the team blew along and I once more made a noise like a reception committee. This bunch, however, shied off like the first lot and I heard Taylor whisper: "Look out for this fellow; he must be one of those green goods men," and then the gang departed, leaving me standing there with my hand out like a cigar store Indian. I couldn't figure it out at all, but I presently ran into the bunch and they gave me the merry "Ha Ha.' I got wise then to the fact that they were putting one over on me, but I got even by putting them on the wrong car and they landed out within reaching distance of Coney Island.

THE PARIS APACHES TRACK DOWN AND MURDER TRAITOR

Special to The Examiner:

Paris, March 24.—Again by a startling crime the Apaches here have made themselves felt. They have exhibited the power of their secret organization by putting to death a young man whom they had condemned as a traitor. The remarkable and persistent manner in which they ran him down has caused even more of a sensation than the murder.

The victim was a young man of weak character who drifted downward until he found pleasure in associating with ruffians. Finallys he was forced to take part in a robbery which led to murder and was arrested. He made a full confession, giving the names of his associates, who were then captured, tried and convicted.

After a short term of imprisonment the informer was released. Immediately he received word that the band had adjudged him a traitor and sentenced him to death.

At once he fled to Algeria, in Africa, and enlisting in the French army there supposed he would be forgotten. Later he returned on a furlough, believing sufficient time had elapsed to make him safe.

Again he received an annonymous note informing him thata his whereabouts were known and his death was near. It is surmised that these warnings were sent him by an Apache girl who fell in love with him while he was a member of the gang.

Danger so preyed upon the young man's mind that he became insane and was sent to an asylum. A week ago he was released as cured. No sooner was he back in Paris than another missive of warning reached him. He changed his residence but could not throw the avengers off his track. As he was going to his rooms one evening he was attacked by unidentified men, stabbed to the heart and died instantly.

The murderers fled, leaving the body. They have not been arrested, and the police doubt if they will be. Other members of the band know who they are, but are afraid to betray them.

Was 105 Years Old And Had Smoked All His Life

Special to The Examiner.

New York, March 26.—When Berthold Haub, a leather merchant of Canal street, died on Thursday at one hundred and five years he shattered many pet theories of those who are fond of framing "proper rules for living."

The allotted time of man is supposed to be three score and ten. After that we are told that "his strength is but labour and sorrow," but when one exceeds the century mark by five years and in all that period has never had an illness, has never required the attention of a doctor, has smoked incessantly, regarding his pipe as his "second right hand," has found his appetite increase with age, has kept strong and jovial, has never needed glasses and finally "passed on" naturally and peacefully, observers are inclined to disagree with the old adage and to believe with Cicero that the old age is really a delight.

Mr. Taub was born in Austria in 1850 and became a properous brewer. At seventy-five he came to New York to live with his sons. He did no active work within the last thirty years.

His grandchildren and great-grandchildren total sixty or more. Among them are many business and professional men. His funeral, last Friday, was attended by many prominent persons.

Seventy-five Years Old She Elopes To Get Married

Special to The Examiner.

Anderson, Ind., March 26.—After living a life of single blessedness for seventy-five years, Miss Josephine Brooks became the bride of Abraham W. Coddington, seventy-seven years old, a widower for twenty years.

They practically eloped from the Gospel Trumpet Company's old people's home, where they had been living for several years. Trustees of the home frowned on the romance. Miss Brooks and Mr. Coddington went outside the home premises for a walk, it was thought. They did walk, but it was to the County Clerk's office, where they obtained a marriage license. Then they went to the office of Justice of Peace Lane, who officiated at the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Coddington then returned to the old people's home. Mr. Coddington is a carpenter, but has been too feeble for work for several years.

BASKETBALL

Lindsay came to Peterborough to play the Y boys last night, but it wasn't even a good practice for the Y boys, who won 44 to 7. The spectators were somewhat surprised to see Peterborough with such a good team, and they shouted for their favourites in grand style. Hanwell and Nicholls played well and did some good shooting, Hanwell scoring 11 baskets and Nicholls 8. Matthews, Wallace and Laing also played well. Lindsay played good, clean ball, and if they did not play first-class basket ball they did know how to play the part of gentlemen.

The Peterborough boys will meet a Toronto team on Monday night, and it will be a faster game than last night.

The game will be at 8 p.m., and a big crowd is expected.

Peterborough's line-up will be: Wallace, c; Matthews and Laing, defense; Hanwell and Nicholls, forward; Flowers, substitute.

Following was the line-up for last night's game:

Lindsay		Peterborough
Connell	R. F.	Hanwell
Menzies	L. F.	Nicholls
Williams	C.	Flowers
Winton	R. G.	Matthews
Bickford	L. G.	Laing

New Rules Committee.

Washington, D.C., March 26.—By unanimous vote the House yesterday adopted a resolution naming committee on rules composed of six Republicans and four Democrats, in pursuance of the provisions of the Norris resolution.

Those named are: Dalzell of Pennsylvania; Walter I. Smith, of Iowa; Boutell, of Illinois; Lawrence, of Massachusetts; Fassett, of New York; Smith, of California; Republicans; and Clark, of Missouri; Underwood, of Alabama; Dixon, of Indiana; and Fitzgerald, of New York; Democrats.

Caruso Blackmailers Indicted.

New York, March 26.—The two prosperous Italian business men, Antonion Cincotto and Antonio Misiano, who were arrested on March 4 charged with attempting to blackmail and extort $15,000 from Enrico Caruso, the operatic tenor, were indicted for that offence yesterday in the County Court at Brooklyn. Both pleaded not guilty. Their bail was raised from $5,000 to $10,000 each.

OXO

Our source of supply

The OXO cattle farms are far and away the biggest British cattle farms in the world owned outright in the fluid beef industry.
OXO is the only British fluid beef whose makers guarantee that every ounce of their beef comes from their own cattle.

You would be careful in buying milk from a milkman who bought supplies from other people and mixed them with his own—wouldn't you? In fact, if a lot of milkmen came along, one of whom got all his supplies from his own healthy cows and the others got their supplies partly from their own cows and largely from outside sources, you would give your custom to the man who got all the milk from his own cows—wouldn't you?

It is just the same with fluid beefs. Firms who have to buy raw material from somebody else cannot guarantee from actual personal knowledge that the beef is absolutely healthy.

OXO guarantees every ounce. INSIST ON OXO

MADE BY THE FIRM WHICH

OWN THEIR FARMS

OXO is now sold both in Bottles and in Cubes (boxes of 6, 10 or 20 Cubes) by all Grocers, Druggists and General Stores. 35

FOURTEEN PEOPLE PERISH IN CHICAGO CONFLAGRATION

Can of Benzine Explodes and Furniture Store is Gutted---Employe is Sent to Fill Cigar Lighters and Causes an Explosion---Inmates are Unable to Escape.

Chicago, March 26.—Fourteen lives were lost in a fire which broke out suddenly from an explosion of benzine on the fourth floor of the six-storey building of the Fish Furniture Co., 1906-8 Wabash avenue, yesterday.

Leo Stoeckel, head clerk of the Fish company, who, by accident is said to have started the fire, told his story to Fire Attorney Frank Hogan yesterday afternoon. Although Stoeckel is admittedly more unfortunate than culpable, Attorney Hogan says he will bring some charge against the young man to insure his attendance at the inquest. Stoeckel was brought before the fire attorney with his hand, which had been burned, swathed in bandages. He appeared heartbroken.

"About 8.45 o'clock yesterday morning," Stoeckel said, "Mr. Mitchell, who is a member of the firm, gave me three pocket cigar-lighters and told me to go to the finishing room on the fourth floor and fill them with benzine. I had filled two of the lighters out of the five-gallon can and was working on the third when there was an explosion.

"A sheet of flame almost blinded me. I did not fully regain my senses until I had reached the street. The lighters contained a contrivance to make a spark, but whether I ignited one of them or not, I don't know. I either dropped the can of benzine when the flame shot up in front of me, or it was blown out of my hands."

Fire Marshal Horan declared that the single fire escape was of the ladder variety, and expressed the opinion that had this been a modern stair escape, no lives would have been lost.

Firemen poured water on the building for two hours and a half before the flames were sufficiently subdued to make a search for bodies. Twelve bodies had been recovered yesterday afternoon, when, owing to danger from the tottering walls, the search was discontinued.

Three Fires In Boston.

Boston, Mass., March 26.—Fanned by a strong March gale, three fires caused much damage in north shore districts yesterday. Essex, Hamilton and Revere each suffered from flames. The loss is estimated at $100,000 in South Hamilton, $70,000 in Essex, and $25,000 in the Franklin Park district of Revere.

In the Franklin Park fire, seven dwelling houses were wholly or partly burned. Eight large filled ice houses were destroyed at Lake Chebaco, near Essex Centre, and the villagers had to turn out to fight the flames. The fire spread through two miles of woodland and was barely checked at the edge of the village.

In South Hamilton the flames swept over an area a quarter of a mile square, levelling 21 buildings, eight of them residences.

$100,000 Fire.

Morganfield, Ky., March 26.—Fire, which started in the River Department store early yesterday, and spread to surrounding buildings in the business centre, caused a loss of more than $100,000; partially covered by insurance.

Shackleton Sure of Scott.

New York, March 26.—"I have almost no doubt that Capt. Scott's expendition will reach the South Pole," declared Sir Ernest Shackleton, the Antarctic explorer, when he stepped ashore yesterday.

"I have no intention," he added, "of heading any expedition to the South Pole while Capt. Scott is trying to reach it."

Discoverer of Mariposa Grove, Dead.

San Francisco, March 26.—Galen Clarke, the discoverer of the Mariposa Grove of big trees and for 20 years guardian of Yosemite Valley, is dead, aged 96. He will be buried in the valley in a tomb which he cut out for himself in a huge granite rock within a stone's throw of the Yosemite Falls.

Shaker Colony Passing Away.

Lebanon, Ohio, March 26.—Judge J. A. Ruhyan yesterday was appointed receiver of the United Society of Believers at Union Village, the Shaker colony here. The society owns property in this section estimated to be worth more than $500,000.

The receivership was declared in order to hold the 24 surviving members together until death shall have claimed all of them. Only four members are younger than 70 years.

When the last member dies the property will revert to the parent colony in Mount Lebanon, N.Y.

Double Drowning Near Chatham.

Chatham, March 26.—Drowned during Wednesday night, the bodies of John Cartwright, aged 16, and his uncle, Hugh Allen, aged 40, were found yesterday on the shore of Mitchell's Bay.

They were fishermen, and just how they came to be drowned is not known.

Declines to Form Cabinet.

Rome, March 26.—Signor Marcora, president of the Chamber of Deputies, has decline the invitation of King Victor Emmanual to form a new Cabinet, and Prof. Luigi Luzzatti, former Minister of the Treasury has been intrusted with the task.

$3.50 Recipe Cures Weak Kidneys, Free

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the growing muscle weakness; specks before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency.

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K 1810, Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. And you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

AETNA IS ON RAMPAGE

Villages of Belpasso and Nicolosi Are Saved From Destruction by the Molten Rock by a Timely Diversion of the Stream — Cardinal Will Take Saint's Veil to Ward Off the Danger to the Villages.

Catania, Sicily, March 26.—Aetna still is angry. From the top of the old crater volumes of white smoke are issuing to-day, while from the new craters that have formed lava is gushing and large incandescent masses are exploding with loud detonations and emissions of black smoke.

From Catania and along the entire railway surrounding Aetna thousands of persons are watching the volcano, following with telescopes the progress of the eruption.

The streams of lava already have surpassed in volume those of the eruption of 1892, but, changing their courses just as they reached Belpasso and Nicolosi, they have invaded the main roads near those two villages, which seemed thereby now to have been saved from destruction. The people are still fearful, but in both villages, soldiers are camped in the squares to avert a panic, while the mayors and parish priests are ministering to the needy.

Cardinal Francisca Nava, who returned yesterday to the scene of the eruptions, promised to bring back to the people of Nicolosi and Belpasso the veil of St. Agatha, which they believe has the power to stop the lava advancing.

Prof. Ricco, the director of the observatory on the volcano, despite a narrow escape from death yesterday, has returned to the lava fields. To those who advised prudence, he replied: "My post is now there."

It has now been ascertained that the openings from which the lava is issuing number 14. The heat from the currents is so intense that it is impossible to approach nearer than 150 feet to them. The progress down the mountain side of the lava now averages fifteen feet every seven minutes.

Late last night it was considered most probable that the streams would pass between Borrello and Nicolosi without touching them.

The people are pleading for assistance, especially for carts in which to remove their household effects from volcanic region. The Government has turned over to the prefect $2,000 with which to assist needy people. Yesterday morning the lava river had extended nine miles from its course.

During the past 48 hours the emission of lava, it is estimated, has amounted to 10,000,000 cubic yards.

Canadians Returning From U. S.

Boston, March 26.—A considerable movement of French-Canadians employed in New England industrial centres to Canada during the next few months is indicated by the reports of transportation agencies and by despatches from Ottawa and Montreal.

The Canadian Government officials who have colonization agents at work among former Canadians in New England state that the bulk of the repatriation movement is directed toward the new provinces in the Northwest, where free lands and other special inducements are offered to responsible settlers.

A despatch from Montreal states that nearly six hundred families will leave New England for the Northwest within a month.

U. S. Cattle Decrease.

Washington, D.C., March 26.—An increase of 12,000,000 in the population of the United States in the past ten years and a decrease of about five million in the number of available food animals, is the estimate made by the Bureau of Statistics from the reports on these two subjects, made respectively by the census bureau and the Department of Agriculture.

Another lesson in the law of supply and demand, deduced by the Bureau of Statistics, is that the supply of food animals has gone down three per cent., while the value has increased 22 per cent.

Minister of Finance Is Understood to Have Sent a Message to Sir Wilfrid Laurier Reporting a Satisfactory Settlement of the Tariff Question —Gravity of Situation Not Fully Realized In Canada.

Ottawa, March 26.—Official information received here from Washington is to the effect that a satisfactory outcome of the tariff difficulty is certain.

It is understood that Hon. W. S. Fielding has notified Sir Wilfrid Laurier that a happy outcome of the negotiations may be looked for.

Almost all the Cabinet Ministers are in town to-day, and those seen by your correspondent were in a cheerful mood when the Washington conference was referred to.

It is expected here that Mr. Fielding will make concessions on several articles which enjoy the intermediate tariff under the Franco-Canadian trade treaty.

It is constantly remarked in political circles in Ottawa that the people generally do not seem to realize the grave importance of the United States surtax of 25 per cent. It is not merely a 25 per cent. tax, but a 25 per cent. ad valorem, which means, for instance, that if the present duty on an article worth $20 is $1, the new duty under the 25 per cent. surtax would be $5 plus $1, or $6 in all. This, of course, would be practically prohibitive.

The banks, of course, have been wide awake to the prospect and have been insistent in their demands that the Canadian Government should do everything possible to bring about a compromise, but beyond the banks only a few of the industrial firms which do an export business have apparently realized the gravity of the situation.

Fielding Taft's Guest.

Washington, D.C., March 26.—Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada, arrived in Washington yesterday, and was the guest of President Taft at dinner last night.

Burglars In Theatre.

Toronto, March 26.—Melodrama returned to the Majestic Theatre in the early hours of yesterday morning, when a number of burglars forced an entry to the stage, broke into the carpenter's room and secured a number of his tools. With these they forced the door of the box office, and broke open the till and Manager Leslie's desk, but did not secure any money.

The door of the adjoining room, where the safe stands, was also broken. The safe is about three feet square, and very heavy, so the burglars did not attempt to blow it, but instead carried it bodily out into the inside lobby. At this juncture they were frightened by Mrs. MacNab, wife of the janitor, who heard them at work and started down stairs. The burglars fled leaving safe and tools.

More Alleged Frauds.

New York, March 26.—Two more importers were arrested yesterday, charged with defrauding the Government in conspiracy with assistant custom weighers. They were Enrico Prota and his clerk and agent, Alfonso Schettino.

New Method of Floating Steamer.

St. John's, Nfld., March 26.—The sealer Viking, with a catch of 24,000 seals, ashore off the Island of St. Piere, was released yesterday.

Captain Bartlett floated his steamer by a method that was unique. Massing his crew of 190 men on one side of the ship he ordered them to rush in a body to the other side, then back again and so on.

This manoeuvre caused the steamer to roll violently, she finally worked off the sand bank, and is proceeding to St. John's apparently uninjured.

SHOULDN'T GO OUT OF OTTAWA FOR PLAYERS

Fred Whitcroft Tells the Ottawa Magnates That They Have Material Enough at Home for a Team.

NEED NOT LOOK ABROAD

The Ottawa Citizen says:

Fred Whitcroft, utility forward of the Renfrew hockey team, is recognized as the champion storyteller of the National Hockey Association. "Whitty" will take you on a flying trip to the North Pole just as readily as he will tell you how he floated across the Rockies in an airship to sign on Lester Patrick for the Edmonton club. At the same time Whitty is one of the greatest hockey players in the game, a happy, good-natured lad, to whom Renfrew will hold out a big offer at the commencement of next season. He has been up and down the hockey ladder with many a team, has played in almost every league in the country and is as popular in the wild and woolly West as is Hans Wagner at Pittsburg. Therefore Whitcroft is in a position to hand out a few pointers on the hockey situation.

"Ottawa should never go outside the Capital for players," said Whitcroft recently, in discussing the big leaguers. "There are scores of youngsters in Ottawa who can make the best sit up and observe. Look at young Roberts? Why he was the mainstay of the Ottawa team in the Edmonton-Ottawa series. Look at Currie, Gaul, Broadbent, or any of the Cliffside or Ottawa II. players. I only wish we had them at Edmonton. Home-brewed players are always the most serviceable in my opinion, and it has always been my belief that a club should not go elsewhere in quest of a team until absolutely forced to do so."

"Whitty" also handed out a few toasters on the baseball situation. "Detroit for the American unless Donovan blows up," prophesized the far-famed Peterborough product. "And whisper low, Cincinnati for the National."

Whitty goes back to Edmonton in a day or two and with him will go the best wishes of hundreds of friends, whom he has recently made in Ottawa and Renfrew.

JEFF'S PEOPLE DO NOT APPRECIATE THE NOTORIETY

His People are Anything But Sports and do Not Favour the Fighting Game as an Occupation for Their Son.

DON'T NEED THE MONEY

Los Angeles, March 6.—Whether or not Mr. James J. Jeffries can "come back" as a fistic gladiator is to be decided by a committee of one, consisting of John Arthur Johnson. The committee has "power to act." But that Mr. Jeffries can "come back" as a celebrity has already been established. When he left Los Angeles some months ago to begin his tour of defiance his fellow townsmen hardly turned in the street to look at him. When he rode on a crowded street car they glared at him for a fat man who took altogether too much room.

Since his return home for a short visit with the "folks" before going into training camp he has stopped the traffic every time he has been seen on the street. The saloon of which he is ostensibly propretor is jammed to suffocation all day long by sports who live in the hope that the great man might, by some caprice, happen to come in. One day when he went to the bank the police had to turn in a riot call to clear the crowds.

Folks Dislike Notoriety.

The only persons in Los Angeles who do not seem much impressed by Jeffries in the role of champion of the world are the members of the Jeffries family. Jim's folks, as he calls them, are anything but sports, and the thing they like least about the big fellow is his notoriety.

You might look far and long to find a more simple, kindly people than the Jeffrieses — or a more affectionate family. Their family circle reminds one of 'Shore Acres,' and other down East dramas. Jim began active training for the big fight by chopping up eucalyptus wood for his mother.

Jim's father, as every one knows, is a religious enthusiast and independent evangelist. He has travelled around the world several times: preached to the Arabs in Arabia and the Jews in Palestine. He has written several tracts. He is, however, a jovial, merry, light-hearted old fellow, immeasurably proud of Jim. The 'champ' is equally proud of the old man.

"Did the old man spring any of his Bible love on you?" he says sometimes to a visitor who has been left alone with Jeffries sr. "Ain't he a wonder? You ought to hear him hand it out to some of these preachers who think they know the Bible."

Don't Need Jim's Money.

Many people have an idea that the whole Jeffries family live on the champion's prize fight money. The fact is that Jim's father came here in 1881, he bought about 100 acres of land, extending from their home place on Cypress avenue to the river. This land has been subdivided and sold as city lots, bringing Jim's father a comfortable fortune.

Jim's old brother, Tom, is a politician of much ability, with a fine reputation for integrity, also sagacity. Jim's other brothers, Charles and John are business men.

Jim lives next door to his father's home in an artistic cottage. Every room bespeaks the good taste of his wife, who prides herself on being a good housekeeper and who celebrated their home-coming by the fiercest spring house-cleaning ever seen on Cypress avenue.

Jeff is a well behaved husband. Intimate friends of the family tell what happens at meal time. One of Jim's peculiarities is that, in his slow way he is never ready to come to meals.

Following the dinner bell, the door opens and a very pretty and tastefully dressed woman cries: "James, come to dinner."

The Champ: "I'll be there in a minute, Mrs. Jeffries." (Pause).

The Lady: "Jim, please come to dinner at once."

The Champ (testily): "If you are in a hurry, go ahead and have your dinner."

The Lady (briefly but meaningly): "James."

The Champ (in obvious alarm): "Yes, I'm coming." (Exit Champ).

The Jeffries house is the realm of Mrs. Jeffries; the back yard is Jim's. He has his fine collection of blooded dogs in the back yard in big pens. A curious feature of Jeff's personality is that dogs always love him on sight. Dogs have repeatedly left their masters to follow him on the street.

Jim's special pride is a thoroughbred fox terrier, Teddy, which is the only dog having the run of the place. Next in favor are a wire-haired fox terrier and a fine young Ayrdale. Jim has a thoroughbred Russian wolfhound sent to him from Europe. He has conceived a violent dislike for the brute. It is a timorous, sneaking thing which seems afraid of its own shadow. Jims swears every time he looks at i.

One never hears Johnson's name spoken on the Jeffries' place. The whole family gathers in the back lot to watch Jeff dally with the woodpile. His father sits on a log and his mother leans on the back gate. There is no suggestion of prize fight in their talk

To his sporting friends in Los Angeles Jeff has said very little about the fight, except that he is going to end it as soon as he possibly can, without regard to moving pictures. He says that he anticipates a very short fight.

OLD CY YOUNG HOLDS LONG DISTANCE RECORD

Has Won Only Three Less Than the 500 Mark Since He Made His Debut in National League in 1890.

INTERESTING FIGURES

With the probable passing to the minor leagues of Jack Chesbro, ex-Highlander, and Schoolmaster Sam Leever, the faithful wheelhorse of the Pittsburg Pirates, there will be only five of the veteran twirlers left in the big league this season who can aspire to the honors won by Cy Young in the pitcher's box. Since Young made his debut in the National League in 1890 he has scored only three less than 500 victories.

When it is remembered that Christy Mathewson and Vic Willis, the nearest rivals of Young, have yet to win thirteen and sixteen games respectively before they have chalked up 250 victories the achievement of the grand old man may well be looked on as wonderful. Those who had watched the work of Matty the closest figure that he can remain in the game as long as Young has. At that he will have to maintain a consistent record to equal Young's record. Willis is now the oldest pitcher in point of continuous service in the National League. During his four years with the Pittsburg Club he won 89 games and lost 46, an average of .652 per cent. Whether he will do so well with Roger Bresnahan's Cardinals remains to be seen.

KID NICHOLS WON 312 GAMES.

Clark Griffith and Kid Nichols although not pitching now, were in the game recently enough to recall their records with the other old-timers. Nichols in thirteen years won 312 games, while Griffith had 226 victories to his credit in twelve seasons.

Jack Powell, who is still working, broke into fast company in 1897, opening with the Cleveland club. During his first season he worked in twenty-six contests and succeeded in pulling out fifteen wins. He showed better form during the next season, and, as a result, the best average of his career was placed opposite his name in the record steadily until 1908, when he broke through with sixteen victories to thirteen losses, making a mark of .552. He was in the slump last season and the mark of .428 tells the story of his work. During the thirteen years of his endeavour Powell won but 225 games.

Sam Leever is one of the pitchers who made a good, steady record for the last eleven years. He began his work with a shut-out victory and finished that season with a percentage of .488. His work has been exceptionally consistent and he has always ranked near the top. It was in 1905 that President Pulliam gave him first rank over the forty-nine slab artists. Leever has brought home the bacon just 187 times since he began pitching and tied many games. Owing to a difference with Manager Fred Clarke it is unlikely that Leever will wear a Pittsburg uniform this season.

HAPPY JACK CHESBRO IS OUT OF IT

Jack Chesbro and Deacon Phillippe are men who have been in the game some years. Chesbro began strong, and after breaking about even for two years, pitched to a good mark in 1901; but after that began to go back until in 1908 his name did not appear among those who had officiated in the regulation fifteen.

Phillippe, who came into prominence, at about the same time as Christy Mathewson, has won but 172 games. He has been very consistent in his box work, as his record shows. Phillippe began strong and continued to improve with a few years of seasoning. His mark last year was up to the standard.

But the achievements of these vets, although those of Leever and Phillippe show consistent efforts from one season to another, sink into obscurity when the musty records of old Cy Young and the brilliant, steady work of Christy Mathewson are taken into consideration.

The records of the several veterans follow:

	Seasons	Won	Lost	P.C.
Young	19	497	297	.626
Mathewson	10	237	109	.645
Willis	12	234	201	.538
Powell	13	225	203	.523
Leever	11	187	92	.672
Chesbro	11	213	44	.590
Phillippe	10	172	109	.612

The record of Griffith and Nichols who are no longer in the game, but who hold long distance records are:

	Seasons	Won	Lost	P.C.
Nichols	13	312	186	.627
Griffith	12	226	135	.626

A PROSPECTOR'S LUCK

How Two Trail Blazers Lived in the Virgin Wilderness Without Meat.

Winter sends acute hardships to the prospector who leaves civilization to draw conclusions with chance, in the endeavour to make a paying "strike" and make himself independent for life. How the hardship of a depleted pack was overcome by two sturdy adventurers is evidenced by the following, prompted by the impulse of real appreciation:

Porcupine Trail, Ont.,
Feb. 6th, 1910.

Battle Creek Toasted Corn Flake Co., Limited, London, Ont.:

Gentlemen,—Have prospected these parts for several months, removed from civilization, difficult to get supplies, obliged to draw loaded toboggan for miles through bush, snow four or five feet deep, forty three or more miles from settlement, carrying only tent, prospector's outfit and grub for thirty days. A case of your Corn Flakes was one of the articles taken in, the writer's favourite breakfast dish. This proved a very valuable pack as we ranshort of supplies and for days subsisted on one full meal; excepting a breakfast of Corn Flakes, canned cream and coffee. We gauged our supplies to make them last until our return to Porcupine Lake; but ran short and rather than make the eighty mile journey, cut rations and fairly lived on Corn Flakes for eight days, having two full meals a day on this food and the latter few days without cream, merely Corn Flakes, sugar and hot water.

We thrived on it; did full days' work, even more than formerly, as we rushed things to completion, and two healthier, stronger and fleeter fellows than we haven't travelled these trails. We finished the case of Corn Flakes; and one of our first purchases was another, It is a favourite article of diet in our camp and we will always recommend it to others.

In a country like this, Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes are worth more than their weight in gold. We are pleased to sing their praises, as we benefitted greatly by them, and at a time when it meant much to us.

Very truly yours,
Merry Christmas,
P. SHEEHAN.

Indigestion Cured

This disease from which so many suffer gives the average physician a great deal of trouble. The best medical men have endorsed PSYCHINE, and recommended it in scores of the most obstinate cases. It has never failed in a single instance to give prompt relief. When directions have been followed, a few doses will remove that tightness and weight on the stomach. Taken regularly it positively cures General Distress, Flatulency, Nervousness, Coated Tongue, Heart Burn and Palpitation. If you have never used PSYCHINE, don't hesitate a moment longer. Try PSYCHINE to-day.

PROOF

Mr. Arthur Tenaison, 88 London Street, Toronto, says: "For six or seven years I was troubled with indigestion and dyspepsia. Too much acidity of the stomach the doctors said, originated the troubles. I tried scores of remedies without avail. Eventually I used PSYCHINE and this brought immediate relief and cure."

NO HOME SHOULD BE WITHOUT PSYCHINE

It prevents the children taking cold, wards off that terrible malady, La Grippe, and completely fortifies them against disease. It should always be used for colds weariness, loss of appetite, bronchitis and weak lungs.

For sale by all druggists and dealers, 50 cents and $1.00.

A GENEROUS OFFER

Wm. Madill Will Refund Your Money if Parisian Sage Doesn't Banish Dandruff.

Pretty strong talk, perhaps you'll say, but it's honest talk, every word of it, because if Wm. Madill was not absolutely certain, if he did not know from actual results obtained, he could not make such a generous offer.

Parisian Sage, which can now be obtained in every town in Canada, is also guaranteed to stop falling hair, and itching scalp.

It is the ideal, delightful, rejuvenating hair dressing that makes hair grow in abundance. Parisian Sage is a prime favourite with women, because it keeps the hair brilliant and fascinating, is daintily perfumed, and is not sticky or greasy.

The price for a large bottle is only 50 cents at Wm. Madill's, who guarantees it. Sold everywhere, or direct all charges prepaid, by the Canadian makers, Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

WEDDING BELLS

McCOLLUM—COLINSON.

The following from the Orillia Packet gives the particulars of the wedding of Mr. H. A. (Bert) McCollum, formerly of Peterborough. His friends here will read the account with interest:

The marriage of Miss Emily Colinson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wright, and Mr. Herbert Alexander McCollum, was solemnized in St. James' church at high noon on Saturday last, the nineteenth of March. The Rev. Canon Greene performed the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. H. D. Raymond and the Rev. F. G. Wallace, of Woodstock, a relative of the groom. The church was decorated with palms and ferns by the Chancel Guild, and a beautiful floral bell by the Flower Mission, of which the bride was a member. Mr. G. Frost, the organist, played the wedding march as the bridal party entered the church. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of ivory oriental satin, over taffeta silk, the yoke and sleeves of Point d'Angleterre lace, trimmings of Lyons silk embroidery motifs and pearls, the draped skirt being outlined with pearl lace. She wore the tulle veil and orange blossoms, formerly worn by her mother, and carried a sheaf of cream roses. The only ornament was an amethyst and pearl brooch, a gift from her mother. Miss Katherine Wright, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and was gowned in pink silk crepe cloth over taffeta silk, with trimmings of oriental satin and guipure lace, large natural Leghorn hat, banked with pink moss roses and black velvet facing. She wore a pearl pendant cross and carried a sheaf of pink roses, a gift from the groom. The groom was supported by his cousin, Dr. John A. McCollum, of Toronto, who received as a gift a handsome tie pin. Mr. W. J. MacFadden, Orillia. Mr. J. S. Blickensderfer, C.E., Cincinnati, Ohio, and Mr A. G. Barnett, Toronto, acted as ushers, each receiving pearl pins. At the conclusion of the ceremony a reception was held, where the relatives and a few intimate friends were invited. Mr. and Mrs. McCollum left for the South, the bride wearing a cream broadcloth three-piece suit, handsomely braided, and coat in Russian style, trimmed with corded silk and touches of gold, with a French bluette all-flowered toque.

EASTER EATABLE ATTRACTIONS AT HARRY BRADSHAW'S

Eatable attractions are the features at Harry Bradshaw's busy corner grocery, fruit and fish stores, Nos. 350 and 352 Charlotte street. Conspicuous in the abundance of good things to eat are cases of fine flavoured, extra juicy oranges selected for the Easter trade. The two stores are laden with dainty table hints for housekeepers. Of course you'll be here for your pineapples, bananas, lemons, and other foreign fruits. We bought them right and you get the benefit. A tempting list of fresh fish of various kinds in splendid condition. Also, choice young garden vegetables, lettuce, celery, onions, rhubarb, etc. Both 'phones 271.

OBITUARY.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Martin took place yesterday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery and was largely attended. The late Mrs. Martin is survived by three brothers and four sisters. They are Mrs. Robert McCracken, of Dummer, Mrs. Jas. Little of Dummer, Mrs. Jas. Boyd, North Monaghan, Mrs. L. Welsh, of Otonabee, Rev. T. J. Smith, Ingleford, Sask., Mr. Henry Hughes, of Swift Current, Sask., and Mr. John Hughes, East City. One son, William E. Martin and two daughters, Miss Annie and Miss Jessie reside at home.

G. N. SMALLEY.

Mr. G. N. Smalley, the gentleman sportsman of Boston, Mass., passed away last January the 9th, 1910, at Arkansas Springs.

He will no doubt be remembered by a great many of this city, having visited each fall, his shooting box, situated in Keef's farm, Rice Lake, for the past thirty years. He was a true sportsman and took great interest in the protection of game. He was a bachelor and left a large fortune.

WILLIAM A. STAUNTON.

A particularly sad death occurred Good Friday morning at 11.20 o'clock, when Mr. William Anthony Staunton passed away after three days' illness, with pneumonia, at his late residence, 20 Benson Avenue.

Mr. Staunton was born in Clifden, County Galway, Ireland, and received his education in Trinity University, Dublin. In 1861 he was married to Margaret Hussey, of Lindsay, who predeceased him two years ago.

The deceased has been a highly respected resident of Peterborough for twenty-one years, coming here from Orillia, was a devoted member of St. John's church, and a staunch Conservative in politics.

He leaves to mourn his loss Capt. W. R. Staunton, Port Arthur; Mrs. T. W. Wood, Orillia, Mrs. S. F. M. Touchbourne, "Pinchurst," Ida; Mrs. James Pavitt Archer, Campbellford; Mr. Wilfrid J. Staunton, Spokane, Wash., and Miss Maud, Ernest, Clarence and Harvie, of this city.

General sympathy is extended to the family in their bereavement, as it is only a fortnight since the death of their eldest brother.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence, 20 Benson street, to Little Lake cemetery.

MRS. PATRICK KILLEN.

After a short illness Mrs. Patrick Killen passed away this morning at her residence, 292 Dalhousie street. The deceased was seventy-four years of age and lived the greater part of her life in Ennismore, coming to this city two years ago. A family of six boys and one girl are left to mourn her loss. The boys are Patrick, of this city, and Samuel, Henry, and William, Richard and James, of Ennismore. Mrs. J. R. Hickson, the only daughter, resides in Ennismore.

The funeral will take place on Monday, at 9 o'clock, to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to St. Martin's Cemetery, Ennismore, for interment.

WILLIAM FERGUSON.

The death occurred yesterday at noon of William Ferguson. The late Mr. Ferguson was 69 years of age, and lived the greater part of his life in Pennsylvania, returning to Peterborough about two years ago owing to his failing health.

He is survived by one little daughter, Dorothy.

Funeral from the home of his brother, Mr. James Ferguson 496 Bonaccord street on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock for interment at the Little Lake cemtery.

Investment Syndicates

DO YOU understand clearly our investment syndicate plan?

Here it is in a nutshell.

You have $50 or $100 or $500 that you want to make earn money for you.

You take the $100, for instance, and put in some place—eminently safe, of course—and at the end of twelve months you will have $103, or 3 per cent. for the use of your money.

NOW, our contention is that your money should earn you more than that, and if someone could show you how, at the end of 12 months, you could have $50 or more to show as the earnings of your $100, and still have the $100 intact—you would be glad to consider the plan.

WE know from personal observation that money judiciously used on the New York Stock market will earn easily 50 per cent., and many times much more. We also know that small amounts of money are very liable to be lost in this line, because the transactions lack sufficient cash capital to protect them during sudden fluctuations.

THIS weak point covered and there is no surer, safer or quicker way of making big money than by investing in accepted listed securities. And this is exactly what our syndicate system does—it furnishes a 25 point protection on all transactions, and by thus eliminating the big element of risk—makes the proposition a more certain investment undertaking than a big majority of business ventures that are applauded and recommended b ythe ultra-conservative.

SO we say to you, send us your $50 or $100 or $500, and we will put it with the money of several other investors until we have a sum of $2,500, which we will call, for instance, Syndicate B.

WITH this capital of $2,500 of Syndicate B, we propose to operate—waiting until market conditions are right, and we buy or sell, as the case may be, 100 shares of some security on which conditions are ripe for a change. We have invested $100 of Syndicate B's money, and have $2,400 left to protect the $100, should this market go adversely. The market changes one point, and we have made $100 for the syndicate, or 4 per cent. on the syndicate capital, less our 1-8 commission of $12.50. It changes five points and $500 is made, or 20 per cent. on the capital.

We are in close touch with the market by special wire and close out the transaction with $500 to the good for Syndicate B, and withdraw the capital of the syndicate from the market until, in our opinion, the conditions are ripe for another deal.

IN the meantime, while the capital of Syndicate B lies dormant, we pay 6 per cent. on the money. Doesn't this look good to you?

BESIDES, there are these salient points—you can withdraw your credit balance at any time, by giving a three-day notice—you will receive each week statements of the transactions of the syndicate you are interested in—you can investigate the books and check up the documents of your syndicate at any time, and you can withdraw your profits at the end of each month.

EACH syndicate will deal in only 100 shares at a time, thus always having a 25 point protection. We can only make money by handling the business of many of these syndicates, for our charges are the regular commission of 1-8 each way, or $12.50 for each 100 shares handled.

OUR New York connections are with the most reliable and conservative houses—members of the New York Stock Exchange, who have never failed in business and are of the highest integrity.

THERE is no time like the present. The market is splendid for trading. Watch it yourself, and let us show you what we can make for you in profits. If still in doubt, ask us for further particulars.

Send us your New York Business even if you don't wish to join a Syndicate.

ONE YEAR IN CENTRAL

Larry Kelly Gets Twelve Months on Charge of Stealing Watches and Lockets From Toronto Jewellery Traveller.

PLEADED GUILTY

Larry Kelly pleaded guilty to having stolen one hundred and twenty-six gold lockets and fourteen gold watches from a traveller at the Oriental hotel, and was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison by Judge Huycke on Saturday.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, for the defendant, addressed the court. The evidences of the plan in order to obtain the goods, he said, showed that Kelly was not a criminal. Since he came to this country he had been working steadily on farms throughout the province, "VanNorman is as much to blame as Kelly," remarked Mr. Gordon, as he obtained the key to open the door, but he is going around without a charge against him."

At this point P. C. Newhall swore he arrested Kelly on a charge of vagrancy.

Mr. Gordon asked for a short term in order to give the prisoner a chance to reform.

Judge Huycke remarked that it was deliberate theft, so there was no doubt but that the prisoner was guilty. The prisoner did not deserve the consideration of a boy. He had not done it on the spur of the moment, but planned it out.

The sentence of the court upon you, Larry Kelly," he said in conclusion, "is one year in Central Prison."

The costumes worn by Florence Gear in "Fluffy Ruffles" should be of particular interest to Peterborough ladies. They are said to be extremely handsome. "Grand", to - morrow evening. 4d-69

YOUNG WOMAN'S BODY FOUND ON FIRE ESCAPE

Was Lured to Flat by Fake "Help Wanted" Ad. and Body is Discovered Half Burned in an Old Gunny Sack---Albert Walter Arrested.

New York, March 28.—The body of Ruth Wheeler, the little girl graduate who was lured from her widowed mother last Thursday by a decoy offer of employment, was found late Saturday afternoon huddled in a gunny sack, on a fire escape outside the apartment of Albert Wolter, the man charged with her abduction. She had been strangled with a short end of rope, hacked with a knife, burned beyond recognition, and thrust carelessly out of doors like so much rubbish.

Identification was possible only by shreds of clothing and fragments of jewelry, but there was abundant evidence of how the murder had been done. Around the neck were the charred fibres of manila rope burnt into the flesh. The apartment reeked with kerosene. There were oil stains in front of the newly-painted fireboard that had an open grate.

The girl's clothing and hair had been saturated with kerosene, the fireboard had been removed and the body thrust up the chimney, standing. When the match was touched to her, she burned like a torch. Probably the murderer had hoped for an opportunity to remove the body under cover of night, but when the girl's disappearance raised such an uproar and he began to suspect he was shadowed, he had packed up and fled.

A neighbor living on the same floor of an adjoining house noticed the lumpy bundle outside his window and thinking it refuse, poked it off the fire escape into the back yard with a broom handle. The bundle moved obstinately and fell with a crash. His curiosity aroused, the neighbor hurried down stairs for the janitor to investigate.

Ruth Wheeler was fifteen years of age, the youngest of three sisters bred by their mother, a dressmaker, to self-support. Both the elder sisters are stenographers, and Ruth had just been graduated from a business college.

The girl had been carefully brought up. She was never on the streets at night, and her failure to come home for 24 hours without explanation meant more than a caprice. The next morning her sisters, Pearl and Adelaide, in serious concern, went to the college and learned that the following postcard had been turned over to her:

"Dear Madam: Please call in reference to position of stenographer at residence of the secretary. (Signed) A. Wolter, 122 East 105th street."

Investigation at the address given soon showed that Wolter, whom his landlady described as a sickly, white-faced youth of about twenty, with flashy clothes and elaborately curled hair, had left the apartment where he had lived with his wife, earlier in the same day. He received many calls from young girls, said the landlady, and she had particularly noticed that the last one who called was fresher of face and better dress than the ordinary run of them.

With Wolter fled, the detectives waited for his wife. When she appeared they trailed her to a corner, where she met a man answering Wolter's description. He was immediately arrested, taken back to the room he had vacated, and searched. At first he denied writing postal cards to the schools, but when detectives turned up answers from business schools, addressed to him at various house numbers, he admitted the correspondence, but could not explain it.

Before a magistrate he had nothing to say, but to others he admitted that the woman with whom he was living is not his wife. He met her shortly after coming to this country from Germany two years ago, he said; they fell in love and set up housekeeping. Last summer he and she had worked at Irvington-on-the-Hudson at a boarding-house. They came to this city last month and, since then the woman had supported him by working in a laundry.

The parents of Albert Wolter, when found, told in broken English of the difficulties their son had brought upon them.

"He was always crazy about women," said the mother. "From the time he was a little boy it was always dancing, pleasure, women, women with him."

Ernest Gilbert Accidentally Shot And Seriously Injured

Companion Carrying a Loaded 22 Calibre Rifle, Tripped and Gun Was Discharged, the Bullet Hitting Gilbert.

IS NOW IN HOSPITAL

Ernest Gilbert, twenty years of age, an employee of the Canadian General Electric Company, who lives with his brother, Chas. Gilbert, on Lafayette Avenue, was accidentally shot and seriously injured yesterday afternoon while in company with a number of companions squirrel hunting in Dobbin's woods, North Monaghan, about three miles from the city. He now lies in Nicholls Hospital in a precarious condition with a bullet from a 22 calibre Stevens' rifle lodged in his kidney, as the result of the accidental discharge of a weapon in the hands of one of his companions, Ormond Spilsbury, Donegal St.

It appears that Gilbert in company with his brother, Spilsbury and a number of others walked out to the woods yesterday afternoon. There were two rifles in the party of which Spilsbury carried one. Soon after reaching the woods the party spread out and Ernest Gilbert was walking some distance in front of Spilsbury when the latter who was carrying a loaded 22 Stevens, tripped and fell and in so doing, discharged the weapon. Gilbert screamed and fell to the ground and his startled companions on running to him found that the bullet had struck him in the right side just below the ribs. He was suffering terribly and seeing that they could do nothing for him, his friends hurried to the home of Mr. Andrew Dobbin, near by, to secure a vehicle to bring the unfortunate youth into the city. Mr. Dobbin started to bring him to Peterborough in a buggy, but met Leslie Stevens in his automobile a short distance from the woods and transferred the injured boy to him. He was taken in the automobile to Dr. Young's and the latter sent him to Nicholls Hospital, where he was operated on by Dr. Young. It was discovered that the bullet had struck him in the right side below the ribs and missing the intestines, had entered the kidney, where it lodged. His condition is serious, although he passed a good night, and there has been no change for the worse to-day.

250 People Were Killed In Fire In An Hotel

Special to The Examiner:

Mate, Szalad, Hungary, March 28.—Two hundred and fifty persons were killed and many others injured in the Village of Ockoerite last night, when fire broke out in a hotel, which had been fitted up as a ball room and was crowded with several hundred guests, when the fire started. The roof of the building, a wooden structure, fell in, burying the panic-stricken crowd. Hundreds were present in the inn when the fire broke out, and owing to the panic that seized the merry-makers, few were enabled to escape.

LOST $180,000 AT FARO

Young Bank Clerk Admits That He Spent That Sum Trying to Break Bank.

Special to The Examiner.

Cambridge, Mass., March 26.—In a confession made yesterday, George W. Coleman, the young man charged with embezzlement from the National City Bank of Cambridge, admitted that he took $180,000, and that practically every cent of it was lost in trying to "break a faro bank" in New York. Coleman stated that he was introduced to the game by a Boston man several years ago, and lost $35,000 of his own at that time. Two years later he met other Boston men who interested him in the game, he said, and between last May and February he made at least fifty trips to New York, taking with him each time sums varying from $2,000 to $5,000, all of which he lost. These men, says Coleman, knew where the money was coming from, as he had told them he was getting "in wrong."

The alleged disclosures were made at Coleman's home in Cambridge, in the presence of two Cambridge police officials, Coleman's attorney, Henry H. Winslow, Wilson W. Lockhart, the young assistant of Coleman at the bank, who is also charged with embezzlement, and a newspaper reporter.

THE CANADIAN NAVY.

A gentleman asked The Examiner this morning, "Why don't you "knock" this Canadian Navy idea?" For the best of reasons. The Examiner is not what is described, in street parlance, a "knocker." It is rather an optimist, and believes in and advocates, progress; advocates everything that can promote the progress of the city, the province and the Dominion. The Examiner—and thank goodness, it is not alone in this belief—believes in Canada, and appreciates, as far as our knowledeg goes, the extent and value of our national and natural resources, and believes in an aggressive policy of development, by every means within the range of our financial possibilities. To secure this, transportation, that is internal transportation, has to be provided, has been and is being provided. We have dug and are digging canals; we have built and are building railways, to develop our interior to populate our wheat lands and to bring to the seaboard the crops that are grown and are to be grown. As a natural corollary we should put ourselves in a position to transport our wheat and other products across the seas to the distant markets of the world; for our trade is reaching out to embrace the whole world..

To accomplish this we must have our own shipping, and being a self-contained country in the matter of the essential requisites of ship-building, we should build our own ships as we produce the goods to load them. Our Canadian shipping business is growing. In 1900 the grain carrying business of the Welland Canal amounted to 239,338 tons, carried in Canadian bottoms; in ten years in 1910, it had grown by more than 100 per cent. or to 550,276 tons. Much of this increase is due to increased grain production, but some of it is due to the fact that Canada is now building its own lake marine and it making a good beginning. While the increase in the ten years ending 1909 in Canadian borne grain in the Welland Canal was 100 per cent., the amount carried in United tSates bottoms remained stationary.

Canada has important lines of ocean steamers, but none of them are built in Canada. We must change all that. Parliament has practically decided to build a Canadian Navy. Parliament has approved of the project and the bill to create it is now in the committee stage and wil ldoubtless be passed in due course. The policy of the Laurier government is to build the ships to constitute the Canadian Navy in Canada. They will be built of Canadian material, give employment to Canadian workmen, and be manned by Canadian seamen. This is a truly national policy, and the starting point of a great Canadian shipbuilding industry. We have all the resources in abundance. We have the iron mines, we have have the coal deposits. We have a practical monopoly of the nickel used in producing armour plate. We have made great stidres in the production of steel, and we have only to instal machinery and borrow a few skilled workmen from British ship yards to help us make a begining, to coach Canadian workmen; and our Canadian mechanics as inteligent as any in the world, can soon become skilful and, as far as knowing how to build ships is concerned, independent. From building warships to building merchant steamers, the transition is easy. We know how to do that now. At Collingwood and Toronto we can build as good steel passenger and freight steamers as any country in the world. We can make the building of a Canadian navy the beginning of the building of our ocean going steamers. There is no reason in the world why the Allan Line steamers and all the other lines of Canadian sea-going steamers, the steamers of the C.P.R. and G.T.P. and the C.N.R. should not be built in Canada We can do the work, we have all the resources; we have only to begin. The Canadian navy, built in Canada, will be the beginning; it will set the ball rolling and before the century is at its middle age, Canada will be the builder of its own ships and possibly be able to build ships for other countries These, generally stated, are the reasons why The Examiner does not only not 'knock' the Canadian navy, but warmly advocates it. It will be a means to an end and that end more important than the navy itself — the inception and development of a great ship buil ling industry, for which Canada has all the natural resources in abundance ,and which will engage great capital, give extensive employment to Canadian labour and give an impulse to general development, marking one of the most important industrial and commercial enterprise known to Canada or the world.

A VENTRILOQUIST

Philadelphia Policeman Shows Some New Tactics.

Philadelphia, March 26.—Through his ability as a ventriloquist and his nerve, Special Policeman Crowley, at the Reading Terminal, arrested twenty men single handed. 'The Reading Terminal officials have complained of late of the many vagrants who come to the station and try to sleep the night through on the benches. Last night there was an unusually large number of these wanderers and Policeman Crowley conceived the plan of arresting all that were there at midnight. Without the help of any other person he routed the sleepers from their naps and, lining them up in single file started them off from the Terminal for the station house. In the roundup he had used his voice to imitate other men as though he had a detail of half a dozen policeman with him. The sleepers were too tired to look closely and they observed Crowley's command implicitly.

USUALLY ONE DOSE ENDS INDIGESTION

Dyspepsia, Heartburn, Gas and All Stomach Distress Vanishes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure Indigestion.

To make every bite of food you eat aid in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your stomach of poisons, excessive acid and stomach gas which sours your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Griping, etc. Your case is no different — you are a stomach sufferer, though you may call it by some other name; your real and only trouble is that which you eat does not digest, but quickly ferments and sours producing almost any unhealthy condition.

A case of Pape's Diapepsin will cost fifty cents at any Pharmacy here, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at any drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort all of any kind of food you eat.

WALKING FISH

Something New in the Finny Tribe Line —Has Four Legs.

Vancouver, B. C., March 26.—The Maitai brought word of an extraordinary creature which has arrived at Sydney, N.S.W. This is called a walking fish. It arrived by the steamer Eastern from China. There were other strange passengers under Captain W. G. McArthur's care when the Eastern berthed. But the walking fish was easily the celebrity of the collection. It was caught in the West river, near Canton. The Captain brought it for the Sydney zoo, and the authorities accepted the strange present.

The fish, which might be best described as having a head exactly similar to a flat-head, possesses four short legs, and a tail that is an exact replica of a catfish's. Whilst the head is very flat, the body, from midway, takes a turn sideways, and the tail is therefore wide in the perpendicular.

The walking fish is about two feet long and has lived in a tub of fresh water on the Eastern, its diet being boiled rice. A cover was put over the barrel, and a big stone put on that again, but the screeching of one of the native quartermasters one night announced that the walking fish had escaped. It had actually crawled over the sleeping sailor. It seems that its powers of locomotion are doubled at night, as it gets about round the deck very quickly after dark. It is the only thing of its kind ever seen in this part of the world, and the Chinese aboard the Eastern say the species is rare in China now, but that specimens are caught occasionally in Japan.

THE MARATHON DANCE

A Grotesque Development of the Endurance Contest.

Special to The Examiner:

New York, March 26.—The World says: A grotesque development of the endurance contest as applied to amusements is the "Marathon" dance, a characteristic example of which was furnished in Brooklyn the other night when sixteen couples engaged in an hour-and-a-half dancing competition for prizes. An edifying spectacle it must have been to see the contesting "teams" clad as lightly as decency allowed, sustained by stimulants and numbered and tagged for identification and to facilitate betting, as they moved their laboured way around the hall, interrupted only by the removal of young women dancers from the floor as they fainted. A spectacle calculated to make Terpsichore weep at the degradation of her art. Yet this, it appears, was only a mild form of Marathon dance. One at San Francisco last week lasted for fifteen hours and six minutes, or until broken up by the police on the recommendation of physicians. This, of course, is a perversion of pleasure. Yet apart from aesthetic considerations it is obvious that a Marathon dance imposes a strain on the vitality which makes it in the highest degree dangerous. Dancing in moderation is one of the most healthful of exercises. Pursued under the abnormal conditions of a six-day bicycle race, in foul atmosphere, to the limit of the endurance it passes from a pleasure to a crime against the physical well-being of the dancer.

ENTERTAINED CLASS

Young Men's Bible Class of Gilmour Memorial Were Guests of Their Teacher.

The Young Men's Bible Class, of the Gilmour Memorial church, Smith, were the guests of their teacher, Mr. A. H. Campbell, at a delightful banquet on Thursday evening last. An interesting toast list was run off, Mr. W. G. Scott, the president of the class, making a most acceptable toast master. Twenty-three were in attendance at the function, which was thoroughly enjoyable and successful.

The principal theme discussed was the relation of the young man to the church and the subject was instructively treated by Rev. J. R. Bonner, the pastor, and Mr. Fred Scott. Each member of the class spoke briefly in appreciation of the painstaking instruction of their teacher and expressed their gratitude for the splendid spread provided. A very hearty vote of thanks was passed to Mr. and Mrs. Campbell at the conclusion of the banquet.

Games were played after the banquet and the evening was brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

PEOPLE'S PULPIT.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

CHRIST'S ASCENSION FROM HADES

"He led forth a multitude of captives and gave gifts unto men" (Ephesians iv, 8).

Allentown, Pa., March 27.—As Christendom celebrates the resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ, it is appropriate that our hearts and minds should intelligently grasp the significance of the event commemorated. St. Paul laid great stress upon the resurrection of the dead, declaring that if there be no resurrection of the dead all those whom we counted as asleep would never have an awakening, and consequently would be as dead as are brute beasts. Note his emphatic statement to this effect (I. Corinthians xv., 12-18). For here as elsewhere his words contradict the thought that the saintly dead pass immediately to glory and the unsaintly to Purgatory or to eternal torture.

According to the Gospel of Christ, of which St. Paul declares that he was not ashamed, the dead are to be esteemed as though they were asleep—at rest from all the commotion and turmoil and strife, ignorance and superstition and sin and trouble incident to the present reign of sin and death. They have truly entered into rest, whether they were saints or sinners. When the time for their awakening shall have come in the Millennial morning of Christ's reign of righteousness, surrounding conditions will be very different from what they are to-day, thank God! Then Satan will be bound, the Bible assures us (Revelation xx., 1-3), and the ignorance and superstition, selfishness and crime, which have for centuries marked his reign will gradually draw to a close, for the glorious Messiah-King will not permit them. His reign, on the contrary, will be marked with the true enlightenment of all mankind; and the result will be, as foretold; namely, "Every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God" (Isaiah xiv., 23).

Gradually the world will be brought to an Edenic condition, in harmony with the Divine promise. Indeed, this work may be said to be already beginning. Already, by artesian wells and irrigation processes and highways of travel and good roads and intelligent cultivation of fields, the earth begins to bloom and the wilderness and solitary place to be glad, as foretold by Isaiah the prophet (Isaiah xxxv, 1).

Under these blessed conditions "All that are in their graves shall hear the voice of the Son of man and shall come forth" (John v, 28, 29)—not all at once, but "Every man in his own order" (1. Corinthians xv, 23). The saintly believers, who alone are fully pleasing to God, will come forth in the First, or chief, or preferable, Resurrection—come forth perfect, on the spirit plane, like unto the angels and like unto their glorified Redeemer, to be his joint-heirs in his Millennial Kingdom and its great work of resuscitating, instructing and ruling and uplifting all the "groaning" families of the earth (Romans viii, 22). Thus will be fulfilled God's promise to the spiritual Seed of Abraham, "In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed" (Galatians iii, 29). Gradually, after dealing with the living nations to some extent, the sleeping world will be awakened. "Every man in his own order" (1. Corinthians xv, 23).

Our Lord assures us that all except the saintly few will come forth from the tomb that they may have a resurrection—a raising up out of sin and death conditions to righteousness, to the image of God that was lost by Adam; and that eventually, if willing and obedient, they will receive God's gift of eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord. But the rebellious under those favorable conditions are assured, will be cut off from life entirely in the Second Death (Acts iii, 19-23).

In speaking of the world's resurrection our Redeemer designates it a resurrection by judgments (Rev. Ver. John v, 28, 29). Messiah's righteous judgments will then be abroad in the world. The light of knowledge will be as clear as the noon-day sun. Every good deed and endeavor will receive its reward and every wilfully evil deed will receive chastisements, corrections, to the intent that they may learn the advantages of the way of holiness and go up thereon to life eternal, which the willing and obedient may reach by the close of the Millennial Age.

Through the prophet Daniel, the Lord declares that many of the worldly who now sleep in the dust of the earth shall come forth unto shame and lasting contempt. We can readily realize the shame that will be theirs when the light of full knowledge shall prevail and all of their past shall stand revealed to themselves and to others in its true colors. We can well understand that this will bring contempt to many now highly esteemed amongst men. But we can rejoice in the thought that the Millennial Kingdom then to be in power will deal graciously with all. The stripes of punishment will be tempered with mercy; and gradually by their change of character the contemptible ones will cease to be contemptible. The transforming power of grace and Truth now operating in the Church will be equally forceful then, operating upon the world of mankind. As perfection is gradually attained the shame of the imperfection will gradually abate, while all of the shameless will be destroyed in the Second Death. Thus we see the Divine Purpose of the resurrection of the dead and our glorious hope, far different from all the fears that were taught us by the musty traditions of men, from the "dark ages." And thus we see the force of the Apostle's words that if there be no resurrection of the dead our hope is vain, our faith is vain (I. Corinthians xv, 14-19).

The Apostle argues, "If the dead rise not," if that is an impossibility so far as the world in general is concerned, then it is an impossibility so far as Christ is concerned. And "if Christ be not risen," then all hope, all faith, is vain. And all preaching is not only foolish, but worse. (See I. Corinthians xv, 14.) "But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept." The mere awakening from sleep, as in the case of Lazarus, Dorcas and others, is here left out of the question. Nothing is counted as resurrection except the full, complete raising up out of death. Our Lord was the "first that should rise from the dead" (Acts xxvi, 23), in this full sense. And he was a first fruits, or proof, that others still sleeping will come forth by Divine Power to be exercised by him in the resurrection morning—the Millennial morning. The Church will be the next in order—she is to be the Bride-Consort of the Great King and to participate with him in his glorious work of uplifting the race which fell from the Divine image into sin and death through father Adam. The redemption-price has been provided in the death of Jesus; and the time for beginning the great work of "restitution of all things" merely waits until the completion of the election of the saintly Church (Acts iii, 19-21).

Preaching on the Day of Pentecost, St. Peter declares that God raised Christ from the dead. Then in proof that this was the Divine intention from the beginning, he quotes from the prophetic Psalm of David, "Thou shalt not leave my soul in hell." The Apostle's quotation (Acts ii, 27) is in the Greek, in which the word hell is hades. His quotation is from the Hebrew, in which the word hell is sheol—the only word rendered hell throughout the entire Old Testament.

I am not stating this as something new, although I am confident that it is new to many of my hearers and to many of the eighteen millions who will read my discourse in to-morrow morning's papers. For the sake of such, I note the fact that in the morning of our Lord's resurrection, he said to Mary, "Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father and your Father; to my God, and your God" (John xx, 17). I remind them further of the language of the so-called Apostles' Creed, which is coming more and more into vogue with all denominations and which declares, "He descended into hell and rose again the third day." In a version of this creed published by the Presbyterian Board of Publication of Philadelphia, a foot note very properly explains that the word hell here used is, in the Greek, hades, which signifies the state or condition of death.

I consider this a very important matter, which should be made widely known, because of the false conception of hell handed down to us through our creeds formulated in the "dark ages," and since a misinterpretation of sheol and hades has been given to the public mind—the impression that these words signify a place of torture. All this is wholly false, as every Greek and Hebrew scholar knows, and, if cross-questioned, will admit. It is an important question to the public because this misconception of the meaning of the word hell is driving hundreds, yea, thousands, away from God and away from the Bible. They correctly reason that the teaching that our Creator foreknew and intended a hell of torture for his creatures is beyond conception, beyond belief, and manifestly untrue, as no holy being could be so unjust, unkind, unloving. It is time that all such should see that the fault lies with the creeds and not with the Bible—that the Bible teaches a hell, sheol, hades, into which all go, both good and bad, and from which all will be called forth in the resurrection morning by the great Redeemer.

A better translation reads, "Our Lord ascended on high leading a multitude of captives." These words are a pen picture representing a great King as a Conqueror returning from a victory over an opponent. The victor rode in a chariot at the head of the procession, surrounded by trumpets and acclaimers, and behind him followed the evidences, the proofs of his victory—either those whom he had captured and enslaved, or, as in this case, those who had been captured and enslaved and whom the Conquerer had set free.

The picture is graphic and wonderful, notwithstanding the fact that a considerable space has intervened between our Lord's triumphant resurrection and ascension and the evidences of his victory, which are following after him. Of the great King of Glory himself, let us remember that after he had suffered by the will of God, "the Just for the unjust," that he might set mankind free from sin and death, he was "highly exalted and given a name above every name." He was made "partaker of the divine nature." He was no longer a man, for "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God" (I. Corinthians xv, 50). True, he still has as one of his many titles, The Son of man, which identifies him with our race and the work which he is in the process of accomplishing for it and which he will finish during his Millennial reign. We are reminded by the Apostle that he was put to death in the flesh and made alive in spirit—a spirit-being. He died as a man this side of the veil. He arose a New Creature the other side the veil—a spirit being. He was "sown in corruption, raised in incorruption; sown in dishonor, raised in glory; sown a natural body, raised a spiritual body." As the Church's Head and Fore-runner he passed beyond the veil; and now shortly, as participants with him and as the second battalion of the glorious triumphal procession, will follow "the Church which is his Body," sharers with him in the First Resurrection, his Bride.

Next in processional order following the Bride class, the "very elect," will come the "great company" from every nation, people, kindred and tongue, the honored servants of the heavenly Bridegroom and Bride. "The virgins her companions" (Psalm xlv, 14), will follow after the Bride into the presence of the great King Jehovah. Next in processional order will come the Ancient Worthies from faithful Abel down to John the Baptist, the greatest of the prophets. But these will come forth from the tomb in human perfection and not in the spirit perfection of those preceding (Hebrews xi, 38-40; Matthew xi, 11). In their human perfection similar to that of Adam before his transgression, plus their development in faith and obedience, these will constitute a first-fruits of Israel and of the world of mankind. Under their ministration, supervised by the glorified ones beyond the veil, the work of restitution and uplifting the captives of sin and death will progress until, at the close of that thousand years of the reign of righteousness, every human being of royal character will be completely freed from the bondage of sin and death and imperfection and, with the Ancient Worthies, will march in the grand procession into the presence of Jehovah God.

Thus the great Redeemer and Deliverer will not only present the saintly Church blameless and irreproachable before the Father in love, but likewise will liberate all who will of Adam's race, now asleep and degraded. No wonder the Scriptures declare of the end of his triumphal procession, "He shall see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied" (Isaiah liii, 11).

All the blessings which, in God's providence, are not coming to the Church during this Gospel Age, and all the blessings that in the Millennial Age will flow through natural Israel, "the rebellious also," and all the blessings that will flow through Israel and its New Covenant to all the families of the earth, proceed directly or indirectly from the great victory which our Lord Jesus gained over sin and death. Our text and context, as well as the Psalm from which the quotation is made, bears out this thought. It is because our Lord descended, because he left the heavenly glory, and because, in harmony with the Father's will, our Redeemer left the courts of heavenly glory and humbled himself to become a man, and then "humbled himself to death, and even to the death of the cross," that his exaltation came as a reward of his loyalty to the Father's will.

And in the Divine Plan it is because his resurrection body and glory were a reward, a blessing—his earthly body and nature and rights had not been forfeited through disobedience—the he had the latter with all its privileges to bestow upon Adam's dead and dying race. He gave the merit of that sacrifice, first imputedly, on behalf of all desirous of walking in his steps of self-sacrifice even unto death, that these might be, in the Father's good pleasure, counted as his members and companions on the heavenly plane. To this end the first gifts were bestowed at Pentecost; and all of similar class throughout this age have had opportunity for participation therein. Additionally gifts of helpfulness and instruction and assistance were provided through the apostles, orators, pastors and teachers of the Church—for the qualification of these saintly footstep followers for the work of service in building up the Body of Christ, until the elect Body shall be complete (Ephesians iv, 11-13).

Soon these gifts and blessings and privileges now granted and imputed to the Church will be no longer needed by the class being prepared for the heavenly joint-heirship. Then the gift of the Millennial Kingdom, and through Israel the gift of the New Covenant (Jeremiah xxxi, 31), will be bestowed upon the blood-bought world, granting to them individually the opportunity of recovering from all their defilement and imperfection.

Let us then hail this great Redeemer and Deliverer Lord of all! Let us bow our hearts to him now and voluntarily put on the yoke of his service and suffer with him "outside the camp," that we may be accounted worthy of sharing with him in the glorious work of his Millennial Kingdom as His Bride and Joint-heir (Hebrews xiii, 11-13).

Eczema Must Yield To

THE WONDERFUL, SOOTHING, HEALING INFLUENCE OF

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

There is one thing you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to do every time, and that is to cure eczema. There is no more severe test to which an ointment can be put, and because Dr. Chase's Ointment triumphed over eczema it has become the standard Ointment.

When another ointment is praised it is said to be as good as Dr. Chase's. And this illustrates the high position held by this preparation.

Mrs. Oscar Vancott, St. Antoine, Sask., writes: "I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment to be a permanent cure for eczema and other skin diseases. One son while nursing broke out with running, watery sores all over his head and around the ears. Many salves were prescribed to no effect. The child's head became a mass of scabs and he suffered untold agony. He became weak and frail, would not eat and we thought we would lose him.

"Providentially we heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment and it soon thoroughly cured him. He is seven years old now and strong and well. An older boy was also cured of eczema by this Ointment and we hope more people will learn about it so that their poor little ones may be saved from suffering."

Do not be satisfied with the experience of others, but put Dr. Chase's Ointment to the test when occasion arises. Try it for chafing and irritation of the skin, for chapped and cracked hands, for chilblains and frost bites, for sores and burns. It is delightfully soothing and healing. 60c. a box, all dealers; or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

THE PORT OF MISSING MEN

By MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

Author of "The House of a Thousand Candles"

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY

"It's my experience that we never meet a person once only—there's always a second meeting somewhere—and I was not at all surprised when I ran upon my old friend the baron in Germany last fall."

"At his old tricks, I suppose," observed some one.

"No. That was the strangest part of it. He's struck a deeper game, though I'm blessed if I can make it out. He's dropped the title altogether and now calls himself Mister—I've forgotten for the moment the rest of it, but it is an English name. He's made a stake somehow and travels about in decent comfort. He passed now as an American—his English is excellent—and he hints at large American interests."

"He probably has forged securities to sell," commented the German. "I know those fellows. The business is best done quietly."

"I dare say," returned Chauvenet.

"Of course you greeted him as a long lost friend," remarked Claiborne leadingly.

"No; I wanted to make sure of him, and, strangely enough, he assisted me in a very curious way."

All felt that they were now to hear the denouement of the story, and several men bent forward in their absorption, with their elbows on the table. Chauvenet smiled and resumed, with a little shrug of his shoulders.

"Well, I must go back a moment to say that the man I knew at Bar Harbor had a real crest. The ladies to whom he wrote notes treasured them, I dare say, because of the pretty insignium. He had it engraved on his cigarette case, a bird of some kind tiptoeing on a helmet, and beneath there was a motto, 'Fide Non Armis.'"

"The devil!" exclaimed the young German. "Why, that's very like"—

"Very like the device of the Austrian Schomburgs. Well, I remembered the cigarette case, and one night at a concert—in Berlin, you know—I chanced to sit with some friends at a table quite near where he sat alone. I had my eye on him, trying to assure myself of his identity, when in closing his cigarette case it fell almost at my feet, and I bumped heads with a waiter as I picked it up—I wanted to make sure—and handed it to him, the imitation baron."

"That was your chance to startle him a trifle, I should say," remarked the German.

"He was the man beyond doubt. There was no mistaking the cigarette case. What I said was," continued Chauvenet, "'Allow me, baron!'"

"Well spoken!" exclaimed the Spanish officer.

"Not so well, either," laughed Chauvenet. "He had the best of it. He's a clever man. I am obliged to admit. He said"— And Chauvenet's mirth stifled him for a moment.

"Yes; what was it?" demanded the German impatiently.

Skin Diseases.

Under this name such troubles as Salt Rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Tetter, Shingles, Psoriasis, Scurf, Itching Rashes, Eruptions, Boils, Pimples, etc., are included. Skin diseases, as a rule, are not dangerous, but are unsightly, irritating and often terribly annoying to the sufferer; they depend mainly on bad blood, from one cause or another, for if the blood is pure and the circulation good no skin disease can exist, except it arise from lack of proper cleanliness or from contagion.

To get rid of skin diseases it is necessary to observe strictly all the laws of health; maintain regular action of the bowels; avoid high living, eating only plain nourishing food. Cleanse and keep the blood pure by taking Burdock Blood Bitters, which unlocks all the secretions, and makes new rich blood by acting on the entire system.

Had Salt Rheum Six Years.

Mrs. E. M. Myers, East Jeddore, N.S., writes:—"I don't think there is anyone in this Dominion can recommend Burdock Blood Bitters more than I can. I suffered terribly with Salt Rheum for six years, and did everything for it without relief. For curiosity sake I bought six bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it completely cured me. I would advise others to use it."

For sale by all dealers. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THE IMPERIAL GUARANTEE & ACCIDENT INSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA

Head Office: 46 King Street, West TORONTO

The Annual Meeting of the Shareholders of the Imperial Guarantee & Accident Insurance Company of Canada, was held at the Head Office, 46 King Street West, Toronto, on the 10th inst.

Mr. E. W. Cox, President of the Company, in reviewing the business of the year, made reference to the growing popularity of Accident Insurance, and its effect on the success of the business of the Company during the year. The amount of Insurance written was over $26,970,000.00, an increase of $1,940,000.00 over the business taken out in 1908. This is considered exceptionally satisfactory in view of the fact that the business of the Company is confined to Personal Accident and Guarantee Insurance.

The Gross Income for 1909 amounted to $219,741.76.

That being an increase over the year 1908 of $4,817.24.

The Assets now total $366,974.60, and, after allowing for Reserve for unearned premium calculated on the full Government standard, and all other liabilities, the surplus for the protection of policyholders has increased to $213,447.19.

The following Directors and Officers were elected:

Edward W. Cox, President. Hon. F. T. Frost.

SIX MONTHS IN CENTRAL IS BRUNO'S SENTENCE

Italian Convicted of Stabbing Robt. McIllwain Was Sentenced by His Honour Judge Huycke on Saturday.

EVIDENCE HEARD

Ferro Bruno was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison on Saturday afternoon by Judge Huycke, for Stabbing Robert McIllwain on Friday, March the eleventh at Roland Butcher's house, Bethune St. P. C. Newhall gave the following evidence:

On Friday, March 11th, P. C. Adams and myself went to Dr. Leach's office, where we saw Robert McIllwain and his friend. McIllwain was bleeding from three wounds, two in the wrist and one in the back. After inquiring into the matter, we set out to find the prisoner, taking McIllwain's friend with us in order to identify the man. We went to Butcher's house, but found no Italian near the place. In the lane south of Butcher's house I noticed a small plot of ice which had been recently broken. I suppose this was the place that Bruno ran through in order to escape. Next we went to Frank Marino's house, on George St., and there we obtained the prisoner. I examined his boots and found them to be very wet. P. C. Adams and I searched him and his room, but found nothing. We arrested the prisoner and took him to the police station.

Mr. Gordon cross-examined the constable.

Are there two lanes near this house?
Yes, one on the north and one on the south.
How deep was the water?
Possibly three or four inches.
If Dr. Leach said it was 12.30 when you came to his office would it be wrong?
Yes.
Did you find blood near Butcher's house?
Yes, north of Butcher's door.

About 11 o'clock Friday night, March 11th, I started for home, going out Simcoe St. and then up Bethune St. My friend asked me to go to Butcher's till he gave him a bottle of whiskey because he couldn't bring it home. My friend rapped at Butcher's door and then stopped for a moment. Soon Butcher and Bruno ran out and grabbed me. My friend pulled Butcher off, while Bruno pulled me into the lane and stabbed me. As soon as he committed the deed he ran out through the other end of the lane. My friend and I went to Dr. Leach's office.

Mr. Gordon asked witness the following questions:

What time did you go to the doctor's office?
It was after twelve.
What time did you meet your friend?
It was about 8 o'clock.
Did you drink that night?"
Yes, once.
Do you remember saying you were not with him all night in the lower court?
Yes.
Did you know who lived at Butcher's?
No, not till that night.
Did you hear Butcher order you away?
No.
When did you know you were wounded?
When I got out on the street.
What was the extent of your wounds?
They were slight.
Have you had to stop work owing to your wounds?
Yes.
Were you staggering when you went to Butcher's?
No.

Mr. McIllwain's friend was the next to testify.

When the two men ran out of the house on Bethune St. and caught McIllwain I pulled Butcher off. In the meantime the Italian pulled McIllwain into the lane and stabbed him.

Do you recognize prisoner?
Yes, sir.
Was it dark when you were at Butcher's house?
Yes.
The boots Newhall found under Ferro Bruno's bed, were they wet?
Yes, sir.

Mr. Gordon cross-examined the witness.

Are you sure the prisoner went through the water in the south lane near Butcher's house?
No.
What did you have that bottle of whiskey for?
To bring to a dance.
Did McIllwain have many drinks that night?
I know he had one.
You might have staggered that night
Yes.
Were you ever at Butcher's house before?
Yes, once.
You know about the character of that house?
Yes.
Were you ordered to leave the house?
No.
Didn't you hear Butcher order you away?
No.
Where was McIllwain when you pulled Butcher off?
In the south lane.
How many times did you knock at that door?
Once.

P. C. Adams gave evidence similar to that given by P. C. Newhall.

Dr. Leach was the last Crown witness, and gave evidence as follows:

Two men called at my office after 12.00 o'clock on Friday, March 11; I found three wounds on McIllwain. Two on his wrist three-quarters of an inch long, and one-eighth to one-quarter of an inch deep, and the other on the back. McIllwain wasn't drunk; I notified the police about 12.30.

Mr. G. N. Gordon cross-examined the witness:

If the policeman said he went to your office at 11.30 he would be wrong?
Yes, sir.
The wounds were slight?
Yes, sir; but blood poisoning might set in.

Roland Butcher was the only witness for the defence, and he was heard next:

Both those men called at my house on Friday, March 11; I went out on the street and McIllwain hit me in the eye. When he struck me I clinched and held him by the hair. I ordered them away, but they didn't go. Bruno remained in the house when I came out, but when I went in again he was gone. During the affair I didn't see Bruno.

To Crown Attorney Wood:

I could smell liquor on McIllwain, but I was drinking myself.

This closed the evidence for the prosecution.

Mr. Gordon addressed the Court, remarking:

"In this case the prisoner is an Italian and has a scanty knowledge of the English language and laws. These young men had no business at Butcher's house; they simply went and engaged in an assault. One of the Crown witnesses said he went to Dr. Leach's house at 11.30, while three others swear it was after twelve. A long sentence doesn't help reformation; therefore, I ask Your Honour to be lenient in sentencing the prisoner."

Mr. Wood, in his address, asked that no clemency be shown. This was the second time Bruno had been charged with the same offence. In 1906 he had attempted to stab Barnardo, one of his countrymen.

Judge Huycke after some hesitation, said he found that the prisoner was guilty and would sentence him to six months in Central Prison.

"I trust when you come out that you will reform," he added in conclusion.

PLEASANT GATHERING

Mrs. Targett Celebrated the Twenty-first Birthday of Her Son.

There was a very pleasant social gathering at the residence of Mrs. Targett, 554 Downie street, on Saturday night, when the twenty-first birthday anniversary of her son, Mr. Bert Targett, was celebrated. The house was most artistically decorated for the occasion, and a sumptuous repast was served, with the assistance of Mrs. Geo. Dredge. After the needs of the inner man had been thoroughly attended to the party, which was composed almost entirely of relatives, enjoyed a pleasant social time, the affair coming to a close at 11 o'clock. Mr. Targett was wished many happy returns of the day, and was the recipient of a large number of valuable presents, which testified to the high esteem in which he is held by his friends.

WHY YOU ARE THIN; HOW TO GET FLESHY

Discusses Causes of Thinness and Gives New Method of Increasing Weight and Rounding Out the Form.

Prescription Accomplishes Wonders.

A treatment which anyone can prepare cheaply at home, has been found to increase the weight, improve the health, round out scrawny figures, improve the bust, brighten the eyes and put new colour into the cheeks and lips of anyone who is too thin and bloodless. It puts flesh on those who have been always thin whether from disease or natural tendency, on those who by heavy eating and diet have in vain tried to increase; on those who feel well but can't get fat; and on those who have tried every known method in vain. It is a powerful aid to digestion, nutrition and assimilation. It assists the blood and nerves to distribute all over the body the flesh elements contained in food, and gives the thin person the same absorbing qualities possessed by the naturally fleshy.

Everyone is about the same, but certain elements and organs of blood and nerves are deficient and until this is corrected, thin people will stay thin. The nutrition stays in the body after separation by the digestive functions instead of passing through unused, when this valuable treatment of blended medicines is used. Practically no one can remain thin who uses it, for it supplies the long felt need.

Mix in a half pint bottle, three ounces of essence of pepsin, and three ounces of syrup of rhubarb. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol. Shake and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce of tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom). Shake well and take a teaspoonful before and after meals. Drink plenty of water between meals and when retiring. Weigh before beginning.

WHIPS WERE STOLEN

Four Disappeared From a Local Church Shed During Service Last Night.

During the evening service at one of the local churches last night sneak thieves were busy, and, as a result, when the service was over four members of the congregation found themselves each shy a whip, which had been stolen from the vehicles in the shed. There is likely to be trouble for somebody unless the stolen articles are returned, as the owners have a pretty good line on the identity of the guilty parties and prosecutions may follow unless the whips are returned to the church shed.

RUMOUR WAS UNCONFIRMED

No One Was Drowned Near Waterworks Dam as Was Reported.

A report was current in the city this morning, to the effect that an employee of the Peterborough Lumber Co. had been drowned up the river, where a number of men are engaged in getting out a drive of logs. It appears that an employee at the Waterworks dam left his work at 5 o'clock on Saturday evening, leaving his pike pole out in the river. It was at once thought that someone was drowned and the rumour got abroad. However, there was nothing in it.

EASTER AT ST. LUKE'S

Bright and Inspiring Services There Yesterday—Large Number of Communicants.

The Easter services at St. Luke's church yesterday were of a bright and inspiring nature. At 7 and 8 o'clock services there were large numbers of communicants, also at 11 o'clock. The total number of communicants for the day was 233. The music was of a joyous and congregational character, which is one of the dominating features of St. Luke's church, enabling everyone to take part. Miss Ruby Quartermaine sang very acceptably at both the morning and evening services, solos in keeping with the Easter message, and the organist, Miss English, performed her duties in a most capable manner. The offering, which had been asked for, including that given by the children for missions, amounted to $375.00.

Enhance the charm of your physique

Madam, and be healthier with the new Renaissance Corset, "La Diva," rather than discount it and injure your health with ill fitting and old fashioned Corsets.

Madam, you cannot rival the "Chic" and "Svelte" appearance of French and American women unless you wear a corset, that shapes gracefully and fits comfortably.

Unless the corset is right,—no woman can expect to really look as well as she might.

We have gone to a tremendous expense and study to perfect our Renaissance Corset.

At Paris the fountain head of styles, in New York and London, also, our designer has sought most carefully before, after many experiments, we perfected on living models our wonderful new corset "La Diva" Renaissance Corset. The result is a corset giving all the "Chic" and "Svelte" appearence of the most fashionable French and American woman, and moreover, by holding the body in shape without compressing unduly at any point La Diva Renaissance is more healthful for you than any other Corset.

La Diva Corset

We're anxious to see how Canadian women will appreciate our endeavour to obtain for them a really wonderful corset. For that reason we have made the price of "La Diva" only $2.50—it's a $3.50 corset.

Everywhere You Hear of Cressman's Wall Papers

But It's Not So Much The Papers As The Ideas

There's more interest taken in modern wall decorating to-day than there was one year ago. Our department was then only installed, even to-day it is an "infant" department but it's a growing one and the woman or man who wants something just a little different--something entirely original comes here and gets our ideas before going elsewhere. They seldom go elsewhere if they come here first, and the reason is that our fine stock is most satisfying and pleasing. We exhibit many clever schemes on screens about the department showing the various effects. Come and let us demonstrate and quote prices. Our prices are modest, if our ideas are exclusive. : : : :

DEPARTMENT STORES Cressman's

DAIRY EXAMS

Peterborough District Candidates Were Successful.

The final examinations of the long course of the Eastern Dairy School were concluded on Wednesday, March 9. The total registration during this course was forty-nine, and of these 25 took the final examinations, both written and practical, in cheese-making, operating of cream separators, butter-making, milk-testing, boilers, and engines, as well as written examinations in bacteriology and dairy chemistry.

The following eighteen students were successful in passing in all subjects. The total number of marks obtainable was 900. First-class honours, 75 per cent., and over:

F. M. Glass, Kingston, Ont., 729; G. A. Renwick, Westwood, Ont., 6[illegible]; M. O. Trickey, Williamsburg, Ont., 682; Jos. Hennessy, Detlor, Ont., 621; J. McAllister, Pendleton, Ont., 617; A. H. Constable, Fleetwood, Ont., 602; R. A. Dougherty, Odessa, Ont., 577; John Hall, Rednersville, Ont., 576; J. H. Fawcett, Wolfe Island, Ont., 567; O. L. Davis, Greenbush, Ont., 550.

Third-class honours, 40 per cent., and up to 60 per cent.:

H. Steinberg, Orland, Ont., 528; H. Appleby, Morewood, Ont., 488; Jas. McFadzean, Ayer Cliff, Que., 472; Wm. Davis, Wolfe Island, Ont., 457; German Seeley, Wallbridge, Ont., 451.

HOW CROUP IS DREADED

If there is any warning use Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and prevent the terrible struggle of the little one for breath. If you know nothing of it till the struggle comes, cause the child to vomit and then use Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine frequently in small doses to prevent repeated attacks. This great medicine is wonderfully effective in curing croup and bronchitis.

"PAY DIRT" IN THE YELLOWHEAD

Half a dozen young men, ex-army officers from France, it is said, are entitled to the credit of first unearthing the vast coal beds near the Yellowhead on the Grand Trunk Pacific. This coal is equal in point of quality, to the coal of the Crow's Nest, of Vancouver Island, of Sydney, Nova Scotia, and the bituminous coal of Pennsylvania. The great find is at the head waters of the Mel[illegible] Pombina, and Embarras Rivers. Not only is the quality of this coal good, but it is there in abundance. Experts estimate that there are eight hundred million tons in sight. The principal vein, as tested and analyzed, is 28 feet thick, with two or three other veins on stratas below, and underlying the main vein. If the builders of the Grand Trunk Pacific could have ordered the placing of these coal deposits they would in all probability have placed them just where they are, near the summit of the Rockies, and on the Eastern slope. From the mines it will be generally down hill to Winnipeg, and all the prairie cities, although as a matter of fact there are no hill grades on the National Transcontinental line. In the year 1908 a million tons of Pennsylvania coal went into the Canadian West. With the completion of the Grand Trunk Pacific the west will have, not only an abundance of coal, but have a quality of coal that can be stored in the early summer before the crop begins to move. Also it will supply the much-desired return load for the cars that will carry wheat from the Prairie Provinces to Prince Rupert.

The line will be completed and in operation to the Pass by the end of the year, and as a spur line of only twenty miles will take them to the mines, the west should be getting this coal in a year from now.

This discovery is important to the whole country. It will enable the manufacturers to establish in the West, and will help the economical operation of the railways.

THE WEATHER

There was a very summer-like feeling in the air Sunday, and great coats and heavy winter clothing generally appeared to be out of place when worn by the pedestrian. The thermometer rose up to 70 degrees in the shade at noon, and rapidly making upward strides into territory where it had not been for many months. This date last year we had 4 inches of snow on the ground, and the year previous to that there was over a foot of snow.—W. P.

OBITUARY

MRS. NELSON T. PARKS.

The death occurred this morning at nine o'clock of Mrs. Nelson T. Parks, 82 years of age.

A family of two daughters and two sons are left to mourn her loss. The daughters are Mrs. F. Webb, of Orillia, and Mrs. Tamblin, of this city. The sons are C. Parks, of Detroit and R. S. Parks, of this city.

Funeral service will take place at 10 o'clock to morrow morning and funeral will leave Mrs. Tamblin's residence, 56 Victoria Ave., at 10.30 for interment at the Little Lake cemetery.

JAMES T. STENSON.

Death came this morning with great suddenness to one of the oldest residents, and one of the best known and most highly respected residents of Peterborough, Mr. James T. Stenson, the well known boot and shoe merchant, fell dead, apparently without a moment's warning, at seven o'clock this morning, at his residence, 349 Rubidge street. Habitually an early riser, he rose at 7 o'clock and in his morning round of the premises, went to the woodshed, where death overtook him. His wife rose half an hour later and not seeing him about the house, made a search and was awfully shocked to find her husband quite dead. Medical assistance was at once summoned but the case was beyond human aid. Though always able to be about and give attention to his business duties, Mr. Stenson, though not invalid, was not a man of robust health, and for the past few days has not been as well as usual; but he was down to business on Saturday and on Sunday attended St. Pauls church as usual.

James Thompson Stenson was born in Ireland, 73 years ago, come next May. He came to Canada, with his father, the late Robert Stenson, at the age of five years and has been a resident of Peterborough nearly three score and ten years, being possibly one of the oldest, if not the oldest, continuous residents of the city, and the oldest business man, having been in the boot and shoe business for the past 50 years, joining and succeeding to the business established and conducted for many years by his father. He was one of the best known and best respected business men in the district. His straightforward and reliable methods won him a large and prosperous trade. He enjoyed the high respect of his fellow merchants and he was always ready to encourage and assist every enterprise calculated to promote the commercial interests and general welfare of the city. As a private citizen he led a life beyond reproach and was respected as universally as he was known. He was a member of the municipal council for a term or two, but otherwise, he did not take much active part in public affairs. He was in politics a Liberal. He was for many years a member of St. Paul's church, a regular attendant and worshipped there the last time on Sunday. Mr. Stenson is survived by his wife, one daughter, Miss Stenson, living at home, and seven sons. The sons are Robert, of Kaslo, B.C.; William, of Toronto; Harry, of Nome, Alaska; Charles, of Lynn, Mass.; George, of New York; and Fred and Herbert, of Peterborough, associated with their late father in the business. Mr. Stenson was a member of Peterborough Lodge, A. F. and A.M.

The funeral will be from the late residence, 349 Rubidge street, on Wednesday next, at 2.30 o'clock.

A BIT OF ADVICE

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney troubles are but forerunners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Peterborough residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of a Peterborough citizen. Mrs. W. Huycke, of 311 Louis St., Peterborough, Ont., says: "Mr. Huycke frequently suffered with backache. At times the pains in the small of the back would become so severe that he was unable to straighten himself up without much suffering. He could not stoop or lift anything of consequence and his general health had been run down for some time. He had tried a number of different remedies but didn't find relief until on advice of a friend, he procured Doan's Kidney Pills at McDermid & Jury's Pharmacy and commenced treatment. He soon found relief. The pains left his back and he strengthened. He has had no return of the trouble since and speaks very highly of Doan's Kidney Pills."

REMARKABLE GROWTH OF WESTERN TOWNS IMPRESSIVE

Mr. Fred L. Roy Writes to The Examiner of His Impressions of the Wheat Belt—An Interesting Letter.

MANY PETERBORO' PEOPLE

The following letter received by a member of the Examiner staff from Mr. Fred Roy who with Mrs. Roy, is on an extended visit to the West, will be read with interest by readers of The Examiner:

Lethbridge, March 22, 1910.

One fact which cannot fail to impress an Easterner travelling through the West is the remarkable growth of the towns. As the country becomes settled they are springing up everywhere and increase in population at an incredible rate. A little community of fifty to-day will number a couple of hundred in a week or so and inside of a year there is a prosperous town of some thousands. Bow Island and Grassy Lake, between Medicine Hat and Lethbridge are good examples of this.

To look at Lethbridge as it is to-day it is well nigh impossible to believe that it is little over twenty-five years old. Where we expected to see one storey wooden structures, instead are splendid three and four storey brick structures, modern in every way. residences which three or four years ago were considered well out are being torn down daily to make room for the growing business section. The square (embodying about four city blocks) in the centre of the city is the playground for old and young, football, lacrosse, baseball, etc., all being played at once.

Coal mining is the big industry, enormous deposits underlying the whole district. Walking along the river "bottom", drifts or small ruins with thin gray and black 'dumps' can be seen in many places running back into the hillsides.

The C.P.R. viaduct across the Belly river with a length of over a mile and a maximum height of over three hundred feet is a "corker." An ordinary train, looking at it from the river below appears to be about the size of a child's toy train of cars. The people here talk about it much in the same way as we do our Lift Lock and it certainly is in the same class.

We get our first glimpse of the mountains now, and the sunsets over them are beautiful. The deep coulees and the river in the foreground, the prairie rolling away up in the foot hills, the whole, backed up with the snow capped heights of the Rockies, tinted with the rays of the setting sun, make a scene that is indescribable.

We continue to meet many Peterborough people, all of them as enthusiastic as those we saw in Winnipeg, over the west and its future.

Nelson will be our next stop for a week or so and from there up through the Arrow Lakes to Revelstoke and Vancouver.

We keep in touch with the old town through a copy of The Examiner now and then. Yours sincerely,

FRED L. ROY.

MR. STRATTON DISCUSSES THE TARIFF PROBLEM

New York Herald of March 25th Contains an Interesting Interview on the Outlook.

NO GAIN IN A WAR

Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mrs. Stratton have been in New York for the past few days. The New York Herald of March 25th, has the following:

Hon. J. R. Stratton, of Peterborough, a liberal member of the Canadian Parliament, vice-president of the Traders' Bank of Canada, and once Provincial Secretary of Ontario, who is registered at the Waldorf-Astoria, expressed pleasure when seen by a reporter for the Herald yesterday, that the threatened trade war between Canada and the United States promises to be averted. Much is to be lost and nothing gained for either nation by a tariff controversy, Mr. Stratton thinks, and he considers it a matter for congratulation that the representatives of both countries have approached the subject in a high minded way.

"Canada has not discriminated against the United States," he said. "Our treaty with France was made long before the Payne-Aldrich tariff, Canada made similar concessions, as provided in the French treaty, to several other countries that came within the favoured nation arrangements of Great Britain. If the United States had been in that class it would have come in with the others.

"Canada feels that she is not responsible for the present situation. The United States has created it, and it would be absurd generosity, if not humiliation, for Canada to make concessions to escape the penalty the United States has placed itself in a position to impose by a rigid interpretation of what discrimination means.

"The general Canadian feeling is, I am sure, that if our nearest neighbour, our most natural market, does not want to do business with us in a pleasant and profitable way we must pursue our own way and do the best we can. I do not speak for the government, but I am sure that the popular feeling will be behind it in maintaining its present situation.

"Then, I omitted to say that another point of self-protection that Canada, if forced to do so, can resort to is available. To compensate the trade if the maximum tariff were placed the preference for Great Britain could be increased and no doubt an increased preference would result in as great an increase of trade as did the original preference.

"However, all parties are to be congratulated upon the prospect of an amicable settlement that will be in the trade interests of both countries. Canadians feel that President Taft has acted in a big way, as becomes a big man in every sense, in inviting negotiations. Of course the parties to this conference have nothing to say, but there is every reason to believe that a friendly understanding will be arrived at that would be in the interests of both countries."

WAS DRAWN UNDER TRAIN

Mrs. MacDonald, of Collingwood, Stood on the Edge of a Platform and Was Drawn by Train's Suction—Right Leg Cut Off.

HER CONDITION SERIOUS

Examiner Special.

Toronto, March 28.—Standing very close to the edge of the platform at Davenport station, just on the outskirts of the city, Mrs. MacDonald, an elderly woman, whose home is in Collingwood, was drawn under the Grand Trunk train by its suction as it rushed past the station, and had her right leg completely severed. Three hundred Toronto excursionists, returning from Easter trips, saw the unfortunate woman taken from beneath the train. Her condition is very serious.

A DISTRIBUTION

Biggest Delivery at Lakefield in the Career of Massey-Harris Agent There.

The biggest delivery of farm machinery that Mr. W. Batten, agent for the Massey-Harris Company has ever superintended, took place at Lakefield annual spring distribution of binders. Thursday afternoon last, when the annual spring distributio of biders, harvesters, etc., took place. The many customers of the firm came in in large numbers, and the affair had quite a holiday aspect, the procession of machinery being a unique one. Mr. Louis Mendel, of Peterborough, succeeded in getting some excellent photographs of the array of machinery, and Mr. Batten intends to present each of his customers with one as a souvenir of the occasion.

PEACE IS SECURED

Messrs. Fielding and Graham Are Given a Big Time In Diplomatic Circles In the American Capital—Not Giving Anything Away, Says Hon. G. P. Graham—Says Settlement Is Reached.

Washington, D.C., March 28.—Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. George P. Graham left last night for Ottawa, stopping over a day in New York.

On Wednesday an announcement of the result of the tariff conference will be made simultaneously in Congress and in Parliament, and till then whatever may be said of the success of the mission of the Canadian ambassadors is mere conjecture.

It was briefly announced by Secretary of State Knox, however, that the threatened tariff war had been averted.

It is understood that the tariff negotiations on Saturday began when Mr. Pepper, one of the United States delegates to Ottawa, called on the Canadian Ministers at their hotel. This circumstance is overlooked by the local Sunday papers, which tell only of the conference at the executive mansion, when President Taft, Secretary Knox, Mr. Pepper, and the Canadians arrived at the point of agreement.

That Mr. Pepper brought to Messrs. Fielding and Graham the U.S. proposals which formed the basis of the agreement, and that these were practically accepted before the White House confab, seems likely.

Combined with Mr. Graham's cheerful optimism, when seen following his talk with the President, newspapermen feel sure that Canada's ambassadors are not going home humiliated. But Wednesday will tell.

The social side of the visit of the Canadian Ministers has been prominent, too. On their way down, they received a message asking them to dine with the President. Secretary Knox, and Tariff Delegate Pepper, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Fielding, the Misses Fielding were also guests of the White House.

On Saturday the Ministers were invited to dine with Sir Ernest Shackleton, the Antarctic explorer, at the home of Ambassador Bryce.

On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Graham had lunch with relatives, and last evening the Canadian visitors dined with Mr. Pepper, leaving for home at midnight.

Reporters yesterday saw both Ministers in their apartments, at the Shoreham. They discussed their leave-taking plans, and accounted for their social movements in Washington, but with no word as to what concessions may have been granted to the United States.

In Mr. Graham's features was an indication, however, of satisfaction over the outcome. With a laugh he observed: "I suppose our people have made up their minds that we came down here to give everything away."

There is a belief here that concessions as to agricultural implements figure largely in the peace pact.

There is one more chance for trouble in this country, and that is the possibility that the House may refuse to ratify a treaty. There is little doubt, however, that the Republicans of the House would hail with joy any solution of the problem.

East Elgin Liberals' Convention.

St. Thomas, Ont., March 28.—East Elgin Liberals met in convention on Saturday and nominated Dr. F. H. Miller, at present in Chicago, but who will return to Aylmer to reside, as candidate for the Commons.

W. W. Rutherford, who opposed D. Marshall, M.P., was renominated, but withdrew. C. W. Wonnacott was again chosen as candidate for the Legislature.

Both nominations were unanimous by a large attendance of delegates.

May End In 'Quake.

Catania, Sicily, March 28.—While the quantity of lava from the craters of Mount Aetna continues to decrease, the internal activity of the volcano was stronger yesterday than the day before. Frank A. Perret, the valcanologist, believes the decrease in the flow of lava is due to obstructions in the new craters which prevent it flowing freely and that later, either in a few days or perhaps in a week, the molten mass either will force a passage or a earthquake will result.

Kingston's Tax Rate.

Kingston, March 28.—The tax rate this year will be 20 1-2 mills, and finance committee has completed the budget, taking $9,000 from the waterworks surplus for the general fund. Total expenditure provided for is $199,536.94. A grant of $2,500 is made by the city to the Mowat Memorial Hospital. City's bonded debt is $1,240,590.29. This includes $382,825 for light and water plants. Both these departments pay their own way.

ASQUITH WORRIED

House of Commons Will Not Last Long, Says Hon. R. B. Haldane—Rosebery's Speech Is Now Thing of the Past, and Everyone Is Waiting to Hear From Government on Veto Question.

London, March 28. Lord Rosebery's speech on the necessity of the reform of the House of Lords is many days' old, but many weeks and months, perhaps even years, will elapse before the controversy which provoked it, is settled. Everything depends on the fate of the proposals of the Government for dealing with the veto of the House of Lords and that is on the knees of the gods. Lord Rosebery has been well described as Britain's "public orator, and it has been rather unkindly, yet not untruthfully, said of him that he intervenes only on great occasions and when he can appear in the limelight with artistically dramatic re-entries on the political stage, and his latest will probably not be his last. I have been present at several of his lordship's re-appearances, but the most dramatic and sensational without doubt was made at Chesterfield at a time when the dismal lessons of the South African war were being brought sadly home to the minds of the English people. From the miners of Derbyshire came a call to Lord Rosebery to give the nation a lead, and he accepted the invitation.

No event in modern English politics since Gladstone's Midlothian campaign of 1878-79 caused such a stir as that memorable meeting in the little town among the peaks. It would, indeed, be hard to find a parallel to it. Walpole was called back to office after the bursting of the South Sea bubble, but he had not definitely cut himself off by repeated asseverations, as Lord Rosebery had done, that he had retired from public life altogether. Rockingham, after doing his best to stave off the impending struggle with the American colonies in 1765, had seen all his efforts nullified by Lord North, and was summoned back after the surrender of Yorkton to clear up the mess which George III. and his Ministers had made. Canning twice over had withdrawn from public life—once after the disasters at Walcheren, and once when he declined to be a party to the persecution of George IV.'s ill-fated Queen. Yet he, too, was summoned back, and, the last time it was to call into existence a new world to redress the balance of the old. Palmerston was recalled to rectify the blunders of a coalition Government which had the largest majority and the poorest record of any Government save one in the nineteenth century. It was to rectify the blunders of this Tory Government that Lord Rosebery was "called back" by the party whose leader he has been, and it was then that he uttered the famous formula—one of many he has coined—"clean the slate."

The Ministers make no pretence that Parliament will last long after it reassembles on March 29. "A general election cannot be far off," said Secretary of War Haldane Saturday night. On what measures the Government will go out of office remains a moot point. Possibly it will be the rejection by the House of Lords of the veto resolutions, in regard to which The Spectator puts a neat question to the Government.

Future procedure, as laid down by the resolutions, provides that the Lords shall be consulted thrice in a period of two years before enactment is made over their heads. If this delay is thought to be advisable in the case of future acts, even in minor measures, why is it not necessary in the present tremendous revolution? asks The Spectator. But it seems certain that the Government is unable to exist for two years and present its proposal to alter the constitution in three successive sessions.

Meanwhile the Liberal party is having fresh troubles with its Labor allies. Sir Samuel Evans, on his elevation to the bench, left a Liberal vacancy in mid-Glamorganshire, where his majority was over 9,000. There has been a pretty fight between the Liberals and Laborites as to who shall have the seat. All efforts to effect an arrangement failed, and now both parties have nominated candidates.

Kingston Women Held Up.

Kingston, March 28.—Two men driving in a rig held up two women late Saturday night. Miss Turnbull West King street, was held up on Beverly street, but as she had no money was allowed to go.

Mrs. Blakely, Princess street, was held up near Frontenac street. The men took her purse, but became frightened, and gave it back to her.

She can identify them, and the police are endeavoring to locate them. They are believed to be men who stole a rig from the yard at the Albion Hotel.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

It was 86 above in Chicago yesterday.

Thirty buildings at Welch, La., were burned yesterday; loss, $200,000.

Saturday 3,500 emigrants sailed from Glasgow, most of them for Canada.

Joseph Clark, the Ontario agent in London, is a passenger homeward bound on the Empress of Britain.

Manila has heard a report that eight men were killed by an exploding cannon on the U.S. cruiser Charleston.

Thomas Maresco, one of the assistants of Lieut. Pethesino, the New York detective assassinated in Italy, was fatally shot at Staten Island, N.Y., Saturday.

George Arthur Liney, who was arrested at his home in London a fortnight ago, after threatening to kill his wife with an axe, has been committed to the hospital for the insane at Hamilton.

Seven more men will be added to the Port Arthur fire department. Chief Strachan has recommended the following increase wage scale: First year, $63 per month; second year, $70; third year, $75.

William Howard, a painter, residing at 229 Hamilton road, London, is in the hospital there, suffering with a fracture of the right arm, right leg, a bruised shoulder and hip and cuts about the face, as a result of falling 55 feet from a scaffold while painting.

Miss Eliza Hartnett, Ottawa, died Saturday from injuries sustained in a fire at her home. Miss Hartnett had gone to bed, and, according to her brother, attempted to move an old lamp at her bedside, when she was suddenly stricken with apoplexy, and dropped the lamp.

FAMILY RESCUED.

Toronto Couple and Baby Saved From Death by Burning.

Toronto, March 28.—Mr. and Mrs. John R. McDonald, with their fifteen-months-old baby girl, had a narrow escape from suffocation in their bedroom, by the smoke of a fire which broke out in their house at 140 Springhurst avenue early yesterday morning. Being awakened by the smell of smoke at about two o'clock, Mr. McDonald opened the door of the bedroom and found the hall ablaze. He was driven back into the room by the smoke and heat and closed the door. Mrs. McDonald ran to the window with the baby, saw Police Constable Moffatt, and called to him to catch the child, offering to throw her to him. The constable, however, restrained her, and forced in the front door. He was, however, unable to enter on account of the flames.

In the meantime, a still alarm had been sent in, and the firemen arrived in a few minutes. They placed a ladder against the window, and rescued the family. Mr. McDonald was so much overcome by the smoke that he became unconscious. He was taken in the police ambulance to St. Michael's Hospital, while the mother and baby were taken to the house of a neighbor. All are now making good progress toward recovery.

The flames were brought under control by the firemen, after damage to the extent of about $2,000 had been done. All the loss is covered by insurance. Defective electric wiring in the wall between the dining-room and sitting-room is believed to have started the fire.

'Twas Pullman Porter's Own Auto.

New York, March 28.—How much the Pullman porter receives in tips was dimly to be surmised in the West Side Police Court Saturday when Eugene Debnam, a negro, of No. 522 Mott avenue, The Bronx, came up before Magistrate Corrigan for speeding an automobile.

The magistrate wanted to know whose automobile it was.

"It's mah own car," replied Debnam. He told the astonished judge that he was a Pullman porter on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, and "ran" between New York and Boston.

Woman Sues for $20,000.

Trenton, N.J., March 28.—Mrs. Henry Page of this city has brought suit for $20,000 damages against Professors Howard McClenahan and Edward P. Adams of Princeton University, alleging that they burned her husband so severely with X-rays that he died. Mr. Page suffered from hip disease.

Tots See Mother Fatally Burned.

Hagerstown, Md., March 28.—Two of her little children danced about in delight while Mrs. Howard Myers, 26 years old, burned to death in the yard of her home at Smoketown. The mother's dress caught fire from rubbish she had lighted and in a moment she was enveloped in flames from head to foot.

A Poor Weak Woman

As she is termed, will endure bravely and patiently agonies which a strong man would give way under. The fact is women are more patient than they ought to be under such troubles.

Every woman ought to know that she may obtain the most experienced medical advice free of charge and in absolute confidence and privacy by writing to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y. Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., for many years and has had a wider practical experience in the treatment of women's diseases than any other physician in this country. His medicines are world-famous for their astonishing efficacy.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

The many and varied symptoms of women's peculiar ailments are fully set forth in Plain English in the People's Medical Adviser (1008 pages), a newly revised and up-to-date Edition of which, cloth-bound, will be mailed free on receipt of 50 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only. LITTLE DIGESTERS positively CURE Indigestion. Stomach Troubles and distress of all sorts disappear like magic. Depression and brain fag, lassitude and that tired feeling all come from the stomach. LITTLE DIGESTERS make every day your good day. Read what others say:

EVERY MEAL BROUGHT AGONY

But Since Taking "Little Digesters" He Can Eat Heartily

From Osgoode Station, Ont., comes a story of five years of suffering from Indigestion and Dyspepsia—five years of doctoring in vain—then "Little Digesters" and a complete cure. Mr. R. H. Ralph tells the story—his own story—thus:

"I have been a sufferer from Indigestion and Stomach Trouble for five years. I had treatment from several doctors. I did not find a cure until I began using "Little Digesters."

"I can hardly describe how much I suffered at times. Every meal brought with it more or less agony and I seemed to have a complete distaste for food. I had almost begun to think my case incurable when I came across an advertisement in the papers about "Little Digesters." I decided to give them a trial. I am very thankful that I did so for I had not been taking them long when I found them helping me. I can now eat heartily and no longer feel pain and discomfort after eating."

"I Was in Bad Shape"

But Little Digesters "Have Done Wonders for Me"

Here is an experience with the first part of which you may be all too familiar. Mr. Josh Smith, of North Seneca, Ont., writes about "Little Digesters."

"Having been troubled with Indigestion for a number of years, I have tried nearly all kinds of pills and tablets for Indigestion only to be disappointed.

"Seeing your tablets advertised I thought I would give them a trial, and must say I am glad I did. Before taking them I was in bad shape. Bad taste in my mouth mornings and so dizzy that I hardly knew how I would put in the day. Everything I would eat would seem to sour and ferment, but after taking "Digesters" I can say they have done wonders for me."

If you know what the first part of this story means why not learn the relief and delight which comes from the use of "Little Digesters!"

HE FEARED TO EAT

Till "Little Digesters" Cured His Indigestion

Like many another sufferer from Indigestion, Mr. E. Thody looked forward to mealtime with dread instead of pleasure. Writing from his home at 141 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, on June 13th last, he says:

"For two years I suffered with Indigestion and obtained no relief from anything I took, including several prescriptions from prominent physicians. Every meal was followed with acute pain until I feared to eat, consequently became run down for lack of nourishment.

"'Little Digesters" were recommended to me by a friend and I tried them with remarkable results, two boxes completely curing me. It is three months since I took any and have not suffered a pain no matter how heartily I eat. I would certainly recommend them to anyone suffering with Indigestion."

King, Ont., Nov. 12, 1909.

THE COLEMAN MEDICINE CO.

Gentlemen,—

Having suffered for three years with Indigestion, nothing could relieve me, having seen your advertisements in the paper for "Little Digesters," took three, was entirely cured. I feel convinced that anyone suffering with same will not fail to try "Little Digesters." PHILIP PAYN, Junior.

"Find Them Marvellous"

Here is a short but very convincing letter which we received recently:

THE COLEMAN MEDICINE CO.,

I have been using "Little Digesters" for some time. I still use them and find them marvellous. I recommend them sincerely.

MRS. CHAS. BROOKS.

Low, Wright Co., Que.

Here is another letter, dated Nov. 9th, 1909, almost equally brief and to the point: COLEMAN MEDICINE CO.,

Would say that the box of "Little Digesters" has done me a lot of good. I think they are all right for any Stomach Trouble.

ANTHONY FISHER.

Trout Creek P.O., Parry Sd. Dist., Ont.

Send Me Another Box of "Little Digesters"

That's what Mr. E. S. Glassco, of Toronto, wrote us last May, after he had tried and proved "Little Digesters" for Indigestion. He said:

"I wish you would send me another box of your "Little Digesters." All the members of my family have been using them and have obtained the most satisfactory results.

"I congratulate you on your success in putting up a tablet for the cure of Indigestion. I suffered for years and tried everything that was recommended to me. Nothing gave me relief until I was persuaded to try "Little Digesters." Now I never suffer from Indigestion. I enjoy my meals and am not afraid to eat, because I know a "Little Digester" after each meal will digest my food.

"I recommend them to all my friends who suffer from Indigestion and would farther say that you may publish the above if you wish. I know there are thousands of people suffering from Indigestion who will be glad to know there is a safe and sure cure for them."

Cured at Seventy-four

Little Digesters are a Great Help to Mr. John F. Becker

The weight of years very often brings with it a still heavier burden, that of Indigestion or some form of Stomach Trouble.

Then "Little Digesters" come to the rescue—if you give them a chance, as did Mr. Becker. Here is his letter telling what they did for him:

New Dundee, Nov. 10, 1909.

TO THE COLEMAN MEDICINE CO.

Dear Sirs,—

I was for a long time troubled with bloating after meals, and my tongue was always coated. Seeing the "Little Digesters" advertised I bought a box, and they took all that trouble away, but I thought one box would not be enough, so I sent to you for more. They are a great help to my body. Yours truly,

JOHN F. BECKER.

Excuse my writing with pencil, being an old man of 74.

Letters like these are the best possible proof that "Little Digesters" do exactly what we claim—relieve and cure Indigestion, Dyspepsia and all forms of Stomach Troubles and distress. They aid the feeble stomach to digest food perfectly so that you can enjoy your meals and get the strength out of what you eat.

"LITTLE DIGESTERS" CURE OR YOUR MONEY BACK

If "Little Digesters" do not benefit you or you are dissatisfied in any way the Druggist will cheerfully refund your money.

JEFFRIES-JOHNSON FIGHT WILL BE A VERY CLOSE THING

Noted Referee Says That He Would Take 10 to 9 and Let the Other Fellow do the Picking.

AN INTERESTING BATTLE

New York, March 26. — Seated around a table at Mock's last night was a crowd of sporting men and actors. Among the number was "Charlie" White, who has probably refereed more glove contests than any one man in the "split and break away" business.

It did not take long for the subject to turn to the Jeffries-Johnson fight. This was natural, owing to "Charlie" White's presence. He talks intelligently on subjects pugilistic, and has a "dope" on almost every man in the business. Long before his hair began to "fall in" Charlie knew a "good 'un" when he saw him, and has been instrumental in making more matches than the majority of promoters.

"How about the fight?" asked Albert Hart, who had just pushed his long legs under a portion of the table.

Ought to be a Good Fight.

"It ought to be a good fight," answered White; "one worth going a long way to see, and you can bet that it will have the biggest gate of any affair of the kind that has ever pulled off in the history of pugilism in any country. Never was there a fight of such importance to Americans. The fact that it is a battle where the colour line is a factor makes it doubly interesting. It is the first time that a white man has been asked to recover the heavyweight title from a negro, and "Jeff" realizes the importance of it, and what is expected of him.

"When poor old Peter Jackson hovered around the championship no one seemed to bother about him. He was hardly considered, but it is a different story with 'Jack' Johnson. He has done a whole lot of damage to the white race, and the pride of the latter is somewhat shattered. The colour of the fighter should never enter the argument where merit is concerned. Some of the best fighters this country ever knew were negroes. Look at Geo. Dixon, Joe Walcott, and 'Joe' Gans. White folk were as proud of them as if they were white; that is, the fair-minded persons. So it should be in the case of Johnson. Naturally, there is a feeling among the fair race leaning toward Jeffries, but to the honest sporting man, who pays his money to see the battle, there should be no preference, any more than there would be in a horse race, where one horse was black and the other white. It is a question of ability, and which is the better man.

Jeff a Fighting Bullock.

"Both are good men, I might say great men, in their business," continued White. "Jeffries is one of the most stubborn fighters I ever saw, one who could hardly be knocked out with a billy. The punishment he has received in his battles has been astonishing. He can be compared to a fighting bullock. Fitzsimmons hit him harder and oftener than any man he ever tackled, and the blows seemed to bounce from him. Corbett jabbed him to death, practically, yet after all this Jeffries' one punch counted for more than the thousand that Corbett had delivered. He is a marvel for taking punishment.

Johnson Above Average.

"Johnson has proved many times that he is far above the average fighter. He knows all about the game, and is unquestionably cleverer than Jeffries and can hit harder than Corbett. This brings out the question of endurance on the part of Jeffries. If Johnson's blows are more effective than were Corbett's he will take much of the 'bullock' out of 'Jeff' in a long fight, which this is likely to be. Yet it is doubtful if Johnson can hit as hard as Fitzsimmons could when he fought Jeffries, and the latter took everything that Fitzsimmons gave and then came back with a jolt that dropped 'Fitz.' as if the Metropolitan building had fallen on him.

The Great Uncertainty.

"It will be one of the most interesting fights in the history of pugilism on account of its uncertainty. Jeffries condition is uncertain. He may be as good as ever he was, and he may not. Johnson has never whipped anybody that Jeffries could not have whipped in probably less time. It is such a close thing that if I were a betting man I would take 10 to 9 and let the other fellow do the picking."

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE MIDLAND FOOTBALL LEAGUE

Soccer Association Got Under Way on Good Friday for What Promises to be the Most Successful Season in the History of the League.

OFFICERS WERE ELECTED

The annual meeting of the Midland Football League at the Y.M.C.A. parlours on Good Friday was characterized by the enthusiasm of those present and by the rapid manner in which the business was transacted.

The delegates and the clubs they represented were: Dr. J. C. Devitt and C. Adams, Bowmanville; T. P. Lancaster, V. Hitchens, Havelock; Dr. E. Sisson, W. Hannah, Bethany; N. Moore, A. Quinlan, C. Meddler, D. Charlton, Lakefield; Dr. J. A. Morgan, J. E. Sullivan, P. Fitzgerald, Peterborough; C. M. Downes, W. Jones, Brinton Carpet Co., City.

An important feature of this meeting was the consideration in detail of a new constitution and cup competition rules which were approved and adopted for the League. These will be inserted in the Annual of the Ontario Association Football League together with the list of cup winners and the list officers and a cut of the 1909 champions.

The Secreary's report showed that last season was a very successful one and the schedule had been rigidly adhered to and the championship was decided on July 1st. The League had added its membership and the class of football was of a high standard. Norwood had annexed the Junior Championship while Havelock had captured the Senior honours and had also contested for the Ontario Intermediate Championship which unfortunately is not yet decided.

The Treasurer's report was quite satisfactory as there is a tidy cash balance on which to commence this season.

The following officers were elected:

Hon. President.—Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Hon. Vice-President.—Dr. George Burnham.

President.—T. P. Lancaster, Havelock.

1st Vice-President. — Dr. Devitt. Bowmanville.

2nd Vice-President.—P. D. Fitzgerald, Peterborough.

Secretary-treasurer.—E. E. Brumwell, Peterborough.

Executive Committee.—The Pres. 1st and 2nd Vice-Pres., Secy.-treas. W. Price, Bethany, C. Meddler, Lakefield and C. M. Downes, Brinton's.

It was decided to again affiliate with the Ontario League and to try for the provincial honors. As representatives for the O.A.F.L. annual meeting in Toronto an Easter Monday Dr. Devitt of Bowmanville and E. E. Brumwell were selected and instructed to present the Midland League's side of the case as to what team holds the Intermediate championship of Ontario for 1909.

Any club wishing to become affiliated with the Midland League is requested to communicate with the Secretary-treasurer at its earliest convenience and any information will be gladly given by him. In this connection, section three, of the new constitution is presented as follows:

"The annual entrance fee for each team entering the Senior Competition shall be $3.00 and for each team entering the Junior Competition, $2.00. Any Club desiring to enter either Competition must forward the entrance fee to the secretary-treasurer of the League in order to have the name of the team representing that Club appear in the list of schedule games."

The next meeting of the League will be held in the Y.M.C.A. in Peterborough on Saturday, April 9th at one o'clock to draw up the schedule of games for the season. It is important that all the clubs should be represented to get into proper districts and have suitable dates arranged.

BASEBALL

March 29—No. 8 vs. No. 6 at 7.30; Bugle Band vs. Battery at 9 o'clock.

March 31.—No. 7 vs. No. 2 at 7.30; Battery vs. No. 6 at 9.00.

April 5.—Bugle Band vs. No. 2 at 7.30; No. 7 vs. No. 8 at 9.00.

April 7.—No. 6 vs. Bugle Band at 7.30; No. 8 vs. Battery at 9.00.

Jerry Edmunds expects to leave on Saturday next to report to the Winnipeg ball club of the North Western League, for the Spring training. "Jerry" was with the Maroons last year, and more than made good and was, of course, snapped up this year in a hurry. Harry Burridge will likely play again with Edmonton this season in the same League. "Bill" Hawkins, who, with Freddy Clements, did the slab work for the Peterborough Midland League, champions two years ago, is to be tried out in the South Central League this year and should make good.

BASKETBALL

To-night the fast Toronto Central Intermediate team will meet the Y. M. C. A. Intermediates in the gymnasium at 8 o'clock.

The local team is in first-class condition for the game and promise to give a good account of themselves. A large attendance is expected.

THE BASEBALL BUG.

Beyond the sleet—across the snows
He did not see the budding rose
That waved its crimson welcome to
An earth of green—a sky of blue—
Nor yet the daffy daffodils,
That crowned the valleys and the hills—
The apple blossoms, pink and white,
That drifted into lanes of light;
He did not hear the bluebirds sing
Nor yet the south wind whispering
In murmur through the maple trees
That swayed and slanted to the breeze.
And harboured on each bending limb
The maker of a woodland hymn—
And yet, like every living thing,
He, too, had drawn his dream of spring.

He saw a gent. arrayed in blue
Heave boldly in to public view,
And in a fog-horn tenor call
To thousands—'Batter up—play ball!'
He saw a tall guy nod and beck
And then cut one around the neck,
While in a trance the slugger there
Inanely paddled at the air;
He saw the shortstop leave his place
And flag one back of second base
And wing it swiftly on ahead
To where the dashing runner sped;
He saw, before his flashing eye,
The keen outfielder fenceward fly
And with an effort pull
The drive down with the bases full!

He heard once more the rooters call—
The ringing clash of bat and ball—
The cry of "Belt it on the snout—
Don't try to bunt there; whale it out!"
The groans and curses—cheers and jeers—
Like music tickled in his ears
The grand stand rocked and roared in strife—
The howling bleachers leaped to life.
As whooping, jeering, shouting, cheering,
Praying, cursing, pleading, fearing,
Stamping, howling, smiling, growling,
Laughing, weeping, snarling scowling.
Over city, field and glen
The Bugland Chorus rang again,
For he, like every other thing,
Had drawn his dream of golden spring.

SET FIRE TO DRAPERY

St. George Beach, Que. — While a "wake" was being held in the home of Jean Du Lac over the body of his son' yesterday, the candles set fire to the funeral draperies and spread so rapidly that the people in the house narrowly escaped with their lives. The corpse was consumed in spite of the efforts made to remove it.

Had Weak Kidney For Two Years.

Doctor Failed to Help. Doan's Kidney Pills Cured Him.

Mr. Edmund Assels, New Carlisle, Que., writes:—"I feel it my duty to let you know of the great cure I have obtained by using Doan's Kidney Pills. I was troubled with my kidneys for two years. I tried a doctor, but he failed to help me. I read in the B.B.B. Almanac about Doan's Kidney Pills, and began using them, and after the first box began to feel better. I only used four boxes and they completely cured me. I am very thankful to have found so speedy a cure, and would advise everyone suffering from kidney disease to try them."

Perhaps no other organs work harder than the kidneys to preserve the general health of the body and most people are troubled with some kind of Kidney Complaint, but do not suspect it. It may have been in the system for some time. There may have been backache, swelling of the feet and ankles, disturbances of the urinary organs, such as brick dust deposit in the urine, highly colored, scanty or cloudy urine, bladder pains, frequent or suppressed urination, burning sensation when urinating, etc.

Do not neglect any of these symptoms, for, if neglected they will eventually lead to Bright's Disease, Dropsy and Diabetes.

Price 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto.

In ordering specify "Doan's."

THE HEART A GREAT WORKER

What a wonder is the heart! Day and night it works away pumping tons of blood through the body and never tires or wears out so long as it is supplied with rich, red blood, such as is formed by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. While sending supplies of nutrition to other parts of the body the heart renews and rebuilds its own wasted cells and so retains health and strength.

ARMOURY NOTES

A Garrison Signalling Class was organized at the armouries on Thursday night of last week by Sergt. Major J. R. McGowan, W.O., of the signalling staff, Kingston. Owing to the holiday event the attendance was not as large as might have been expected. Any one wishing to join is asked to report at the armouries not later than eight o'clock to-night. There will be a six-weeks' course in signallings on evenings that may be determined on as most convenient for the members of the class.
